At the Palace, "Lilac Time" with Colleen Moore and Gary Cooper proceeded to hang up a record for that theatre and every matinee and evening performance accounted for a capacity house with more waiting to see the show. The show was very heavily billed and proved pleasing to the patrons although a number of comments were heard about the picture being draggy in spots and with the action scenes split up.

"Hit Of The Show" with Joe E. Brown and Gertrude Olmstead brought the Majestic a good week, although the totals for the week were not large. George Broadhurst headed the Interstate vaudeville bill which accounted for a good percentage of the business. The picture shown was the non-synchronized picture although there is a synchronized print.

At the Melba, "The First Kiss" with Fay Wray and Gary Cooper turned in a good attendance for the seven day run, although business was off from the week before which was expected. Movietone News and Vitaphone shorts completed the well balanced and pleasing program.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin' the Universal Super-Special with Margarita Fischer, Edmund Carew, James B. Low, Mona Ray and Virginia Grey brought the Capitol capacity business and proved to be the best liked picture for the past week. The matinees checked off a full house each day and the evening performances during which the Capitol's new 20 piece orchestra was in action were capacity plus.

The Old Mill's attendance was off for the week with "The Crystal Cup" starring Dorothy Mackail and Jack Mulhall, and "Out of the Ruins" with Richard Barthelmess and Marian Nixon. This was no doubt due to the exceptionally strong competition of the other first run houses.

At the Arcadia "the Heart of a Follies Girl" featuring Billie Dove, "The Cossacks" with John Gilbert and Renee Adoree and "The Enemy" with Lillian Gish and Ralph Forbes turned in good receipts for the week.

Dallas

(Previous Week)

BUSINESS at the Dallas first run theatres has been exceptionally good the past week although the weather has been hot and only fair business was expected. Good pictures with sound publicity behind them and attractive lobbies secured the business and turned in a nice profit for the week.

The Melba offered the outstanding attraction of the week and secured the largest patronage of any of the first run theatres for the week. "Lights of New York" featuring Cullen Landis and Helene Costello, a Warner Bros. all talkie was the attraction and more than proved that Dallas at least is extremely interested in synchronized pictures. The broadcasting of the talking sequence of the picture over a local radio station proved more than a good idea. Movietone News and three Vitaphone shorts completed the program. Business for the week was big and from indications at the last showing a continued good business could have been done for several days.

"The Escape" starring William Russell and Virginia Valli, at the Majestic accounted for good business for the seven day run and pleased the patrons. A Movietone News Special giving Al Smith in his acceptance speech was played up in the publicity and accounted for a good share of business. An Interstate vaudeville bill with one exceptional number completed the program.

At the Palace, "Four Walls" with John Gilbert and Joan Crawford, checked off a good week although receipts were not big. Business at the Palace has held up exceptionally well for the past several weeks and each week accounted for a nice profit which is exceptionally good considering the extremely hot weather just passed.

"The Port of Missing Girls," with Barbara Bedford and Malcom McGregor, at the Capitol brought an increase in the attendance over that of last week. Business was much better than the business of the past few weeks although receipts were only fairly good.

At the Old Mill "Under the Black Eagle," featuring Marceline Day, Ralph Forbes, and Flash, turned in only fair receipts. The Old Mill has been keeping up a fair average throughout the summer with no big business accounted for.

"Happiness Ahead," with Colleen Moore, "Across the Atlantic," with Monte Blue, and "The Noose" starring Richard Barthelmess, brought good totals for the week at the Arcadia.

St. Louis, Mo.

JOHN BARRYMORE in "The Tempest," a sound picture, played to excellent business at Loew's State Theatre, Washington avenue at Eighth street, the week ending on August 31, proving once more that after all the picture is the thing that counts most in motion picture theatres.

Out at the Missouri Theare, Grand boulevard and Lucas avenue, Richard Barthelmess held forth in "Out of the Ruins" and it is understood the engagement was most satisfactory. Dick has quite a following in St. Louis.

The St. Louis Theatre, Grand and Delmar boulevards had a very good week with Laura La Plante in "Home, James."

Down-town at Skouras Brothers Ambassador Eddie Lowry put on an anniversary celebration all his own and attracted very large crowds throughout the week. For that reason the actual drawing powers of "Across the Atlantic" could not be guaged accurately. It is fair at best.

Tampa

ANOTHER big week for the "talkies," with "The Street Angel," synchronized, four Vitaphone acts and the Movietone News. Through the fact that the show ran a full two and a half hours, which cut the usual five shows daily down to four, the Victory gate was not as large as usual but the business was big.

"Four Walls" gave the Tampa one of the largest Sunday's business of the summer, but the draw did not hold up the following three days, which were just about average. "The First Kiss" was the featured attraction the last half and it kept business up to average.

The Franklin with the big features brought back for a second showing at a two-bit price, continues to draw very good business. They had a good line-up this week with "What Price Glory," "The Latest from Paris" and "The Noose."

With all the real drawing cards in the other houses the Strand suffered again this week and business registered just fair. The pictures featured were: "A Grain of Dust," "None but the Brave" and "The Daredevil's Reward."

Portland, Ore.

GREATER MOVIE SEASON is now at its height and all houses report increased interest in their offerings, and in consequence increased attendance is the rule, especially among the first run houses. The extra effort, house co-operation and advertising have certainly brought result.

Manager Walter Tebbetts is much elated over the reception accorded "Uncle Tom's Cabin" during the first two days Saturday and Sunday 19,652 saw the great classic in this atmospheric playhouse, and it promises to be here for a long and successful run. Jean Hersholt and Marian Nixon gave a finished screen production in "Jazz Mad" which was full of pathos and drama. "Anchors Aweigh" was shown through the courtesy of the United States navy. Joseph Sampietro and Columbia orchestra played selections from "Show Boat." These stellar attractions brought out an increased attendance at "The Columbia."

Joe Roberts and his banjo was the major attractions at Pantages, and he received a warm welcome. Charles Morton and Sally Phipps took the leads in "None But the Brave" screen attraction, and were the chief reason for big attendance throughout the week.

Manager Norman of The Blue Mouse reports interest unabated in the "Lights of New York," and prospects are it will be continued here for the seventh week.

Janet Gaynor and George O'Brien in the hands of Murnau make the screen production "Sunrise" a classic, and titles are hardly needed. At practically every evening performance seats were at a premium, and in consequence "The Broadway" hit a high record in attendance figures. Georgie Stoll and orchestra staged a Spanish burlseque. In the movietone reel Al Smith's acceptance speech received a hand from some of his adherents.

Albany

LAST week was a rather tough one from the standpoint of business in the motion picture theatres of Albany and Troy. In the first place it was far too hot for any one to visit the theatres, and in the next place every one got out of town on Friday or Saturday, and remained away for over the week end. But the greater part of the loss in patronage, must unquestionably be laid to the weather. There may come a time when the theatres in these two cities will install some sort of a refrigerating system that will cool their houses more than at present, but that time has not yet arrived.

The Mark Strand did what was termed a fairly good business with Richard Dix in "Warming Up," but after several hundred had left the theatre wiping their brows on Wednesday night, others decided that the "warming up" process on the part of Dix was not to be emulated on an August night at any motion picture theatre. There were a couple of Vitaphone selections along with the feature.

The Mark Ritz had a good picture in "Loves of an Actress," but the house was stifling hot and did a fair business. The same might be said to be true of the Leland with "None but the Brave."

People refused to flock to the Clinton Square in any great numbers to see "Come to My House" and "Broadway Daddies." Proctor's Grand used "His Tiger Lady" along with a program of vaudeville. Residential houses reported business as only fair. If the hot weather keeps up, many of the managers are planning to use their bigger attractions later in the fall.

In Troy, The Troy theatre ran "Glorious Betsy" for a week to fairly good business, all things considered, including the weatherman. The Lincoln ran "Out of the Ruins" to fair business, while residential houses were inclined to be pessimistic.

Cleveland

THE downtown houses were kept busy all week, with "Lilac Time" way in the lead. This was the only sound picture on carte du jour, and broke a twelve-year record at the Stillman. Neighborhood houses report busines conspicuously slow in getting started.

"Lilac Time" a great audience picture, broke all previous records at the Stillman. Extra morning matinees were introduced during the second week of the engagement and were kept up until the close. This picture made eminently satisfactory entertainment for the public, which, in turn, supported it to the capacity of the theatre.

"The Night Watch," interesting mystery drama, attracted good business at the Allen, although it established no new records.

"Her Cardboard Lover" played to big audiences at the State. However, great local interest in the home-made Our Gang comedy was responsible for some of the business. The picture was well liked by those who like comedy.

"The Wright Idea," clever comedy drama, pleased greatly at the Palace where it played to the usual big audiences. Good gags, strongly knit together with a theme of general interest, made this picture worth seeing.

"Doomsday" was just fairly successful at Keith's East 105th St. The choice between love and luxury is old for a scenario theme. It's too sentimental for the present day sophisticates.

"News Parade," shown at Keith's East 105th the last half of the week, was very successful. The story of a news camera man, the action, and the development, were all appealing. Good picture with a big pull.

The Park scored two successes last week, first with "Warming Up" shown the first half of the week, and again with "Forgotten Faces, the last half of the week. Both pictures were playing their first run neighborhood engagements.

Baltimore

HOT weather during the first four days of the week beginning Monday, August 27, pulled receipts down considerably at some of the first-run houses, but with a rainstorm on Thursday evening the temperature was cooled and during the last three and a half days business picked up considerably.

Large crowds were drawn to Loew's Century where "The First Kiss," co-starring Fay Wray and Gary Cooper, made on the Eastern shore of Maryland, particularly at St. Michaels, was shown. On the same bill, a stage presentation act entitled Bitter Sweet Blues was given also headed by Ted Claire and other vaudeville favorites. Business was excellent during the entire week.

"Street Angel," the sound, song and musi- fourth week at the New Theatre with fine fourth week at the New Theatre with ne business and still had them standing on Friday and Saturday. So far as could be seen, this picture could have remained another week successfully at the New.

"Warming Up," the first sound and musical synchronized Paramount production starring Richard Dix, was the offering at the Stanley, and the attendance throughout the week was good. The sound effects in this picture heightened the interests considerably but the talking of the principals was missed.

"If I Were Single," co-starring May McAvoy and Conrad Nagel, was the attraction at the Rivoli theatre for the first five days of the week and the attendance for this musical and sound synchronized picture was excellent. Then on Saturday, September 1st, the Rivoli and Metropolitan opened with "Lights of New York," the all-talking picture co-starring Helene Costello and Cullen Landis. The opening at each playhouse was very large. The Metropolitan has been closed for several weeks and has been entirely redecorated and refurnished.

The German made production of "Manon Lescaut," featuring Lya De Putti, was shown at the Little Theatre by the Motion Picture Guild, but business was only fair throughout the first four days, and then patronage was fine at this 250 seat house. The weather was blamed for the poor business rather than the picture which was considered good.

"The Man Who Laughs" went through the week at the Auditorium, a legitimate house, at 50 cents top afternoons and $1 top nights, but business was not very good. Right next door was the Stanley offering a sound synchronized film with orchestra and organ for 60 cents top at night.

"Say It With Sables," featuring Helene Chadwick and Francis X. Bushman, former Baltimorean, with Margaret Livingston, did a less than fair business at the Keith-Albee Hippodrome with five acts of Keith-Albee family time vaudeville on the same bill.

"No Other Woman," featuring Dolores Del Rio, was the feature film attraction at the Keith-Albee New Garden with the Jay C. Flippen Frolics offered on the program. Attendance was fairly good until Friday and Saturday when it took a boost and wound up excellently.

"Beau Broadway," starring Aileen Pringle and Lew Cody, proved a poor business getter at Loews's Valencia, where a non-synchronous device furnishes the music.

San Francisco

THE past week at the local motion picture theatres, was considered a good one due partly to the advertisements to attend the "Greater Movie Week," and also because of cloudy weather, that kept thousands from the beach, and the opening of school. The first run large down-town theatres did exceptionally well, with two exceptions.

Loew's Warfield Theatre was crowded the entire week. Here was shown "Excess Baggage" and Haines, the star, drew well and pleased all. Fanchon & Marco's presentation, "A Trip to Mars" drew much applause. Eddie Peabody, who took Rube Wolf's place while he was on a trip, was not well consider ed by the audience. Colleen Moore drew very well at the Granada Theatre, where she appeared in "Oh Kay." The Publix Revue, "Rio Romance," helped fill that theatre .

The El Capitan was crowded all week with the picture, "Ladies of the Night Club" and the Embassy reported excellent business with the picture, "Lights of New York," which was shown for a fifth week. This is a Vitaphone theatre. "The End of St. Petersburg," shown at the St. Francis Theatre for a second week, did not draw many and was a failure.

The Union Square Theatre reported good business with "Upland Rider," which was shown together with vaudeville. The Golden Gate Theatre reported but fair with "A Ship Comes In," which also was shown with vaudeville. Much better business would have been evidenced had not this week kept the children at school, as the "Gang Kids" appeared here in person.

In the residential districts, the Alexandria reported good business with "A Night of Mystery," as Menjou is always popular here. "One-Round Hogan," together with "Variety Ideas" on the stage at the Coliseum, drew crowds, although many stated this picture was not as good as contemplated.

Each Monday night this house is crowded as people come to see whether their "number," which entitles them to a Bank of Italy share, has been drawn. If lucky enough to be there, the one whose number is drawn receives an extra $50. Numbers are drawn in front of the public. All is legitimate.

Seattle

AFTER about two weeks of decidedly improved busines, grosses for the past seven days dropped down a bit, due to warmer weather and attractions that were only moderately strong. First in the running last week came the Seattle Theatre, with "Excess Baggage" on the screen and Fanchon-Marco's "Collegiate Idea" on the stage. The film was very well liked by every one, but the stage fare was a little weak. Business for the run was about average.

At the Fifth Avenue Theatre, "Warming Up" was the screen attraction, and it was not very successful as a "Greater Movie" attraction. Audiences were not particularly impressed with the film, and the sound sequences were not strong enough to sell it, particularly when the synchronization was noticeably faked and imperfect. Hermie King was the Band score. Business below normal.

"Glorious Betsy" in its third week at Hamrick's Music Box continued to play to big audiences, and nightly lines attested to the drawing power of the film at this new house. One more week is scheduled.

Across the street at Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre "State Street Sadie" finished its week to very good business.

"Grip of the Yukon at the Columbia was a moderately good attraction only, and did not score any big success. Most of the house's advertising went to advance "King of Kings" for the following week. Business just fair. The same might be said of "The Hawk's Nest" at the United Artists Theatre. This house next week will go back to its former name, "Coliseum Theatre," continuing its 25c policy of program attractions.

"French Dressing" was a moderately strong attraction at the Embassy Theatre, as was also "The Red Mark" at the Orpheum, in conjunction with a vaudeville bill headed by Lowell Sherman. Business is on the increase at this house, with the recently-adopted reserved seat policy.

"The Foreign Legion„ at Pantages was a strong attraction for this house and played to very nice business for the entire engagement.

Salt Lake City

SOME very optomistic theatre reports have been received this week from the Salt Lake downtown first run houses. The bracing early fall weather is here making the evenings cool and delightful and aiding in theatre patronage.

The Capitol Theatre offering last week consisted of Colleen Moore in "Oh Kay," based on the popular musical comedy by that name, and also Fanchon & Marcos "Bathtub Idea," featuring "Sweet William" and "Bad Bill," national blackfaced comedians and the San Francisco Beauties, in dance numbers, and also Lucille Paige, the Gilmartin quadruplets and Maxine and Bo Peep, song and dance specialty girls. Very good attendance was enjoyed throughout the week.

The Pantages Theatre has had a very satisfactory week with their picture presentation of Marion Davis in "Her Cardboard Lover" in conjunction with the regular vaudeville performance.

"The Sawdust Paradise" was well received by good-sized houses at the Paramount Empress, it is reported.

"Bitter Apples" was the picture presentation at the American Theatre this week and this large house was crowded to its utmost but a great deal of this attendance was due to the interest taken by local folks in the "Country Store" being featured here, which is the means of many and valuable prizes being presented to a large number.

Actionful Arabian Romance of Thrills

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

HERE is a real thrilling tale of Arabia with its sheiks and harems, so interspersed with intrigue, villainy, rescues, romance and action as to leave one almost bewildered at its conclusion. There is scarcely a moment during the unwinding of the plot that one does not wonder just what is going to happen next and what is to be the outcome of the following sequence. The setting, as is customary in these desert dramas, is beautiful and the photography an attraction in itself.

Barry Norton, the mother's boy in "What Price Glory" has the hero role in this production and to his credit it must be said he acquits himself creditably. In fact he gives a splendid portrayal of a somewhat difficult role. He is the under-age son of the sheik of the Roualla tribe and in his exploits he falls in love with Thurya, a beautiful dancing girl. His father decrees, however, that she shall go to another. So the young couple make their escape and are launched on a new series of adventures, as a result of which the youth is about to be beheaded, when he is saved by the sound of the dreaded war signal.

All of this romance and intrigue is brought about by "The Simoon," a full-blooded Arabian horse, pride and envy of all Arabia, which in fleeing his enemy, mankind, is attacked by a lion and saved by the always-handy young Jaafor. Had the latter realized all the trouble this was going to bring him he might have hesitated, though in the end the results justified it all.

Drawing Power: Should go well in houses where they like action and thrills. Exploitation Angles: Play up Sheik angles and desert intrigue; the desert storm and the heroic rescues.

THEME: Romantic drama of the desert in which youth undergoes many thrilling adventures to win the girl he loves.

Produced and distributed by Fox. Length, 4,939 feet. Released, June 24, 1928. Cast: Barry Norton, Dorothy Janis, Ben Bard, Robert Kortman, Erville Alderson, James Anderson, Blanche Friderica. Director, Lambert Hillyer. Story by Lambert Hillyer and Elizabeth Pickett.

The Cop

Strong Underworld Melodrama

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

BILL BOYD has a splendid vehicle in this cop and crook story by Elliott Clawson, adapted for the screen by Tay Garnett. It is of the type of "Broadway," "The Racket" and others that have had a Broadway vogue, and it fairly abounds in action and suspense. Boyd as the rookie cop has a very sympathetic role and one that should add materially to his already large following.

It is the "racket" story of a band of crooks, whose leader Boyd has befriended before he became a member of the force and while he was jack-knife bridge tender on the East River. His kindness is repaid by the crook departing with the Boyd bankroll after the healing of a gunshot wound in the shoulder.

Boyd quits his job as bridge tender on the urging of Sergeant Coughlin, and becomes a member of the force detailed to run down Scarface Marcas. As "Smithie," the rookie cop, he has a number of thrilling experiences and the suspense is heightened by the fact that he is continuously trying to protect the girl who has fallen into the clutches of Scarface.

The various roles are very well enacted, with the star at his best as the cop. He is ably assisted by Jacqueline Logan as the girl "bookkeeper" for the crook gang, Robert Armstrong as Scarface Marcas and Tom Kennedy as Sergeant Marcas. The picture is exceptionally well directed. It is of the type whose melodramatic sequences might easily have been overacted, but there is no fault to be found in this direction. The climaxes are worked up naturally, with the holdup of the armored car and the killing of "Scarface" splendidly executed. It's a good picture.

Drawing Power: It is a story that has all the necessary elements for box-office appeal and it should be as popular with the first runs as the neighborhood houses. Exploitation Angles: The crook element seems to have a wide appeal at present; the holdup of the armored car; the battle on the East River bridge.

THEME: Melodrama in which rookie cop is detailed to run down crook leader, whom he previously has befriended and who robbed him of his bankroll. The cop succeeds, kills the crook and rescues the girl who had been in the latter's power.

Produced by Ralph Block for De Mille Pictures Corp. Distributed by Pathe. Length, 7054 feet. Released, August 19, 1928. The Cast: William Boyd, Jacqueline Logan, Robert Armstrong, Tom Kennedy, Louis Natheaux, Phil Sleeman. Director, Donald Crisp. Story by Elliott Clawson. Screen play by Tay Garnett.

"Speed and Spurs"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

JUST another Western in the Universal series of featurettes starring Bob Curwood, and that is about all that may be said for the release. The story is just as good as those of its predecessors, with the performance of the star being made passable, by the assistance of a capable supporting cast. A good background of snappy outdoor action, that is ever present in these films, again proves a life saver in this one. Withal this type of film finds a ready market.

The story revolves around a disputed ranch property that will go into the hands of the girl, Helen White, if the heir, Bob Jackson, does not return within a week. Bob shows up incognito, in time to rescue Helen when her team of horses run away. Made foreman of the ranch by the girl, Bob cleverly foils a scheme of a crooked lawyer to acquire the property, reveals his real identity, and claims both the ranch and the girl.

The Red Mark

Powerful Story, Well Done

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

A POWERFUL story, though not a pretty one, is unfolded in this James Cruze production. It is gruesome in spots but rises to several dramatic climaxes that sustain the interest throughout. The difficult roles are exceptionally well enacted, particularly by Gaston Glass as Bibi-Ri, the young convict lover, and Gustav Von Seyffertitz as De Nou, the cruel executioner. Nena Quartaro will win a lot of sympathy as the girl who is loved by the convict and the executioner, though there is room for improvement in her acting.

The story has a tremendous climax, which affords Von Seyffertitz one of the greatest opportunities of his career and he delivers a masterful performance, when as the executioner he recognizes the condemned man on the guillotine as his own son, whom he has persecuted to a death sentence.

The tale is an unusual one and because of that is particularly appealing. It is laid on the penal island of Noumea, where the convicts are dominated by De Nou, cruel and hated. The latter's son disappeared mysteriously as a baby when the wife died. The boy becomes an expert pickpocket and as he is about to be released falls in love with Zelie, niece of Mother Carron, a lifetermer suspected of aiding in several escapes from the island.

The cruel De Nou also wants the girl for his wife and so orders it. He persecutes the young convict, who is compelled to do murder as De Nou and his retinue enter for the marriage ceremony with the girl. De Nou decrees that the youth shall die on the guillotine block. He is about to be executed when in baring his neck, De Nou discovers the red mark which reveals him as his own son. De Nou's powerful will is broken. He falteringly attempts to embrace the boy, who, upon learning that this is his father, expresses a preference for death. He is pardoned, however, and with De Nou's reign broken, marries the girl.

Drawing Power: It is an unusual story and a well acted one that should have a good response at the box-office. Exploitation angles: The unusual life on the convict island; the situation of the father executing his own son; the good cast and the splendid acting.

THEME: Melodrama of an executioner who unknowingly persecutes his own son because the latter is in love with the girl he would have as his own wife. He discovers his error when the youth is on the guillotine block, collapses at the discovery, the boy is pardoned and weds the girl.

Produced by James Cruze, Inc.; distributed by Pathe. Length, 7,937 feet. Released, August 26, 1928. The Cast: Nena Quartarto, Gaston Glass, Gustav Van Seyffertitz, Rose Dione, Luke Cosgrove, Eugene Pallette, Jack Roper, Charles Dervis. Director, James Cruze. Story by John Russell. Adaptation and continuity by Julien Josephson.

Her Cardboard Lover

Star Has Hokum Comedy—Should Do Well

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A STAGE comedy which wasn't so much as a laugh-getter has been converted into celluloid with fair results. Evidently realizing that he hadn't a hot story to work with, the director has relied upon hokum and gags. Judging from the laughs at the New York Capitol he hasn't erred, though several of the gags have seen service since the first slapstick.

Marion Davies doesn't use any restraint here. A first rate mimic, she goes further than mimicry to indulge in slapstick and didoes. She is the cut-up for fair—even going so far as to execute some gags which border on the pie-throwing samples.

Some changes have been made with the original. Here the heroine plays a naive girl touring Paris. She is an autograph collector—with a yen for falling in love with the champion tennis player of France. It is her object to lure him away from the clutches of a vamp. And she succeeds after a series of scenes which always terminate in a gag. It isn't up to some of the star's other pictures. But it has been given a neat production, and moves at good speed throughout. The supporting cast is O. K. Nils Asther as the hero, gives a neat account of himself, and Jetta Goudal, playing the vamp, lets you know that she is—Jetta Goudal. The Davies imitation of her is a wow. Taken as a mild story built for the laughs it should please most of the boys and girls.

Drawing Power: Star has following. Also Nils Asther. Feature both. Bill as comedy of rich laughs, etc. Exploitation Angles: Billed heavily and playing up cast and gags should put it over. For all types of houses.

THEME: Comedy-romance of unsophisticated girl who lures youth away from vamp.

Produced by Cosmopolitan. Distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Length, seven reels. Released, September, 1928. The Cast: Marion Davies, Nils Asther, Jetta Goudal, Pepi Lederer, Tenen Holtz, Andres de Segurola. Director, Robt. Z. Leonard.

The Gay Adventurer

A Fair Attraction

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THIS foreign importation, starring an athletic chap by the name of Charles Alden, cannot be termed a strong attraction because of the comparative newness of its stellar player, who is an unknown quantity insofar as American audiences are concerned.

What are the picture's good points? First of all it has plenty of stunts and these are appreciated everywhere and do not know the boundaries of nations. Secondly, it has a fairly good story, which, even though it does a lot of twisting and turning before reaching its consummation, is nevertheless filled with some unexpected situations and a few individual trends of plot. Thirdly, as it deals with Alaska and has melodrama, fights, escapades and other entertaining fare it can be considered a passable proposition.

But counterbalancing these virtues are many faults. For one thing, there are too many indications in the cast and in the atmosphere that betray the picture's foreign origin. Often it is very unconvincing and wavers noticeably. Audiences acquainted with the usual American picture will consider this nil, in the opinion of this reviewer. The old s. a. is not so strong in its scenes and for quite a bit of its length it echoes the halcyon serial days.

We do not think that the average picture-goer in the U. S. will regard it as anything more than a passable adventure film from across the sea.

Drawing Power: For neighborhood houses. Exploitation Angles: Play up the stunts and the action. Ballyhoo the star.

THEME: Action drama. Son of wealthy home strikes out by himself to make his fortune and meets with love and adventure on the way.

Distributed by ABA Film Corp. (S. R.). Length, 6,400 feet.

"A Dumb Waiter"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

WELCOME a new comedian, Johnny Burke by name, and the newest protege of Mack Sennett. This fellow presents a dumb characterization, only "dumb" is too weak a word to convey his proper state of mind. However, Mr. Burke clicks and as he is provided with some excellent laugh material in this two-reeler, he and everyone else ought to be satisfied.

This is the first of a new series of Sennett films bearing the general heading of "Handy Andy" comedies. It starts off with Johnny unwittingly obtaining a snapshot of husky Vernon Dent with two girl companions. Later Johnny gets a position as waiter and it is his misfortune to spoil Dent's appearance while juggling catsup and other things. Finally, he arouses Dent to a fury but, luckily, escapes

Later, while delivering an assignment to a nearby apartment, Johnny discovers that he is in Dent's own home. Dent throttles him upon every opportunity when his wife is not present. However, Johnny holds some balance of power when he reveals his tale-telling snapshots. Dent does his best to get them, but his wife sees the evidence of her husband's philanderings and a family riot ensues.

It is better comedy than its telling would indicate, and Burke, Dent and Helen Jerome Eddy, as the wife, all do good work.

"Pathe Review No. 36"

(Pathe—One Reel)

ONE of the finest Pathe Reviews seen to date is issue No. 36, which presents as its highlight the sequence "War Machine," produced in co-operation with the United States Department of War. Impressive scenes are shown of battle maneuvers on land, sea and in the air, during both day and night. Beverly Jones made a corking good job of the assembling of the action, which was excellently photographed. Other subjects in this issue are "Domestic Secrets of the Eider Duck" and "Viewpoint," a dance novelty. The ability of the new Review editor, Terry Ramsaye, to make highly interesting films out of what have ordinarily been fair educational reels, is thoroughly emphasized in this release.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"A Fair Affair"

(Pathe Sportlight—One Reel)

A SUBJECT that will be welcomed on any program in both the big city and small town alike is this Grantland Rice Sportlight produced by John L. Hawkinson. In a highly entertaining manner the film introduces annual fair day in any rural community. The frills and thrills of the "big show," have made the Fair one of our oldest institutions, and for this reason a film of this kind of event should prove popular.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"Wife Trouble"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is a fast-moving and quite effective mirth-producer. Robert Graves is starred with Muriel Evans, Amber Norman and Adrienne Dore—all stunning girls—appearing in support. Wallace McDonald, erstwhile actor, is responsible for the direction and it can be said right off the bat that his work is good and that this comedy, like others of the Cameo brand, is laughable.

Much of the fun consists of Graves' efforts to hide a lingerie sales-woman from his inquisitive wife. Inasmuch as the saleswoman is charmingly arrayed in diaphanous under garments, Graves is anxious to remove her from the scene. In desperation, he hides her on a fire escape where she is exposed to the gaze of admiring male pedestrians. The traffic cop in the locality, going upstairs to investigate the matter, finds that the saleswoman is his wife. So Graves is caught between Scylla and Charybdis, or two fires — one an angry wife and the other an equally angry husband who is all the more menacing because he is vested with the authority of the law.

Okay as laugh filler.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Girlies Behave"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

JERRY DREW has another good laugh number in this, his second Ideal comedy on the New Educational program.

He is again cast as the well-dressed, easy-going chap with an intense liking for pretty girls. There are lots of them in this particular comedy, enlivening the scenes and offering a pleasant background for Drew's cut-ups.

Christina Montt, a Chilean girl, appears as leading lady, with Robert Graves and the late Henry Murdock as the chief support. Altogether, they have an enjoyable time.

Drew works as a clerk in a hotel and with a great deal of inquisitiveness he gently intrudes into a party going on in one of the rooms. A plentiful batch of gags are unearthed and the comedy, in general, keeps progressing steadily. You can readily classify it as a good laugh number for your program.

With the praiseworthy standard that these Ideal comedies give evidence of, it is a sure thing that this new Educational series will increase in popularity with each new release.

"Pathe Review No. 38"

(Pathe—One Reel)

SOME pretty shots of New York under the caption of "When Summer Comes to New York" are to be had in this new Review. The photography is excellent. In a novelty filmed by R. E. Saeki, Pathe Review cameraman in the Orient, scenes are revealed of famous Japanese roosters. These birds are cultivated for their amazingly long tails. The Boston bean then undergoes an interview with the microscopic and the Review winds up with some interesting views of some of America's oldest buildings—the college of William and Mary and the famous church erected by the colonists at Williamsburg.

This offering contains plenty of entertaining matter.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Covering Ground"

(Pathe—One Reel)

GRANTLAND RICE points out that the main objective of sport is to cover ground. He emphasizes his theme with appropriate extracts from competitions on the track, gridiron, ocean and race speedway. Action, action—there's lots of it in this Sportlight, which is well up to the high standard of this praiseworthy series and of interest to almost any type of spectator.

Fine program material. — RAYMOND GANLY.

State Street Sadie

Melodrama Makes First Rate Talkie
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

SOMETHING to be recommended in the talkie line is on view with this number. Taking the cue that dialogue carries a sting when accompanying crook stories, Warner Brothers have proved they're on the right track. The best recommendation, however, comes from the excellent restraint of the dialogue. Instead of the plain and fancy bellowing which marked some earlier efforts, the voices are really subdued, with the result that the plot carries more "kick" and suspense and the characters seem more genuine. If this experiment can be carried on (and there's no reason why it shouldn't) the talkies will be accepted everywhere.

Not so much fuss can be made over the story. It has its obvious and artificial moments, but at least tells its story in a straightforward manner with incidents and sequences well dovetailed together. It revolves around a twin seeking to avenge the death of his brother. The latter had "taken himself for a ride" when he learned he was framed for the murder of a cop. A love interest adds sentimental relief. The acting is first rate as turned in by Conrad Nagel, William Russell (William, where have you been?) and Myrna Loy.

Drawing Power: Title and talkie film. For all houses. Exploitation Angles: Stress the talkie film billing as best of its kind. Play up cast. Tease the title.

THEME: Crook melodrama of a twin avenging his brother's death.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers. Length, seven reels. Released, September, 1928. The Cast: Conrad Nagel, William Russell, Myrna Loy, Georgie Stone, Pat Hartigan. Director, Archie Mayo.

Name the Woman

Intensely Dramatic But Illogical
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

HERE is an intensely gripping story that holds the interest throughout, particularly if you can forget the fact that at times in its unwinding it becomes almost entirely illogical. However, it is splendid entertainment and of the type that is generally approved by the majority of screen followers.

It is a murder tale with most of the action built around the trial for murder of a youth who is depending upon the testimony of the prosecutor's masked wife for his freedom. The woman is unknown to those in the courtroom, including her husband, until she reveals her identity in a note to the judge, and then, implausible as it might seem, there is a general agreement on the part of all concerned, that the defendant be dismissed. Of course, he had not committed the crime in the first place, the wife of the prosecutor had been most indiscreet, and the prosecutor himself, relented because in his political ambition he had neglected his wife.

But despite some of these apparent weaknesses of plot there is no doubt the picture will hold the interest of the less critical. It moves along at a good pace and it builds up to its climaxes nicely. Erle C. Kenton directed and he made a good job of it. The cast, too, does some splendid work, particularly Gaston Glass as Joe Arnold, accused of the murder; Huntly Gordon as the prosecuting attorney, and Anita Stewart as the wife of the prosecuting attorney. The others do well in comparatively small rol s. All in all it is a picture that should be popular in almost any type of house.

Drawing Power: It is a popular type of picture and should be a good box-office bet. Exploitation Angles: A controversy over the justification of the neglected wife seeking her own pleasure; the courtroom climax; the good work of the cast.

THEME: Melodrama in which youth accused of murder wins freedom when masked wife of prosecuting attorney reveals her identity and convinces all of his innocence.

Produced and distributed by Columbia Pictures. Length, 5,514 feet. Released, May 25, 1928. The Cast: Anita Stewart, Huntly Gordon, Gaston Glass, Chappell Dossett, Julanne Johnston, Jed Prouty.

Produced by Harry Cohn. Directed by Erle C. Kenton. Story by Erle C. Kenton. Adaptation by Elmer Harris. Scenario by Peter Milne.

The Water Hole

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

JACK HOLT, the demon location man is at it again—on location. Which is to be expected considering the source of his newest story. Since Zane Grey wrote it one can expect the author to find his great open spaces, and stay in them to the bitter end.

The plot is like all Grey plots in that it features a big he-man from the West whose job is to keep in character by refusing to capitulate to the charms of a sweet young thing. In fact he kidnaps her and makes her come to terms, but not until she gives him the run around. The girl differs from the usual Grey heroine. She is not the usual orthodox creature. It may be that the director seized his chance to put some "kick" into the action by stressing the shrewish designs of the girl.

No one can make a fuss over the story. It is old stuff, but it has likeable qualities, due to the backgrounds, the comedy, and the performances of Jack Holt, Nancy Carroll and John Boles. As a result it should do pretty good business.

Drawing Power: Title and star and Nancy Carroll. Suitable for average trade. Author has following, too. Exploitation Angles: Stress author's popularity. Feature Holt as an actor who always comes through in good colors. Title has personality.

THEME: Romantic drama on "taming of the shrew" pattern with Western he-man doing his stuff.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Length, six reels. Released, September, 1928. The Cast: Jack Holt, Nancy Carroll, John Boles, Montague Shaw, Ann Christy, Jack Perrin, Jack Mower, Paul Ralli, Lydia Yeamans Titus.

Director, Richard Jones.

"Sunday on the Farm"
(Pathe—One Reel)

POOR old Al Falfa is subjected to another day of torment while loafing through the Sabbath on his farm. The mischievous mice and recalcitrant cats subject him to a whirl of humiliations, pelting him with eggs, blowing him up and what not. After their moments of hilarity, all the animals join in a jigging contest and, of course, it all ends with poor old Al being pursued down the road by a horde of beasts.

As laugh material, this Aesop is only fair.—RAYMOND GANLY.

The Air Circus

Tuned to Click at the Box Office
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

HERE'S a rollicking piece of entertainment—mainly entertainment of the form which has found its finest medium in the motion picture, though there is a Movietone accompaniment of music, with "effects" in counterpoint to it and one nicely handled dialogue sequence.

"The Air Circus" will be at its best at the regular motion picture theatres, though as presented at the Gaiety in New York with a program of Movietone short subjects it appears to have everything to give it a creditable run as a two-a-day attraction—a factor which will enhance its value to the regular picture houses.

It is the "action picture" at its best—a story built around likeable characters and that fair-haired boy of the machine age—the aeroplane. Its comedy is of that infectious sort which reaches out and takes the spectator, while the sentimental interludes have an appeal that carry them direct to the hearts of young and old. The flying school becomes the scene of many thrilling stunts in aviation. It is the sort of play that keeps the spectator smiling and in a happy mood even when there is being enacted sentimental drama of certain appeal to the emotions.

Arthur Lake in one of his characteristic performances plays a smart-aleck to perfection and he will add to the measure of his standing as a popular personality through his work as Speed Doolittle. Sue Carol is appealing as the flapper and David Rollins plays most capably in the role of the youth who develops air fright at the school. Louise Dresser gives an outstanding performance in a mother role, and the other members of the cast are very effective.

The sound feature as handled here is undoubtedly a factor, giving added strength to the picture, particularly in introducing authentic noises to accompany the close-ups of the flying stunts, and as a stimulating piece of variety in the well handled dialogue sequence. However, "Air Circus" seems every bit a "sure fire" offering without the sound. The story is broad in its appeal on the sentimental as well as the humorous side, and the aviation is both interesting and stirring. In other words, it is the opinion of this reviewer that "Air Circus" would have won a prominent place for itself even if it had come along before there was any Movietone.

Drawing Power: Seemingly very excellent for every type of house. Exploitation Angles: Feature as a stiring story of youth and the age of aviation set off with peppy comedy, young love and appealing drama—with the talking sequence and sound effects strongly ballyhooed if presented with Movietone.

THEME: Story of two boys who go to aviation school where one, whose brother was a great flyer in France, loses his nerve after a crash, but wins back his own confidence and the respect of his fellows when danger threatens his pal.

Produced and Distributed by Fox Film Corporation. Running Time: One hour and twenty minutes. Cast: Louise Dresser, David Rollins, Arthur Lake, Sue Carol, Chas. Delaney, Heinie Conklin, Earl Robinson. Directed by Howard Hawks and Lew Seiler. Story by Graham Baker and Andrew Bennison.

Minneapolis

THE ad department of the Finkelstein and Ruben firm is now issuing its own press books and paper for talking pictures. No film company puts out any paper on this new development in motion picture business, and it has become necessary for the F. & R. company to put out enough material to take care of all the houses on the circuit.

On his return from New York, Ralph Branton, general manager of the Minneapolis F. and R. theatres, has been spending a week at Mackinac Island.

The cyclone which struck Austin, Minn., recently, completely wrecked the F. and R. Park Theatre. No lives were lost in the theatre, but it was stated by the company that the building was a total loss with small salvage possible. As soon as insurance matters have been adjusted and plans drawn up a new theatre will be erected at a cost of $100,000. The State Theatre, also operated by F. and R., lost its roof in the storm, but was able to reopen within a few days. All receipts from the State for the first three days were turned over to the Austin Red Cross as part of the fund being raised to rehabilitate the city and care for the injured. The Eagle Theatre was not damaged by the storm.

The sales staff of Celebrated added to its force C. C. Teorey, film salesman, who is covering the South Dakota territory.

The new Rapid City, S. D., Theatre, which seats 800 people, will be ready for use about the first of October.

The new theatre at Monticello, Minn., is nearing completion.

New management will reopen the Grand Theatre at Chisholm, Minn., some time this month.

Vitaphone equipment has been installed in the Grand, a second-run loop theatre, and "The Jazz Singer" will open there next week.

Construction work has been started on the new $80,000 theatre at Ely, Minn. The house will be completed about the middle of December, it is expected.

Pete Picerelli of the Star Theatre at Barrington, R. I., was a visitor to Film Row at Boston during the week.

Indianapolis

CIRCLE theatre observed its twelfth anniversary jubilee this week with a special program. Dick Powell, master of ceremonies, presented a special stage band program preliminary to his "Farewell Week' presentation next week. Skouras-Publix will abandon the stage band policy at Circle the following week and start synchronized pictures. Vitaphone starts Sept. 15.

Ed Reisner, circle conductor, will augment the pit orchestra at the Indiana Theatre, also a Publix house, adding orchestrations.

It is believed Powell will start an engagement soon at the Indiana Ballroom. Dessa Byrd, Circle organist, will continue.

Charlie Davis was greeted by a parade headed by city officials when he returned from his vacation. Charlie has resumed his appearances at the Indiana with his stage band following two weeks rest.

Emil Seidel, former master of ceremonies at the Palace, has left on a vacation following a long engagement at the Loew's House.

Keith's is expected to open this fall but it has not been decided whether continuous or big time vaudeville will be presented in Indianapolis.

The Indiana at Marion, Ind., will be wrecked within thirty days to make way for the new $156,000 house to be built by the Fourth Ave. Amusement Company of Louisville. The Fourth Avenue company which operates nineteen houses in Indiana and Kentucky recently purchased the Indiana from the Marion Theatre Company.

The new house is expected to be ready Jan. 1 and will seat 1200. D. X. Murphy of Indianapolis is the architect. The lease to the Louisville interests was effective Sept. 1, according to Manager Billy Connors of Marion.

Des Moines

THE Capitol Theatre at Cedar Rapids, the newest of the Publix houses of the Blank-Publix chain, had its opening on September 1, in advance of the date that it was expected that the theatre could be ready for the public to enter its doors. The management of the house has been assigned to E. R. Cummings, who has been at the Fort Armstrong at Davenport and at the Columbia there. Mr. Cummings has had charge of the stage shows at the Riveria at Waterloo and at the Columbia at Davenport since the inauguration of the Publix shows at these houses. Among those who drove down for the opening were Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Copeland and William Curry and his best girl from the Paramount office at which Mr. Copeland is manager and Mr. Curry, booker. They will also visit Waterloo. Dorothy Day, who does publicity for the independent houses of the A. H. Blank chain in Iowa, was also there and a number of the branch managers as well as executives of the A. H. Blank Publix office.

FBO again entertained a large delegation of visitors at the film exchanges when they registered on their list of exhibitors in Des Moines the last week the following: Leo Moore of the Majestic at Centerville, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Johnson of the Atlantic at Atlantic, who are booking pictures for later in the season, when their theatre will again be open after being closed for a period for redecoration on a larger scale; F. M. Hoet of the Princess at Montezuma, M. R. Tournier of the Star at Mason City, J. E. Forsman of the Strand at Jewell, L. F. Wolcott of the Princess at Eldora, J. E. Michael of the Strand at Jefferson, C. M. Hutchison of the Crown at Truro, L. E. Robertson of the Gem at Lohrville, J. E. Edwards of the Princess at Cherdan, and Joe Benjamin Gerbracht of the Ames Amusement Company at Ames.

Rose Kaplan, secretary to Jimmy Wynn, manager for Educational, is still convalescing at her home after an automobile accident.

W. E. Banford returned to Des Moines and the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer office, of which he is branch manager, after a fine vacation spent in New York.

Wolcott and Wallace of Eagle Grove were visitors at the Paramount office. Mrs. Conner, who has been the exhibitor at Milton for some time, made one of her rare visits to film row and called at the Paramount exchange.

Everyone at the film exchanges had an afternoon off to attend the State Fair. Westy, booker at Metro-Goldwin-Mayer, was one of the ones who really went.

Wedding bells—and the groom is one well known along film row. Pearl Stansell, head shipper for Paramount, was married on September 1. His bride was formerly Miss Frances Gilbert of Osceola.

H. P. Wolfberg, district manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, called at the Des Moines office last week.

The King Theatre at Ida Grove in which some changes were made early this spring will be closed for a short time for further changes.

Anniversary week was celebrated at the Empire Theatre at Storm Lake, of which Jack Liercke is manager.

Paul Spor, who went from the Des Moines Publix Show, of which he was personality man in Des Moines for about six months, to the Omaha show at the Riveria, left August 31 for another Publix house.

M. J. McGinnis, who has for the past three years been manager of the Terrace Park Casino at Spencer, Iowa, has recently accepted the position of manager of the President Theatre at Des Moines. William C. Walsh has been appointed by Mr. McGinnis as house manager of the new President Theatre, which will open about September 1.

Cincinnati

A BURGLAR who had secreted himself in the basement of the Bijou theatre, Cincinnati, apparently for the purpose of attacking the safe after the house closed, was discovered by John Gallagher, an employee of the theatre. In the encounter which followed, Gallagher was struck on the head and rendered unconscious, the robber escaping with $25 taken from his victim.

Jack Pendleton, manager of Cincinnati office of Standard Film Service Co., is recovering nicely at the Atlas hospital, Louisville, Ky., in which city he was recently stricken with appendicitis, and an emergency operation performed. S. P. Gorrell, until recently manager of the Cincinnati office, is pinch-hitting for Pendleton.

Bill Clark, publicity director of the Libson theatres, has returned to his office in Cincinnati after a fortnight vacation spent in the Cumberland mountains.

Loew's Broad theatre, Columbus, was slightly damaged by fire which originated in the projection booth. There was no indication of a panic, according to Manager Thomas Ealand.

The Broad and Ohio theatres, Columbus, both Loew houses recently opened, inaugurated their initial sound programs last week.

Damage to the extent of $500 resulted from a recent explosion of a film in the projection room of the Majestic theatre, Fostoria, which house is managed by Mrs. Mildred Chenderlin.

Eddie Richardson, who started his theatrical career as usher at the Victory theatre, Dayton, Ohio, subsequently serving as doorman and treasurer, respectively, and later as assistant manager of Loew's Dayton, and in a similar capacity at the Loew houses in Columbus, has been made manager of the Loew State theatre, a new house opening at Louisville, Ky.

Your correspondent, while in Mansfield, Ohio, recently spent a pleasant hour with George J. Riester, who a few months ago took over the managerial duties of the Ohio theatre, a unit of the Variety Amusement Co. chain. Among other improvements recently inaugurated by Riester, is a greatly enlarged orchestra for which Jan Shelley, of the musical forces of the Capitol theatre, Miami, Florida, has been secured as conductor. Larry Jean Fisher, an organist from Texas, who has been playing at the Ohio since July 29 as guest musician, will remain with the house, through a satisfactory agreement recently reached between Riester and the local union.

Worthington, a suburb of Columbus, Ohio, is to have a new theatre to be located on the main street of the town. The Hollywood Amusement Co., is sponsoring the project.

Manager Griff. Granger, of the Kaypee theatre, Mt. Gilead, Ohio's smallest first-run house, recently won the everlasting praise of the citizens by displaying stills of many local persons. Most of the pictures were snapped without the knowledge of the subject.

Canada

MANAGER GEORGE ROTSKY of the Palace Theatre, Montreal, had the honor of giving the first regular performance with sound pictures in Canada when the Palace re-opened September 1 as a wired house after being closed for a month for stage and other improvements.

The so-called moving picture season got under way in Canada without the semblance of labor difficulties. During the summer the projection machine operators of Toronto and other centres had been granted holidays with pay but, otherwise, the situation was similar to last year.

Further, no sound picture problem is expected in Canada, such as has developed in the United States. It has been pointed out in labor circles in Toronto that the sound picture issue will have been fought and settled in the United States before the same situation arises in the Dominion. Then the solution found in the States would probably be followed in the Dominion.

An interesting event took place at the Runneymede Theatre, Toronto, a new house of Famous Players Canadian Corp., on August 28 when the first public presentation of "Carry On, Sergeant" occurred. This is the feature produced at the Ontario Government studio at Trenton, Ontario, by Canadian International Films, Limited, with which Col. W. F. Clarke and Capt. Bruce Bairnsfather are identified.

There is no immediate worry in Canada with the sound picture question because not more than 10 theatres will be wired before the end of 1928 and it will be two years, it is stated, before all theatres get desired installations. The apparent attitude of the musicians in Canadian theatres is to let the future take care of itself.

A. Culp of the Red Apple Theatre in Omak; R. Gould of Cle Elum; Ed Halberg of Port Angeles; Ed Zabel of Olympia; and "Chuck" Charles and C. A. Swanson of the Everett Amusement Company in Everett.

James Beale, manager of the Tiffany-Stahl exchange, last week announced the appointment of Johnny Smythe as sales representative.

Cleveland

THE Stillman Theatre will not close on Sept. 8th, as previously announced. Assistant Manager William Haynes has given out the statement that because of the phenomenal success of "Lilac Time," now going into its third week, the house will be kept open not only for a prolonged engagement of this picture, but possibly for other pictures as well. "Lilac Time" has broken the Stillman record, previously held by "The Big Parade."

Another announcement of interest is that the Hippodrome will open sometime in October and will then be equipped to play sound pictures. Rumor has had it variously that the Hippodrome would remain closed this season, and that it would play long run sound pictures. The picture policy of the house has not been stated as yet, but it is definitely known that Phonotone installation is now being made. The Palace is also being wired for Phonotone equipment.

San Francisco

RUBE WOLF, popular orchestra leader of Loew's Warfield, has returned to that house after a trip to Southern California.

After being closed for twelve weeks, the California reopened August 31st for the fall and winter season, West Coast officials have announced. The pictures will be shown for at least two weeks, as previously was done. The pictures will have Movietone accompaniments. At present, with the St. Francis using mechanical orchestration, the orchestra is used only 40 minutes a day.

Warfield patrons who sat from 12 to 1 on August 18th watching the saddest of custard pie comedies unwind reel after reel, probably thought the big palace of the cinema had suddenly gone to seed. Through an error, the films of "Excess Baggage" had been sent to San Jose from Los Angeles Friday night. They arrived here at 2 o'clock or thereabouts, after frantic telephoning and equally frantic driving from San Jose. The Warfield management announced it lost $1,000 in admissions through the unwillingness of patrons to wait for the film to arrive.

Amicable settlement of the theatres fire protection problem appeared in prospect when two meetings between officials and theatre men were arranged to discuss the situation.

Both were scheduled at the behest of theatre operators, after Fire Chief Murphy had made public charges that thirty-five small show houses were operating without the the protection equipment required by law.

The meetings later were postponed for the distant future.

Through an error it was reported that James Carrier, at present manager of the Capitol Theatre, Atlanta, Ga., was to be transferred to that post.

New York & New Jersey

AN important event in Brooklyn theatre circles occured last Friday evening, August 31, when the mammoth and ultra-expensive Fox theatre at Flatbush Avenue and Nevins Streets, Brooklyn, opened its doors for the first time to an eager and palpitating public.

The magnificent house, seating 5,000, is the third largest motion picture palace in New York and the largest in Brooklyn Borough. An indication of the changes wrought by the passing years is the fact that the theatre is only a few blocks away from the site of William Fox's first motion picture house—a nickleodeon which he operated in 1903.

There were thousands on hand to see the new house the night it made its debut to the public. The occasion was one requiring the presence of celebrities in private and official life. Borough President Byrne of Brooklyn voiced a welcome by means of the movietone and this little item on the program will be repeated during the week's program. "The Street Angel," the Fox special production, was the feature film for the premiere.

The Fox lobby is in verde and sienna marble. The columns are done in gilt and the interior is in Spanish baroque style. C. Howard Crane was the architect. Altogether, four floors of the theatre building are occupied by the amusement palace. The nearest rivals in the field of movie entertainment to the new Fox house in Brooklyn are the E. F. Albee, seating 3,241; Loew's Metropolitan, seating 3,570; and the Mark Strand, seating 3,500.

The kind of business every exhibitor wishes and hopes for is now being enjoyed by Fox Ridgewood Theatre, Ridgewood, Brooklyn, a talkie house. The programs are made up of Vitaphone and Movietone subjects and thriving crowds respond to them. The fact was strongly in evidence one night last week when police were called out to handle the eager crowds. Long lines of people in the evenings show their interest in the programs of the flourishing Fox house and ofttimes can be seen spread along the length of the neighboring block.

Harry J. Kusel, formerly assistant manager of Loew's Manor Theatre, has been appointed manager of the State Theatre in Ozone Park, Brooklyn, belonging to the Schmuckler Circuit.

Sally Siegel, of the Fox Films publicity force at the home office in New York City, last week captured the Fox 1928 women's tennis title, defeating Laura Deneau in straight sets, 7—5: 6—3. Sixteen girls in the New York office participated in the tournament, which was conducted under the auspices of the Fox Athletic Club.

Several units of the United Artists producing forces have moved to the fourth floor of 729 and are now housed there under the general company name of Art Cinema Corporation.

The Lincoln Theatre, Newark, closed during the summer months, opened Tuesday of this week.

The State Theatre, Elizabeth, opened on Labor Day after having been closed during the summer.

The Daytona Theatre, 165th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, opens on Wednesday, September 5th. It has been closed for the last six months.

Fanny Lightstone has re-opened her Apollo Theatre, 747 East 180th Street. The house opened last Friday, August 31.

E. J. Regan, manager of the Lincoln Theatre, West 135th Street, City, succeeds Mr. Murphy as manager of the house.

Harry Harris opened his West End Theatre on 125th Street, New York City, with a new policy on September 3rd. Tabloid musical revues and pictures, 2 changes per week constitute the new policy.

Loew's is changing the name of the Loew Universal Theatre to the Loew's 46th Street. The re-opening and change of name of this theatre are to take place the tenth of September. The Loew's 46th Street is located at New Utrecht in Brooklyn.

Edward Smith, of Sieder Molloy's Office along Film Row, was last week presented with a 7-pound baby boy. This happy event occurred on August 4 and, needless to say, Mr. Smith is now wearing his best smile. The newcomer has been named David Frederick.

Feld Han, manager of Loew's Cameo Theatre, Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, is now back at his desk after a vacation.

Another erstwhile vacationer now back again on the grind is Julius Celler, general manager of the Schmuckler Circuit of Brooklyn houses.

A. H. Schwartz has opened his Albemarle Theatre, Brooklyn, which was closed for the summer.

The Avalon Theatre, managed by S. Wormser, is also re-opened for the season.

Frank Perrel, owner of the Livonia Theatre in Brooklyn, has resumed the full-week policy for his theatre.

Dan Leary has opened the Malboe Theatre, located in South Jamaica in Brooklyn, which is one of the three houses which this energetic showman has under his management. Dan's other two houses are the Yorkville Hippodrome, on First Avenue in New York City, and the South Ozone Theatre, situated at South Ozone Park, Long Island.

Milwaukee

MADISON is to have a new theatre according to recent announcement in that city. The securities division of the railroad commission has granted permission for the sale of $50,000 stock. Architects are now working on plans for the theatre which is to be of atmospheric type.

Ed. Wiesner is now traveling the southern Wisconsin territory for Fox.

N. J. Blumberg, formerly with Milwaukee theatre circuit, has opened new offices in the Commerce building under name of Parkway Amusement Corporation.

The Peerless theatre, under management of Ed. Olson, opened on the 1st. The house has been closed for some time undergoing re-decoration, the installation of new equipment, a new canopy, and a new coat of paint.

Peter Gottsacker plans to open his new theatre in Sheboygan on September 15th.

Jack Gross, manager of the Venetian at Racine, passed cigars at the Milwaukee Theatre circuit offices to announce his engagement to a young lady from St. Louis.

Construction of the picture house in Bay View which has been started and abandoned at intervals during the past year, is again under way and it now appears that the theatre will be completed.

Gordon Ames has been appointed new manager of the Venetian theatre to succeed Otto Lang who has been transferred to the Riviera. Mr. Lang succeeds Bob Gross who has resigned.

The Vander Vaart theatre at Sheboygan re-opens on the 1st. It was closed for several weeks for extensive remodeling.

Joe Kelly, formerly of Denver, is now traveling the Michigan territory for Celebrated.

Neil Duffy of the Elite theatre at Appleton and Francis Kadow of the Mikado at Manitowoc, were recent visitors to the exchanges.

Philadelphia

THE picnic of the Philadelphia Fraternity of Theatre Organists on Sunday, August 26th, which was spoiled by the rain, will be repeated on Sunday, September 9th. It will again be held at Kline's Farm, Fox Chase, and a number of new features have been arranged, including a fat man's race, a greased pig chase and a baseball game in which each player on the winning team will be presented with a live chicken. A parrot will be the prize in the fat man's race. Many prominent motion picture men with their families are expected to be present.

The Collingswood Theatre, Collingswood, N. J., formerly owned by the Lessy Amusement Company, was taken over on September 3rd by Handel & Rovner.

The State Theatre, Trenton, N. J., has been taken over by George B. Ten Eyck from the former owner, M. Hirshfeld.

It is announced that financing arrangements have been completed for the erection of a $2,000,000 theatre and store building by the Mercantile & Theatre Properties, Inc., on Frankford avenue, between Orthodox and Margaretta streets. The new house, which will be known as The Circle, has been leased for a period of twenty years by the Stanley Company of America. It will contain 3,050 seats.

Carl E. Hecht has purchased the New Theatre, Mifflinburg, Pa., from the former owners, Carlton Theatres, Inc.

Reports that Warner Brothers were negotiating for First National Pictures and that a merger, including the Stanley Company of America, Keith-Albee Circuit and FBO Pictures, caused Stanley stock to leap six points on the Stock Exchange. Lack of confirmation of the rumor, however, caused the gain to be lost.

Netoco Strengthening Position in New England Field

FOLLOWING its purchase of the theatres at Portland, Me., formerly owned by Leon P. Gorman, the New England Theatres Operating Corporation announces the appointment of Mr. Gorman as district manager of the theatres already owned and to be acquired in that state. Lester Davis, known from coast to coast, long associated with Publix and of late manager of the Fields Corner Theatre of the Publix chain, has been appointed manager of the new Maine Theatre at Portland.

Netoco, as the New England company's circuit is known, will rush the new State to completion. It will seat about 2500. Vitaphone and Movietone are being installed and there will be a large organ, orchestra and orchestra platform which may be raised or lowered. The stage is sufficiently large for presentations.

The theatre is in Spanish style architecture and the decorations will be under the personal direction of Netoco's president, Samuel Pinanski, the 32-year-old head of the $25,000,000 chain.

The theatre is marked by spacious lobby and foyer, mezzanine and balcony.

Arrangements have been made with the Portland newspapers to secure the news flashes direct from editorial rooms over a special wire.

The other Portland theatre which the company has acquired is the Maine, which seats 1,000.

Netoco has purchased the Elm Circuit from Julius Levenson, the four theatres having a total seating capacity of 3,700. They are the Milford Theatre, seating 1,000, the theatare at North Attleboro seating 900, the Marlboro, seating 1,000 and the house at East Boston seating 800. Movietone and Vitaphone are being installed at the North Attleboro and Milford theatres.

Construction is under way for the Netoco Egyptian Theatre in the Brighton district of Boston. This will be a 2,500 seat theatre, with Movietone and Vitaphone equipment. It is understood that it will be made a first-run theatre.

Netoco has completed a tie-up with the Boston American with direct wires from its news room to the theatres supplying news flashes.

The company has this week enlarged its offices at 19 Milk Street, Boston, to keep pace with its expansion. The entire top floor of the building has been remodelled and half of the floor below has also been acquired. A separate stairway has been constructed within the company's offices connecting the two floors.

Tampa Market Converted Into Novel Theatre

The latest in neighborhood theatres for Tampa is chuck full of novelty. The building itself was built for a market. It covers a large lot about 50 by 130 feet, facing on Nebraska Avenue, and the entire building is of metal. The market failed to click, so the owner, J. C. Wood, decided to make a theatre of it, and how.

He cleaned out the interior and started decorating. The roof was painted to represent the sky, with plenty of fleecy clouds and stars. The braces were all covered with cut-out metal representing tropical palms and vines. Big banana leaves droop from the stanchions which are painted to represent the trees. The effect is striking and gives a real "kick" as you enter.

Everything in the building, except the chairs, is of metal and concrete. There is a stage 12 feet deep and 38 feet wide. The sides can all be raised to permit the evening breeze to sweep through. The front is painted to make a whale of a flash, with the entrance and box office in the center made to represent a chariot, with wheels and everything. On each side of the entrance lobby is a small store.

The ballyhoo feature is a chariot made from a Ford chassis with the touring body turned around for the chariot effect and two large metal horses mounted on each side of the chassis.

Plans Materializing for Theatre at McGill, Nev.

Plans for the new McGill theatre, to be erected by H. A. Stone at McGill, Nevada, have been completed and contracts will probably be let in a few days, it is stated. The building, which will cost approximately $50,000, will be 40 by 110 feet, with a 25-foot ceiling and a seating capacity of 500.

Tapestry brick and stucco panels will be used in the Egyptian style front. The bleacher type of seating, which eliminates a balcony, will be used.

Brick will be used in the construction of the building, which will have a built-up asbestos roof. There will be four large fire escapes of reinforced concrete, and the projecting room will be equipped with the best equipment obtainable, according to announcement. The house will be equipped for the use of Vitaphone, also.

Under the sloping "bleachers" will be the foyer, vestibule, ladies' dressing room, office, paper room, generator room, workroom and store room. There will be a commodious stage, suitable for types of entertainment other than the movies.

Work Inaugurated on New Plattsburgh House

The Plattsburgh Realty Company, of which William Mayette is president, has begun work on a new and strictly modern theatre on the site of the old Plattsburgh Theatre, Plattsburgh, destroyed by fire on the morning of March 17. The new house promises to be one of the finest in northern New York and a worthy successor to the leading house in the training camp town.

Paul Kohner in Paris

Word is received that Paul Kohner, who was appointed to represent Carl Laemmle abroad, has arrived in Paris and has established headquarters. Within the next two weeks Kohner will be on his way to Germany, thence to Russia to confer with various authorities in the interests of the Laemmle products, according to a cablegram received.

Adaptation

Eve Unsell and Elmer Harris are adapting Booth Tarkington's story—"Ramsey Millholland"—for Tiffany-Stahl. The production will be a late fall release.

Shumate Promoted

Harold Shumate has been named associate producer by Sam Sax in connection with Gotham productions and will assume general producing chieftainship not only of Gotham productions, with a generous appropriation to be expended the coming season, but also of Bristolphone, the sound-arm of the Gotham program of the year. Bristolphone has its laboratories in Waterbury, Conn., and operates in association with the Sonora Phonograph Company.

"Mating Call" Premiere

"The Mating Call," the second Thomas Meighan presentation of Howard Hughes, will have its Los Angeles premiere at the Metropolitan Theatre on Sept. 28.

Von Sternberg Signed

Josef von Sternberg is engaged in the direction of "The Case of Lena Smith," with Esther Ralston as "Lena," at the Paramount Studios.

Chas. Delaney Cast

Charles Delaney, who has been making rapid strides to the front of juvenile ranks, has been signed for the heroing part in "Stool Pigeon."

Conrad Nagel in Chief Role

Conrad Nagel will be seen in the leading masculine role of a new Fox production from an original story by Raymond Cannon originally entitled "A Slice of Life," but now changed to "Husbands Are Liars."

The Elder Schildkraut Signed

Rudolph Schildkraut, character actor, has been signed by Fox to portray the role of the blind father of Janet Gaynor in her forthcoming starring production.

Vacationing

Joseph Franklin Poland is taking his first vacation in two years. The supervisor has gone to Catalina for a rest.

"Mammy" Role

Another Jewish "mammy" role awaits Vera Gordon at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, where Hobart Henley is preparing to film "Nize Baby."

Columbia Begins Another

With three of their contemplated ten special productions already completed, Columbia will immediately begin preparations on the fourth, "Redemption."

Pathé Posters on showman street

In street, avenue, highway, alley—in city and in country—on every towering stand where billboards blaze the trail of profitable theatre business—Pathe posters reign supreme. Vital and colorful, alive with snap and pictorial punch, they leap at the public eye—because they are built on lines of powerful showmanship by the industry's greatest showmen. Exhibitors acclaim Pathe's royal place in the lithographic art as one of the chief reasons for the constant, increasing flow of business wherever Pathe pictures are played.

second capacity year

a motion picture about which it is necessary only to state the facts

THE FACTS

¶ "WINGS" opened at the Criterion Theatre, New York, on August 12, 1927, and it is still doing capacity business at $2 admission. Over 11,000 people have bought standing room to see it.

¶ "WINGS" has broken all road show records in the principal cities of the world.

¶ "WINGS" has a marvelous SOUND accompaniment, including symphonic score and spectacular effects of whirring of planes, machine gun duels in the air, etc., etc.

¶ "WINGS" has a cast of stars. Clara Bow, Charles Rogers, Richard Arlen, etc.

¶ PARAMOUNT is cancelling bookings of ten road show companies of "WINGS" lasting through the summer of 1929 to release the production, with SOUND, to motion picture theatres in SEPTEMBER, 1928, when you need it most.

¶ "WINGS" is unquestionably THE GREATEST ATTRACTION IN THE HISTORY OF PICTURES.

I never knew before the capacity of my theatre stop never thought such a gross could be made in a single day stop I cannot remember of another case where so many people turned out for the opening day of any show stop It took Wings to bring forth the above statements and to break all past records of the biggest box-office successes shown up to the present day in my city stop I dare to make the following suggestions to all the de luxe managers of America stop By all means to cancel all presentation acts during the showing of Wings and double their playing time stop And I advise the theatres where Wings has not yet been shown as a road show not to make the terrible mistake of failing to raise their price of admission stop If any manager is skeptical of the above statements I shall be only too glad to assume the risk stop Wings silent or sound will establish unbelievable records congratulations Wings will be held over for another week at my theatre.

GREET 'em

grab 'em, goal 'em and go!

San Francisco, Sept. 4.

Clara Bow in "The Fleet's In" broke the hoodo at the Granada when shattering the week-end house record. Labor Day week-end grossed $18,000, more than many full week grosses at this house.

—Variety

¶ George Marion, Jr., ace of title writers, contributed the headline for this ad. It's just one of his hundred sizzling sayings that help make "THE FLEET'S IN!" the riot that it is. ¶ Clara Bow's best picture, bar none. Worth ten "It's"! Clara's the most popular female star on the screen today. 35,000 fan letters a month, the Hollywood record, proves that—if you need any more proof than your box-office.

¶ First run exhibitors all over the country are booking "THE FLEET'S IN!" for extended runs. Anything else would be a crime to their pocketbooks. It's one of those heaven-sent naturals that mop up a town. ¶ Malcolm St. Clair produced it. James Hall is Clara's sea-going sheik. ¶ Just one more reason the trade is saying that if you haven't got PARAMOUNT you're out in the cold this season!

CLARA BOW "THE Fleet's In"

¶ "The Fleet's In!", "Wings", "The Patriot", "The Wedding March", Anne Nichols' "Abie's Irish Rose", "Docks of New York", "Warming Up", "The First Kiss", "Forgotten Faces"—not four or five big pictures and the rest a blank, but great product week after week makes

"'Lilac Time', WITHOUT SOUND, shattering house records with temperature hundred degrees. Lines half block long waited hour in heat for opening. Unable accommodate crowds. Had to close box-office. House packed—people standing at ten-thirty."—Tom H. Boland, Mgr. Empress, Okla. City.

"Rained here all day yesterday. 'Lilac Time' on second day grossed more than first and grossed more than second day 'Patent Leather Kid'. WITHOUT SYNCHRONIZATION this picture has proven tremendous hit. 'Lilac Time' is the talk of town. Everyone singing and whistling 'Jeannine, I Dream of Lilac Time'." —A. F. Sams, Jr., Mgr. Auditorium, Winston-Salem, N. C.

It SOUNDS great—

"'Lilac Time', WITH SOUND, exceeded our fondest expectations. When doors opened at noon four thousand people were waiting to get in, and from that moment to this it has been capacity. As this wire is written the crowd is packed to the back wall of foyer and you know the space that occupies. Accept our congratulations and opinion that this is best picture First National ever made and as a box-office attraction is a big money getter."—Wm. Epstein, Mgr. Aztec Theatre, San Antonio.

Run of "Lilac Time", WITH SOUND, extended to fourth week at the Stillman, Cleveland, after breaking all records for past 12 years!

Fourth week of "Lilac Time", WITH SOUND, at Roosevelt, Chicago, bigger than third week. Held over for FIFTH WEEK.

The Week's Highlights

Franklin's Guide on Selling Sound to the Public

By William A. Johnston

HAROLD FRANKLIN steps forward with another fine piece of constructive work. . .Such as the industry has come to expect from this exhibition leader. . . His West Coast Theatres have a complete guide on how to sell sound pictures to the public. . . .While a good many people have been running around in circles because of the sound revolution, Franklin keeps his feet on the ground, as usual. . . .And goes right ahead with the main job. . .Selling sound pictures to the people who pay cash money to see them and thus make the whole industry possible. . . .We print in this issue a few highlights of the Franklin 52-page selling guide. . . . .But what we want to point out specifically here is the all-important point of not giving away technical secrets. . . .In his instructions to his West Coast managers, Mr. Franklin says: "People are not interested in knowing why they hear but only in knowing what they hear. . . .There is an illusion and a glamour about talking and synchronization on the screen. . . .Don't take a chance on spoiling it by writing or publishing some technical copy which to many people will merely make synchronization look like another kind of canned music or photographic trick". . . And more, along the same line. . . . .Eminently sane and sensible advice, which the whole industry will do well to heed.

* * * *

There is another important point, among others, which Mr. Franklin brings out. . . . He warns the managers to be careful in their advertising and publicity on the different kinds of sound pictures. . .Improper definition to the public "will cost us money". . .In other words, don't mislead the public into thinking you are going to show a talking picture when you are not. . . .The Franklin Guide on Sound Pictures is, throughout, an excellent and timely work. . . .The sort of thing that truly deserves to be called "constructive". . .

* * * *

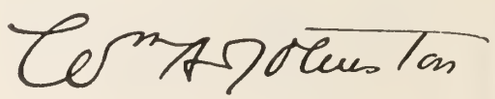
The film stocks are, at this writing, the feature of Wall Street trading. . .Several issues have skyrocketed. . .How long they will stay up, there's no telling. . .The sensational gains shown by Warner have been attributed to that company's premier position in the talkie field plus the Stanley deal, now a reality. . . . There has also been a decided movement in Paramount, Fox, Universal and others, including Stanley. . . .

* * * *

The progressive spirit is a big asset in any industry. . . . .In fact, it is the priceless ingredient. . . .Knowing how to meet the new thing when it comes is indispensable. . . .Life is change. . .There is no standing still. . . We have hitherto spoken of the colossal job confronting Hollywood because of the sound upheaval. . . .Quite a few Hollywood folk are still living in the past. . . ."It will only last a few months", they say. . . . .Which is one of those predictions meaning little or nothing, because nobody knows. . .What everybody should know, however, is that the public is demanding sound pictures. . .Well. then, the job is to supply them, in quality. . . The sooner the better . . . but make them good. . . .Or there will be a terrific kick-back. . . The progressives will lead the way. . . .The others will be dragged along. . .Or pass out of the picture. . .

THE BLUE BOO

THE REASON WHY



THE picture going public, the world over, wants to know the human facts about the people of the screen. When a motion picture celebrity is mobbed in public, it is simply the expression of a great desire to see in the flesh, to question, and hear the voice of one who has existed only as a silent illusion. The quest for this ultimate information is insatiable, as the question and answer man of any photoplay magazine or newspaper department will readily witness. Probably ninety percent of all the printed and word of mouth publicity about the picture world consists of themes and stories about the live personalities of picture people, the people who are in the pictures and the people who make them.

It is the purpose of the Blue Book of Filmdom to give just such information; to place it, in compact reference form, in the hands of photoplay editors and the publicity writers for the picture theatres and producers here and abroad.

The biographies aim to give the most usable information from the newspaperman's knowledge of what his public wants. They are restricted to the personalities of prominence, those about whom the public is inquiring, so that the volume, automatically, is a "Who's Who" of the screen world.

The Book serves also, as did its predecessor, the Studio Directory, as a standard reference book for the casting director. And the latter's interest will be greatly increased because we have added this year a section devoted to those new people of the screen who will be seen and heard in the talking pictures, that new and momentous development which will bring forth new public favorites.

We have also added the prominent producing executives, and the well-known theatre owners of the country; in whose personalities, as the photoplay editor knows, the public is also keenly interested.

A PUBLICITY WHO'S WHO

Biographical Sketch

HAD Colleen Moore followed her family's wishes she might today be a widely famous concert pianist instead of the tremendously popular movie star that she is. Even a course at a musical conservatory failed to alter her decision to become an actress, dating from the age of ten, when she began organizing amateur theatricals among the children of the neighborhood in which she was everything from producer to property "man."

She made her first assault on the film citadel at the old Essanay studio in Chicago, visiting the casting office daily for six months without results. Her uncle, a prominent newspaper editor, offered to use his influence to help her, but she refused, preferring to stand or fall by her own unaided efforts. Then came three days' work at $3.50 a day—$10.50 for the six months—and she began to receive bits.

D. W. Griffith saw her at her uncle's home, and persuaded the family that she had talent, and should be permitted to go to California where her opportunities would be greater.

True to his promise, D. W. Griffith gave her a part, and soon she was appearing in small and featured roles for Vitagraph, Universal, Cosmopolitan, First National, Hodkinson, Goldwyn and other companies—much of it hard, thankless work, but splendid training for the stardom that was to come.

Her consistently, brilliant work brought a contract with First National and the chance to play in "Flaming Youth," which literally "made" her overnight. In a short time she was one of America's leading feminine stars, and established in a distinctive type of role in such outstanding pictures as "The Perfect Flapper," "Flirting With Love," "Sally," the more serious "So Big," "We Moderns," "Irene," and "Ella Cinders." Her most recent productions are "It Must Be Love," "Twinkletoes," "Orchids and Ermine," "Naughty, But Nice, "Her Wild Oat," "Lilac Time," and "Oh!. Kay." Her coming productions include "Synthetic Sin" and "The Richest Girl on Earth."

Miss Moore was born in Port Huron, Mich., but was educated at the Convent of the Holy Name at Tampa, Fla. She has brown hair, and is unique among screen players in that one eye is brown and the other blue. She is five feet and three inches in height. Her husband, John McCormick, is the highly successful producer of her pictures.

Warners Acquire Stanley Co. In $100,000,000 Deal

Official Announcement of Big Merger is Made After Repeated Denials; First National's Identity Not Affected

WARNER BROTHERS this week acquired control of the Stanley Company of America, and are reported negotiating to take over Keith-Albee-Orpheum. Official announcement of the Warner-Stanley deal was made September 12 after repeated denials.

Despite the general understanding that Stanley controls First National, the status of the latter company will not be affected. The pooling arrangement made early in June to block Fox' attempt to take over First National still stands. At that time it was agreed that the identity of First National would be preserved regardless of any theatre deals that might be made by franchise holders.

Warners, at one stroke, become one of the biggest producer-distributor-exhibitors in the industry. Stanley has a chain of 270 theatres, located in the principal cities of the Eastern seaboard.

Assets of the pooled Warner-Stanley interests will amount, it is said, to $100,000,000.

It is also reported that the Warners are seeking a working arrangement with the Shuberts.

Harry M. Warner announced that Class "A" stock of Warners is called for redemption on Dec. 1, 1928.

Prior or upon this date, all holders of Class A stock must turn the same over for redemption or conversion into one share of the common.

H. M. Warner, president of Warners, and Irving D. Rossheim, president of Stanley, state that at the board meetings held Sept. 12 by the Warners and by the Stanley Co. of America, it was agreed that Warners would make the following offer to the stockholders of Stanley:

Warner Bros. to offer to each holder of the common stock of Stanley Co. for 80 per cent of his holdings, one share of a new preferred stock, convertible for two years into Warners common stock, in the ratio of $55 per share for the Stanley stock and $125 per share for the Warner common stock, plus 1/10 of a share of Warner Bros. common. For the remaining 20 per cent of the holdings of each stockholder of Stanley, Warners to pay $57.50 per share in cash. The offer of Warner Bros. is subject to appropriate action of a meeting of Warner stockholders to be called later.

The large stockholders of the Stanley Co. have already agreed to the change on that basis and the offer is being transmitted to all other stockholders with recommendation of the Stanley board that it be accepted The date of acceptance will be announced later.

Negotiations by Warners to take over Keith-Albee-Orpheum are reported in the New York papers. Joseph P. Kennedy, J. J. Murdock and Pat Casey are, however, in Europe.

"Sound" Kills Summer Slump

Key City Reports Show Great Stimulation Among First Run Theatres With Sound Pictures Leading

THE so-called summer slump in attendance among Key City theatres has not by any means been felt as much this season as compared with those past, and this fact must go to the credit of the Sound Pictures. It has not only made money for the theatre fortunate enough to have sound picture equipment but through the public's response has stimulated the box-office of other houses.

After a survey of summer attendance in theatres of the larger cities, as indicated by MOTION PICTURE NEWS' Key City Report department, it becomes strongly evident that Sound Pictures have walked away with the honors for this season. Only those theatres showing pictures with synchronized musical scores, sound effects or talking sequences, made anything really sensational in the way of box office returns with the exception of houses with a few outstanding silent films.

Back in the latter part of May and in June, as stated in the theatre attendance analysis in "The Showman," the monthly section of the NEWS, it was obvious that sound films were getting the breaks. "Tenderloin," "Glorious Betsy" and "The Lion and the Mouse" were mentioned as the important money getters. The Strand theatre, New York City, inaugurating a sound policy in an effort to break a losing streak through being wedged between two of the strongest pulling theatres in town, did the best week in months with "Tenderloin." In Buffalo, the Lafayette also did record business with a two weeks' showing of the same picture for an initial sound program. During the same period the Madison, in Detroit, ran the same picture for six weeks while, the State, in this city, staged a real come-back with an all-talkie program. Marked strength of sound film at this time was also shown at Philadelphia, Tampa, Dallas, Seattle, Albany, Cincinnati, Baltimore, Atlanta and other points.

During the latter part of June and in July, Sound Pictures also stole the box office show, according to "The Showman's" analysis, although in fairness it must be stated that "The Cossacks," a silent film, made just as strong a showing as the best of the sound pictures. "Tenderloin," at the Garden, Milwaukee, was the only picture to get real business the first of the month, while "The Lion and the Mouse" went big at the Metropolitan, Boston, during a week generally bad. This picture also went close to the house record at the Blue Mouse, Portland, Ore., on its opening day, and did capacity during 90 degree weather at the Mark Strand, Albany, N. Y.

The month of August among New York City theatres was one of the best in the history of the industry. House records were shattered in a number of instances, and again it was the sound picture that did the trick. The Roxy, with "Street Angel" for a four weeks' run, took in the almost unbelievable sum of a half million dollars, and with a subsequent three weeks' showing of "Four Sons" stretched the figures up to over three-quarters of a million—unprecedented returns from two motion picture bookings. First National's "Lilac Time" also broke records at the Central, while the combination of Jannings and "The Patriot," with sound, was enough to shatter any previous marks made at the New York Rialto. M-G-M's "White Shadows" was also up among the big money makers.

"Lights of New York" played to three weeks of splendid business at the New York Strand, and "The Lion and the Mouse" set a new high mark for the Blue Mouse, Portland, Ore.; "Glorious Betsy" made them gasp in New Orleans by playing a four weeks' stand at the Tudor, and, in Baltimore, the Rivoli closed after a sustained stretch of poor business, immediately jumped into the limelight by reopening with "State Street Sadie," and has since become classed as one of the town's big money getters. During a hot week in Dallas, "Glorious Betsy" brought the Melba one of its best weeks of the year and receipts have been on the gain ever since the start of the sound program. In the Showman's line-up of the ten best in the period covered by the September report, a sound picture, "Lights of New York," takes first place. The second on the list was Paramount's first sound picture "Warming Up."

A late report from Cleveland states that "if things keep up this will be a record year among local first-run motion picture theatres. The new Sound Pictures are making nothing less than a clean-up. They are setting new records in almost every house."

"The Cameraman"

Reviewed by Edwin Schallert

Editor of The Los Angeles Times Preview and Special Correspondent of Motion Picture News

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 9.—Buster Keaton has "arrived" with a first-class comedy. It's "The Cameraman," marking his return to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. If his stock isn't quite as high as it used to be, this will bring him back with a flourish at the box-office. The film is by far one of the most human he has ever made,—and funnier than anything since "The Navigator," even if not as original, perhaps, in its basic idea as that feature.

The gags are amazingly good. There is cleverness unlimited in some scenes laid in a public swimming pool. These will have audiences laughing from start to finish. One bit that has rare spontaneity is where Buster attempts to disrobe in the same dressing room with another man, the two crowded into a two-by-four compartment trying to remove their clothes simultaneously, and fighting what is virtually a pitched battle while doing it. Buster emerges with the other man's suit on, about ten sizes too large for him. Attempting to make a dive into the plunge later on he loses the suit, and then has to steal the under portion of a stout lady's bathing outfit, to serve as a garment until he can get back to the dressing room.

Not so much reliance is placed on mechanical devices in "The Cameraman" as in the usual Keaton picture. There is good suspense built up out of sympathy for the hero. Buster is an amateur cameraman trying to make his way as a newsreel photographer. He has to battle all sorts of obstacles, and it looks as if he would lose out to the very last minute.

The most thrilling effects are during a Chinatown tong war. This Buster photographs close-up with bullets, hatchets and knives flying. He gets into many a tight place during the conflict, but emerges each time to a burst of laughter. Too, he manages to circumvent the villain of the plot in subsequent scenes, through the aid of a little pet donkey, who is a mighty good actor and who grinds the movie camera while Buster is rescuing the heroine from drowning. The villain claims the honor of saving the girl, but the newsreel shows up his fraud in a pat finish.

"The Cameraman" exploits Buster to great advantage as a comedian, and will undoubtedly add much to his popularity. The girl is played by Marceline Day, and the rather important part of the heavy by Harold Goodwin. Edward Sedgwick directed the picture.

Sunday Show Arguments

Middle West Communities Continue the Debate; Some For, Some Against

THE question whether motion picture theatres shall operate on Sundays is still a much discussed subject in sections of the middle west. A clamping down of the lid has generally followed the expression of strong, public sentiment against Sunday showings in some communities while in others, where the Sunday law has been in effect, exhibitors are again enjoying motion pictures on the Sabbath.

On August 28 the voters of Champaign, Ill., decided that the town shall have Sunday motion picture shows, routing the blue nose element by a large margin.

At a very early date the residents of Champaign will have an opportunity of spending their Sabbath afternoon and evening in a picture theatre if they so desire.

At the election a total of 6,878 votes were cast and 4207 favored Sunday shows and 2404 were against. The vote was almost two to one for Sunday movies. About sixty ballots were thrown out because they were not marked properly.

The movement for Sunday shows was started by the Champaign Chamber of Commerce and also the Fathers Club of the University of Illinois. The Sunday show issue has been defeated in Urbana twice in recent years but the action of Champaign on August 28 probably will lead to another election in Urbana at an early date.

"Ohio Blues" still is the theme song among exhibitors in various sections of the state in connection with the Sunday closing question.

Exhibitors at Ashland, Ohio, through the Ashland Theatre Owners' Association, led by Fred Edwards and Harry Carl, chairman and secretary, respectively, forced a referendum at the recent primary election in an effort to repeal the ordinance which places a ban on Sunday performances. The vote stood 1,539 for, and 2,059 against. Exhibitors thereupon issued an ultimatum that they would cause arrest and prosecution of operators of any business whatsoever which was conducted on Sunday, and definitely notified local merchants to that effect. After several business men advertised that they would remain closed in accordance with the theatre men's edict, the exhibitors made a belated announcement that they would defer their proposed legal action until later.

At Martin's Ferry, Ohio, where the Sunday lid was clamped down on movies, the Mayor has ordered that all other business places must discontinue operation on Sundays, and the order is being obeyed.

Hallock, Minn., a town of about 1,200, is again enjoying motion pictures after being without them for about four months. The new lessee, D. J. Duffy, a former owner of the theatre, seems to be getting a better break with the businessmen than the former owners and has hopes of doing good business.

Something new in legal questions regarding the right to operate motion pictures houses in Iowa territory has been brought up in the controversy in which the theatres of the Ames Amusement Company at Ames, Iowa is engaged. These houses are operated under the management of Joe Benjamin Gerbracht, who has an interest in the houses under the Commonwealth Theatres chain which has its headquarters in Des Moines with Harry Weinberg as manager.

Whether the city council has the right to appoint a new member for the council, after the resignation of one member, has caused much legal discussion. No ordinance has been found which forbids such an action on the part of the council while an ordinance has been found which allows councils in cities to act in such manner. The effort is directed toward establishing that a council in a town of smaller population may act under this same ordinance.

3 "Talkie" Firms Among Albany Incorporations

Companies incorporating in the motion picture business, in its various branches, in New York State, at Albany, during the past week, included the following: Primus Film Corporation, $17,500, Daniel Pompilio, Angelo Salerno, Nicholas Foca, Mt. Vernon; Biophone Disc Pictures Corporation, capitalization not stated, Leo Guzik, Irving Saltsman, Anna Jassy, Brooklyn; General Talking Pictures Corporation, capitalization not stated, Anna Jassy, Brooklyn; Anna E. Lubbe, Ridgewood, L. I.; Louis Zimmerman, New York City; American Sound Film Productions, Inc., capitalization not stated, with these same incorporations as above; Affiliated European Producers, Inc., $5,000, Samuel H. Solomon, Isidor Streicher, Margaret Beyersdorfer, New York City.

Jack Pegler Associated With Hanff-Metzger

A connection with the Hanff-Metzger agency in New York has been accepted by Jack Pegler, advertising and publicity man, who, until recently, was in command over that department for the Poli circuit. He will devote his time to the theatrical division of the advertising agency, which handles the national Paramount advertising schedules as well as the Publix New York theatres schedules.

Franklin's Guide for Selling Sound Pictures To Public

52 Page Bulletin Issued by West Coast Theatres, Inc. Contains Many Advertising Hints and Some Important Don'ts

IN a 52-page bulletin embracing an exhaustive treatise on how to sell sound pictures to the public, West Coast Theatres, Inc., warns managers of that circuit that, of the many different kinds of synchronization, some mean money at the box office and some do not, and that improper definition of the particular type of picture being exploited "will cost us money."

The selling guide, designated as Publicity Bulletin No. 108, was prepared by Jeff Lazarus, advertising and publicity director, under the supervision of Harold B. Franklin, president of the organization.

As a guide to the manager the bulletin divides synchronization into five groups, with the following definitions and recommendations for advertising for each:

Classification of Sound

"TALKING FEATURE PICTURES—This means a feature picture with dialogue; that is a feature in which persons speak and are heard speaking by the audience. Included in this category are such attractions as 'Lights of New York,' 'The Air Circus,' 'The Lion and the Mouse' and 'The Jazz Singer.' Pictures like 'Lights of New York' will have added significance for at least the next six months because they are entirely in dialogue and must be advertised accordingly . . . the best line being: 'A 100 per cent All-Talking Picture.' Pictures like 'The Jazz Singer' have different significance and our advertising must lift out the particular performance or expressions, stressing the fact that the song or the famous dialogue or whatever it is, can 'be seen and heard.'

"2. SOUND PICTURES WITHOUT DIALOGUE, BUT WITH VOICES OF SOME SORT, AND EFFECTS—This includes 'Fazil,' 'Street Angel,' 'Wings' and 'Warming Up.' These include effects such as the machine guns and motors roaring in 'Wings' and the synchronization with voices singing in 'Street Angel.' We must, in all cases like the above, emphasize the sound element but must not advertise them as 'talking pictures'—which is deceptive.

"3. TALKING NEWS—This at present refers only to the Fox Movietone Talking News Weekly, the one News Weekly in which current events can be seen and heard. Advertise it by its full title, getting the two words 'Talking News' most prominent, and the important personalities or events in each reel must be billed heavily with a 'See and Hear' line. The Talking feature gives the news reel a box office importance undreamed of in other days.

"4. TALKING AND SINGING SHORTS—This includes Vitaphone and Movietone subjects such as Raquel Meller singing or Robert Benchley in 'The Treasurer's Report.' Sell them as though you have them in person and never forget that your audience will 'see and hear' the attractions you are talking about.

"5. MUSICAL SYNCHRONIZATION—This is the least important of all categories. It refers merely to those pictures which have a musical score, with music and nothing else. In this case advertising must not claim anything which does not exist in the picture. Over-advertising a mere synchronized musical accompaniment will result in suspicion on the part of the patrons when you have a real talking and singing attraction."

Don't Tell Technical Secrets

The bulletin urges managers to refrain from the selling of the equipment and the

Chicago Musician War Settled

Compromise Agreement Also Reached in St. Louis, Boston and Detroit; Other Points Still in Doubt

AFTER a session which lasted most of a night during the past week a compromise effected between Chicago musicians and motion picture theatre men ended a deadlock which threatened to reach the proportions of a general walkout in all Chicago theatres, stage hands and operators signifying their intention of joining the movement made by the musicians. St. Louis, Boston and Detroit labor troubles are also reported settled.

The terms of the Chicago agreement, as regards houses which have installed sound equipment, call for the employment of four instead of six as had previously been demanded and musicians have also agreed to less than the 36 to 40 weeks employment period, the number of weeks depending upon the individual theatre's requirements.

In St. Louis, Skouras Bros. controlling the Ambassador, Missouri, Grand Central and twenty-seven neighborhood theatres of St. Louis, signed a new agreement with the Musicians Mutual Benefit Association on Sept. 4, settling a controversy over sound installations in a satisfactory manner; effective Sept. 15, the Ambassador and Missouri will increase their top admission charge from 65 cents to 75 cents. Explanation of this is the increased wage scale to practically all concerned with the operation of motion picture theatres and the cost of sound equipment installation.

Steve Butler, business agent for the musicians union, made public announcement of the scale of settlement and praised Charles Skouras, one of the largest employers of organized labor in the district.

The wage controversy between the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, Inc., and the Detroit Motion Picture Machine Operators' Union has been settled, although the operators recently demanded a 10 per cent increase this year and 20 per cent increase next year. The previous scale ran from $44 to $90 a week. Whether the demand was granted without compromise is not generally known, but the dispute has been settled peacefully.

Their demand for a six-day week refused, musicians in San Francisco neighborhood theatres are considering what action to take to enforce their request. The annual agreement between the owners and players expired August 31. However, W. A. Weber, president of the musicians local, announced that the orchestras will continue temporarily under the old terms and that a meeting will be held in the near future to make a final decision upon the demands. A 10 per cent increase in wages, to $53 a week, has been granted by the neighborhood houses to the musicians, but a deadlock remains over the working week. Downtown theatres have the six-day week.

Musicians, stage hands and motion picture operators seeking new contracts have not yet reached any agreement with the Salt Lake Theatres. Increases in pay, shorter hours, more men and a minimum number of men in theatre orchestras are the bones of contention. A walkout Sept. 1 was averted by the theatre managers giving their employees a memorandum to the effect that whatever agreement was ultimately arrived at that it would be retroactive from Sept. 1. To date it has been a case of give and take at the various meetings of the managers and unions with the managers offering a five per cent advance and standing pat.

Latest word from the A. H. Blank offices at Davenport, Iowa, report that labor difficulties are being amicably settled although musicians in the five Blank-Publix houses in Davenport, Rock Island and Moline have been on strike following refusal of the theatre owners to operate a six piece orchestra in one theatre where the Vitaphone has been in us for several weeks.

Laemmle Talks About "Our Industry"

"Good Thing to Squint Eye and Get Truer Perspective On What It's All About," He Says

IN a recent statement concerning the status of the motion picture industry, Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures Corporation, made the following observations:

"Now and then it's a good thing to take stock of ourselves and of the industry. Instead of trying to judge our work by jamming our nose into it, it is better once in a while to stand back, squint an eye and get a truer perspective of what it's all about.

"We hear now and then of someone who is 'sick of the blankety blank movie business'—someone who 'would like to get into a decent line for a change.'

"Well, I know of no other line of business where an equal amount of work and brains will bring better returns.

"Of course, it's hard. It is an industry demanding constant application and a complete disregard of working hours.

"Someone who gets fat on statistics has dug up the fact that the percentage of failures in the moving picture business is less than the length of a gnat's eyelash when compared with that of any other big line of business. Well, how many failures do you know about? Think back.

"Great complaint is made because foreign countries are passing special laws against American pictures. I have never been seriously afraid of such artificial barriers to trade. I am sure the only thing that can give us a severe trouncing in the film markets in the world is better pictures.

"Of course, good stories are hard to find. Nearly everything that goes to make a good picture is hard to find. If they were easy to find everyone could take our jobs away from us in a flash. The best stories are still to be written. The best pictures are still to come.

"Is Public Interest Dying?

"This is one of the pet pieces of nonsense which has worried so many of us. The movies have already gone through tougher tests than they may ever meet again. I believe the radio several years ago gave the movies the hardest blow they ever had. But the exhibitors found that it was only a passing slump.

"Are the 'Talkies' a Curse? Temporarily they are a terrific problem for everybody. No man is wise enough to know whether they are a permanent thing or a passing novelty. But while there is any demand at all for them, we've got to have them. That means you and me and everybody else. The fact that we've got to solve new technical problems is only another hard job, but it is by no means the hardest we have ever had to tackle. One step at a time will take care of us.

"So, suppose we look at the doughnut instead of the hole. Suppose we hitch up our trousers and get ready for the era of additional prosperity which will be ours if we pave the way for it and deserve it."

Sales Instructions Part of Contract

THE Supreme Court of the State of Arkansas recently ruled, in the case of Vitagraph versus Watson, that instructions to salesmen as written in the uniform contract, Code of Ethics, are a part of the contract.

Watson operates the Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark., and alleging that after signing, paying for and playing certain pictures, the distributor broke contract by giving another exhibitor right to play them, he therefore, refused to proceed with the contract and based his case on the part of the Code of Ethics which reads as follows:

"Directions to salesmen. While you have every right to trade among prospective customers to obtain the best offer possible for your products, after you have selected a particular exhibitor whose offer you believe to be the best obtainable and have taken a written application from such exhibitor, forward the application to your exchange and make no further effort to sell the same service to any other exhibitor until the application has been duly rejected, accepted or has been withdrawn in accordance with its terms."

The directions to salesmen became part of the contract, the Court held, and the effect thereof was to rent the particular right to an exhibitor to show the pictures, and it sustained the position of the exhibitor holding the printed form of agreement prepared by the distributor. The only purpose of the direction being printed at the foot of the contract was to convey impression to prospective customers that the particular one selected to exhibit the pictures should have the exclusive right to do so, said the decision. The Court also held that if such were not its purpose, directions to salesmen could have been given privately, either in person or by letter.

National Supply Co. Shows Gain

THE tendency toward business depression which has been generally reported during the past year seems to have had little ill effect on the growth of National Service according to sales figures recently compiled by the National Theatre Supply Company Auditing Department.

These figures show an increase of 18% for the month of July over the sales of the same month last year, August's sales for this company substantially exceeded those of July and ran 23% above those of August, 1927.

It is expected by the company that its sales during the coming year will reach a minimum of two-million dollars in advance of last year's business.

Alex Moss on Vacation; Bradley Joins Columbia

Alex Moss, in charge of advertising for Columbia, and who has just completed the national advertising campaign on the Columbia special, "Submarine," has departed from the Columbia New York office for ten days of vacationing in Canada. Most of the trip will be taken by motor. Returning to New York on September 17, Moss will arrive by way of the Thousand Islands.

George E. Bradley, formerly motion picture editor of "The Morning Telegraph" and later with First National on the West Coast, has been appointed as assistant to Mr. Moss in the publicity department. He will concern himself with publicity matter for the trade, fan and general newspaper magazine.

Opens New Orleans Meet from New York Office

The sales meeting of the southern branch managers of Warner Bros. at New Orleans was opened last week by Sam E. Morris, stationed at the Warner Bros. home office in New York. By means of the long distance telephone, Mr. Morris, who is general manager of distribution and who was prevented from personally attending the meeting by pressure of business, delivered the opening address to the attended sales managers who listened through ear phones.

The meeting was at the Hotel Monteleone and was presided over by C. C. Ezell, southern and western sales manager.

Pathe Has Several Stories in Preparation

While "The Spieler," a story of carnival life, is in mid-production at Pathe's studio at Culver City, several stories on this company's program will enter production any minute.

Final preparations are being made for "Geraldine," for which Melville Brown was signed last week, and "The Shady Lady." The story of "The Noisy Neighbors" is under way, Charles A. Logue is writing "The Flying Fool" and Paul Gangelin is at work on "The Office Scandal."

Paramount Signs New Actor in Robert Castle

Robert Castle, 23-year-old actor, has been engaged by Paramount for a lengthy period to enact the roles of leading man in forthcoming Paramount films. His first role will be opposite Clara Bow in "Three Week Ends."

Peavey, manager, Atlanta; William Coon, manager, Charlotte; P. M. Baker, manager, Memphis; F. L. McNamee, manager, Washington; J. Schaeffer, S. Rosen, H. W. Tyson, S. Perlsweig, S. Palan and O. B. Derr, salesmen at Philadelphia, and R. J. Folliard, G. H. Payne, T. F. Smith and H. Kaha, salesmen at Washington.

"South of Panama" Listed As Next Chesterfield

"South of Panama" will be the title of Chesterfield M. P. Corporation's third 1928-29 release. Lon Young will leave New York for the coast immediately to begin preparation for starting camera work on October 1st.

Arthur Hoerl's treatment of the story has been okayed and it is now being turned into continuity. Erection of sets will be started at once, and casting will be completed upon Mr. Young's arrival in Hollywood.

The production is scheduled to be back in New York by November first.

W. S. Rand Columbia's Branch Chief at Omaha

Walter S. Rand became exchange manager at Omaha for Columbia Pictures this week. He comes to his new affiliation after seven years with United Artists, and with Triangle and Mutual and the old General Films. He is a Cornell graduate and has been in the industry since 1913.

"Companionate Marriage" Acquired by F. N.

A screen production based on incidents in Judge Ben Lindsey's book, "Companionate Marriage," has been acquired for the releasing program of First National and will be issued in October. In the cast of the picture are Betty Bronson, Alec B. Francis, Richard Walling, Hedda Hopper, Edward Martindel, Arthur Rankin and others.

Cruze and Haines Newest M-G-M Combination

Another star-director team is being developed at the studio of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, where James Cruze has directed William Haines in "Excess Baggage" and is now directing the same star in "A Man's Man."

Trade Commission Hearings To Be Resumed During Sept.

THE Federal Trade Commission will resume its probe of the public utility situation and other investigations after September 15 and it is also expected that legal machinery will also begin to move in the suit brought by the commission against Paramount for enforcement of the block booking order. Of the latter, hearings will probably occur in New York City, the suit having been started in the New York Federal Court.

Reason for delay during Summer months is that a great many of company executives, with whom the commission agents wish to confer, are away from their offices.

Fox-Reade Theatre Deal Is Delayed

A LEGAL clash between Walter Reade, head of the Walter Reade Theatre Enterprises, and the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Circuit over the sale of six of the Reade theatres, is holding up the sale of the Reade chain to the Fox interests.

There are about twenty houses mentioned in the proposed deal with Fox and the controversy concerns six in which an interest is alleged to have been turned over to K-A-O on account of vaudeville policies. E. F. Albee, of K-A-O, states that his company had to take over the management of these theatres due to Reade's mismanagement while Reade has entered a petition to the Chancery Court for a receivership to be appointed for the operating company, alleging that a present financial embarrassment experienced by these theatres has been caused by the mismanagement of the K-A-O corporation and that an annual loss of $50,000 has taken place for the past two years.

Fox will gain a strong foothold in New Jersey territory if the Reade deal goes through, and will in turn strengthen, in addition to ownership of the Roxy and neighborhood theatres, his position in New York City through the acquisition of the Astor, Columbia, Bijou and Morosco theatres. This, on the heels of an announced $50,000,000 building program in Philadelphia.

The theatres involved in the Reade-Fox deal, their location and approximate seating capacity are:

Long Branch, N. J.: Mayfair, 2,000; St. James, 2,000; Savoy, 1,100; Rialto, 600; Lyric, 1,000; Broadway, 1,800; Strand, 1,250. Freehold, N. J.: Strand, 1,100. Red Bank, N. J.: Carlton, 1,800. New York: Astor, 1,129; Morosco, 893; Bijou, 605; Columbia, 1,300. Trenton: Capitol, 2,100; Trent, 1,100; Palace, 1,300. Plainfield, N. J.: Plainfield, 1,300; Strand, 1,800; Oxford, 1,700. New Brunswick, N. J.: State, 2,300; Rivoli, 1,800. Kingston, N. Y.: Kingston, 1,800; Broadway, 1,800. Perth Amboy, N. J.: Majestic, 2,300; Strand, 1,300; Crescent, 800, and Ditmas, 900.

Cruiser Crew to See "Submarine"

MORE than 500 officers and men of the U. S. S. Utah, now in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, will be the guests of Joe Brandt, president of Columbia, at a special showing of "Submarine," the Columbia special now showing at the Embassy. The "gob" matinee will occur Wednesday September 19, at 5 P. M. Special busses will bring the guests to the theatre.

Columbia recently held a special showing of their special before high navy officials at Washington, D. C., Jasper E. Brady managing the showing for Columbia. The distinguished audience included Admiral Hughes, chief of the Bureau of Operations; Admiral Leahy, chief of the Bureau of Ordinance; Rear Admiral R. H. Leigh, chief of the Bureau of Navigation; Admiral Stanley, assistant chief of the Bureau of Operations, and Commander A. H. Jones, of the Bureau of Navigation, in charge of all film purchases for the navy.

First National Starting 3 New Features

Three new feature productions, "Changeling," "Ritzy Rosie" and "The Lawless Legion," were scheduled to start this week at the Burbank studio of First National. The first unit is now in Hawaii where some sequences will be made.

The Burbank writing staff is preparing "Synthetic Sin," "Saturday's Children" and "The Comedy of Life" for filming in the immediate future.

M. Manne Chosen Fox Chain Production Chief

Recently resigned as production manager at the Roxy Theatre in New York City, Max Manne has been engaged as production manager for the entire Fox circuit of theatres. Harry Fuchs has been named as his assistant.

Hy Daab Working on a New Stage Play

Hy Daab, advertising manager for FBO, and co-author of "Ringside," the Gene Buck production now running on Broadway, is already working on a new play.

Paramount's Net Profit Is $3,873,627 for Six Months Ended June 30

A COMBINED net profit of $1,609,478.23 for the three months and $3.873.627.19 for the six months ended June 30, after deducting all charges and reserves for Federal income and other taxes, is indicated by Paramount in its consolidated statement. This includes earnings of subsidiary companies.

The six months figures take into consideration Paramount's $111,-060.65 undistributed share of earnings of Balaban & Katz a 65 per cent owned subsidiary. The profits amount to $2.34 per share for the three months and $5.63 for the six months on the common stock of Paramount outstanding.

Enthusiastic Crowd at Golf Tournament

FILM Daily held its fifteenth semi-annual golf tournament on Tuesday, September 11, at the Sound View Golf Club, Great Neck, L. I., and an enthusiastic crowd of about 150 golfers attended the event. Outstanding features were a newsreel of the outing, short and snappy speeches and a match game between the Lambs Club and the M. P. Club of N. Y. Regular Tex Rickard weather prevailed.

Among those present were Thomas Meighan, Tom Moore, Chris Diebel, Gene Sarazen, R. A. Rowland, Rex Beach and Sessue Hayakawa.

The prize sought for by players on the Lambs and M. P. Club teams was the E. F. Albee Challenge Cup, and it was won by the Motion Picture Club, represented by Arthur W. Stebbins, Capt. Tom Moore, Chris. Diebel and William Rabell in the morning round and Ed Curtis in the afternoon round. The Lambs were represented by Oscar Shaw, Capt. Charles Winninger, John Price Jones and Leon Errol.

The newsreel of the day's event was another highlight and the Lambs Club seored a round of applause with Leon Errol and Oscar Shaw with their comedy play.

Al Lichtman started the speech-making and in humorous manner introduced the various speakers. Among these were Al Grey, Rex Beach, Thomas Meighan, R. A. Rowland and others.

The list of names of those who won the various trophies follows:

Low Net (Leg on Film Daily Cup and Stebbins, Leterman & Gates Trophy)—Al Ruben; Low Net Runner-up (J. P. Muller Agency Trophy)—Sumner Taylor; Low Net Runner-up (Jules Brulatour Prize)—A Dickenson; Low Gross (M. P. News Trophy)—Chris Diebel; Low Gross Runner-up (Al Ruben Trophy)—Tom Moore; Second Runner-up (Du Pont Cup)—Artie Stebbins; Low Net Morning Round (National Theatre Supply Trophy)—Wm. Orr; Runner-up (Massce Cup)—John Hamilton; Low Gross Morning Round (Columbia Cup)—Rex Beach; Runner-up (Hedwig Cup)—Jerry Beatty; Low Exhibitor Score (Jules Mastbaum Memorial Trophy)—Henry C. Siegel; Runner-up (Screen Secrets Cup)—H. Schwartz; Putting Trophy (Carl Laemmle Cup)—Fred McConnell; Runner-up (Gotham Prod. Cup)—H. Rust; Driving Trophy (Jack Cosman Cup)—L. Slingerman; Runner-up (Pathe Trophy)—E. Aaron; Birdie (FBO Cup)—Ed. Curtis; Runner-up (Eastman Prize)—Chas Casey.

Flight winners:

C. Swartz, Wm. Johnston, Arthur Dickerson Hardman, Marty Schwartz, Bob Wolf Goodfield, Wm. Massce, Chas. Casey, Stuart Brandon, Dave Mountan, Rudy Cameron, Rex Beach, Jerry Beatty, Arthur Kleesrath, Al Grey, Jean Hornbostel, Wm. K. Hedwig, Sumner Taylor, Arthur Stebbins, C. W. Bunn, Wm. Orr, Fred McConnell, Paul Burger, Fred Mitchell, H. Rust, C. Mackinnon, Chris Diebel, H. Schilt, H. Siegel, Hy Gainsboro, Richard Brady, L. Wingart Madan, Sam Sedran.

M. P. Club Formally Opens

THE Motion Picture Club was formally opened in New York Wednesday night when a dinner was held at the club headquarters, 1560 Broadway. It was a gala occasion, attended by some 200 members and adressed by Will Hays and Mayor Jimmie Walker. Harry Reichenbach acted as toastmaster and introduced the speakers.

The banquet was started with the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" by Miss Stella Powers. First president Al Lichtman explained the purpose and scope of the club and the need that has been recognized for such an institution.

Reichenbach then introduced Nathan Burkan, one of New York's prominent lawyers, who has been identified with the motion picture industry for the past twenty-five years. Bugs Baer, humorist, and Sam Katz, motion picture theatre operator were also introduced and made appropriate remarks.

Mayor Walker, much at home in the motion picture industry, made a witty speech which proved more than pleasing to the large assemblage. An address by Will Hays was equally well received. The speeches were broadcast and at their conclusion the members scattered to the various game rooms and lounges.

The motion picture club is an outgrowth of a need which has been growing in the industry for a center of social life and business contact. It was suggested at one of the semi-annual golf tournaments just a year ago. A group of the foremost figures in the industry organized themselves into a building committee and in one short year of planning, the spendidly equipped clubhouse which was dedicated Wednesday night was brought into full operation.

In and Out of Town

MICHAEL J. GOURLAND, president of the Affiliated European Producers, Inc., is sailing this Saturday, September 15, for a three weeks' visit to Paris, Berlin and Moscow where he will investigate the practicability of importing sound films and German sound devices.

HERBERT BRENON, called suddenly to New York last week because of the illness of his mother, left Tuesday, September 11, for California to complete final sequences for "The Rescue" for U. A. He expects to return to New York in about a month to confer with Fannie Hurst on "Lummox."

E. W. HAMMONS, president of Educational, returned to his desk at the home office last Monday, September 10, following a vacation.

FRANK BATES, European representative for Richmount Pictures, Inc., arrived on Tuesday, September 4, on the Ile de France bringing with him to the Richmount home office a print of the French film, "Verdun."

SAM TAYLOR, U. A. director, left New York for Hollywood Saturday afternoon, September 8. Before his departure he was guest of honor at a luncheon given him by home office executives.

HARRY D. BUCKLEY, vice-president of United Artists, left New York on Friday, September 6, for a visit of three weeks to his company's Hollywood studio and a tour of the western U. A. branches.

AL ROCKETT, who is in complete charge of all studio activities at the First National Burbank plant, left Los Angeles last Friday for New York City for conferences.

GUS J. SCHAEFER, general sales manager of the Paramount Central Europe organization, with headquarters at Berlin, has arrived in New York for a visit at the Paramount home office with friends and relatives.

BENJAMIN WARNER, father of H. M., Albert and J. L. Warner, arrived in New York last week from California bringing with him the first print of "The Singing Fool."

Samuel Spring Resigns from First National

SAMUEL SPRING has resigned as vice-president and treasurer of First National, to return to the general practice of law, with offices at the Bar Building, 36 West 44th St. The board of directors, in accepting Mr. Spring's resignation, passed the following resolution:

RESOLVED: That the Board, learning of the desire of Samuel Spring to return to the practice of law, accepts, with reluctance and regret, his resignation as vice-president and treasurer, and extends to him its appreciation of the valuable services he has performed during his association with First National Pictures, Inc.

Mr. Warren C. Boothby, Financial Comptroller of the Corporation, was elected as treasurer to succeed Mr. Spring.

News and Comment on All Phases of "Sound" Pictures

Franklin's Guide on Sound Pictures

West Coast Chief Outlines Methods of Selling to Public

technical engineering values of either the taking of synchronized pictures, or the reproduction of them. Owing to the questions which many exhibitors have addressed to this publication on the advisability of telling the public about the technical phase of sound pictures, we quote below the argument set forth in the West Coast bulletin on this subject.

"People are not interested in knowing why they hear but only in knowing what they hear.

"Men who have spent weeks studying synchronization, are still far from a complete knowledge of the subject. Hence, you can't educate your public into synchronization in one ad or a series of ads or a few stories.

"There is an illusion and a glamour about talking and synchronization on the screen. Don't take a chance on spoiling it by writing or publishing some technical copy which to many people will merely make synchronization look like another kind of canned music or phonographic trick.

"Don't in other words go behind the scenes and show your people that Santa Claus is really a young man who clerks in the bank during the day.

"Consider this: do you yet understand the technique of synchronized equipment? Can you keep your people engrossed in such a dry subject long enough to teach them if you do, or can you hope to teach it to them at all if you don't?

"Hence this explicit advice: Don't in any way ever attempt to describe technically anything about synchronization."

Inaugurating Sound Policy

Regarding the inauguration of a "sound policy" the bulletin advises managers to handle the campaign just as they would the opening of a new theatre or an Anniversary celebration. That is to ask for newspaper, merchant, transportation line and other cooperation. "Beginning with the definite plan that all copy must sell the 'talkies' first, with Movietone or Vitaphone (or both) next in importance, you must seek out as many channels as you can find and use them to get that message over," the bulletin continues.

A long list of "catchlines" featuring the see and hear line in various forms and combinations are provided in the pages of this treatise. The campaign outline suggested for the inaugural program recommends the following:

How to Exploit

Four to six weeks teaser campaign on screen, programs, ad underlines, house banners, etc. Special section in newspapers. Circus heralds on "See and Hear." Billing by banners and posters around lobby and front of theatre. One-sheets in vacant stores. Banners at street intersections and in hotels. Mirror signs, menu mention drink tieups, soda fountains, restaurants, etc. Signs for rear wheel caps on cabs, banners for bus lines, etc.

The bulletin recommends the copy "See and Hear" or "Talking Pictures" in connection with poster stands on any attraction in which there is talking or singing, while phrases like "this one speaks" may be sniped on films with dialogue.

Regarding stunt exploitation, the advice is that "Any stunt which makes clearer to the public the fact that your screen will speak or that you will have in your theatre audible events, is a good stunt for sound pictures. As an example:

"An enormous moving van circulating with a big sign on each side reading: '$50,000 in modern engineering miracles on the way to the State Theatre so that you can hear the State screen talk and sing.' (Don't show any machinery).

"Any circulating contraption in which you place a radio receiving equipment with a loud speaker, or a phonograph that can run continually, which can be heard as it passes down the streets, with a message emblazoned on the sides reading: 'this is an example of what you will hear from the State screen,' will get your message over."

Loud speakers or a phonograph in the lobby coupled with the right kind of placards featuring "sound" copy, is recommended as a feature of the campaign. Among the lobby suggestions offered is the following rather novel idea set forth in the bulletin:

"One of our Southern California cities has erected a prominent lobby bulletin board on which are placed all the clippings, from newspapers, fan magazines, and our own trade papers, on the subject of 'Talkies' and Sound, headed by copy like: 'Up-to-the-minute news on talkies' or 'Talking picture bulletin' and which attracts attention because 'talkies' are in the air right now. Then the clippings, arranged just as they are on a bulletin board outside a newspaper office, get countless readers. On another part of such a board, you must of course, prominently display your Talking, or Singing, or Sound attraction, again with See and Hear copy."

Newspaper Stories

The following advice concerning the preparation of newspaper stories featuring sound features:

"Do not be tempted into writing technical copy when you have Sound pictures. Talk about the wonders of your equipment and the expense of your equipment; talk about the miracle of adding golden voice to silver silence; talk about the individuals whom they will hear speak; talk about the effects that they will hear, i.e., 110-piece Roxy Theatre orchestra with singing in 'The Street Angel' and 'Fazil'; the cheering of crowds, cracking of the bats and the sweetheart's cry in 'Warming Up'; the hammer of machine guns, the roar of the motors and the cries of stricken pilots in 'Wings'; the $25.00 per ticket showing of Raquel Meller in New York, whom your audience will hear at regular prices, and you have such a wealth of copy in just that detail that you will have no trouble finding enough stories."

Reproductions of newspaper layouts used by several of the West Coast houses as well as a layout of displays selected by Motion Picture News as representative of the best ideas developed for sound pictures and reproduced in the issue of August 11, are shown in reproduction on the concluding pages of the bulletin.

The West Coast bulletin is the most comprehensive exploitation guide for sound pictures that has come to the notice of this publication. It gives in detailed manner a complete outline of the many effective ideas which have proved practical and effective in selling sound pictures.

"Singing Fool" Set for Winter Garden

WARNER BROS. will open the New York Winter Garden September 19th as a theatre devoted exclusively to Vitaphone talking pictures. The world premiere of Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool" will be the first attraction to be shown there

This new Vitaphone special is based on the play by Leslie S. Barrows and was directed by Lloyd Bacon. The star's supporting cast includes Betty Bronson, Josephine Dunn, David Lee, Arthur Housman, Reed Howes, Edward Martindal and Robert Emmett O'Connor.

Al Jolson arrived in New York last week to attend the coming premiere. Warner Bros. are completely renovating the Winter Garden and workmen are busy day and night accomplishing the installation of Vitaphone equipment.

Dr. De Forest Describes New Phonofilm Developments

REFUSAL to commercialize the Phonfilm system of talkie pictures until it was adequate to fulfill all demands that might be made on it, is the secret in back of the inactivity in the theatre field during the past year of Dr. Lee DeForest, inventor of the Phonofilm system. In a statement issued this past week Dr. DeForest announces the completion of experiments which have occupied the past year, which have resulted in refinements of the system of recording and reproducing to a point which he feels that he can now offer Phonofilm to theatres with "an assurance that it will be accepted as a new form of entertainment rather than as a novelty."

Briefly, Dr. DeForest describes his experiments during the past year to developing the recording apparatus to a point where it would be adaptable to the recording of all necessary sounds in a natural manner. Prior to a year ago, he admits, Phonofilm was subject to restrictions and the production efforts were all bent towards a form of entertainment which the restrictions of the recording device permitted.

"It was four years ago, during the presidential campaign, that Phonofilm used its first portable recorder for out door use," continued Dr. DeForest. "We recorded speeches by President Coolidge, John W. Davis and Robert LaFollette. The success of these recordings led us into an extensive program of outdoor recording during that following winter and while some of the results were very pleasing, others disclosed shortcomings of the recording apparatus which made us realize that there was considerable room for improvement.

"We were releasing short subjects regularly to about fifty theatres at that time, and we confined our subjects to things which we knew we could record. We were restricting ourselves to the limitations of the recording system. It was last summer that I fully realized this and began thinking along the proper lines—that of making the recording system conform to everything that might be necessary in furnishing a diversified entertainment. It is only about a year ago that I got the idea that I have since developed.

"The refinements that have since been accomplished do not take in any revolutionary changes in the recording apparatus but are rather drastic changes in the methods of recording. It was necessary to keep rather a taut diaphram in the microphone to keep it from vibrating on sounds or other disturbances which were not to be a part of the recording. I believe the process of transferring electrical waves into light, and transferring the light back into electric waves is nearly perfect, tests proved them so, and our whole attention was given to making the microphone more flexible without losing any of its selectiveness.

"We succeeded in widening the sensitive vibratory band of the microphone, and then discovered that numerous sounds were recorded in a manner which did not sound at all natural when reproduced. For instance, the ringing of sleigh bells. The clank of the inner ball of metal striking against the outer shell was recorded with a volume all out of proportion to the reverberations of the outer shell which makes the jingle which our ears associate with sleigh bells. Without going into a highly technical discussion as to why this is true, it turned our experiments in the direction which can best be described as an experience clinic. In other words, we knew that our apparatus was recording truly, but it was not recording in the same way human ears do.

"We began on a long series of experiments in recording, not by using substitute sounds, but by varying the method of recording. The human ear has a range of about 10,000 vibrations per second, that it perceives all sounds that are caused by vibrations within a band running from about forty per second to 10,000 per second. We experimented with sounds which ran to the extremes of this wave band and went on experminenting until we could record them in a way that they would sound natural when reprojected. The end of this long series of experiments came last week when we succeed in recording a whisper and the jingle of sleigh bells on the same strip of film.

"I feel confident now that our experiments have shown us how to regulate our recording apparatus so that it will reproduce all sounds audible to human ears in a way that will make them sound natural. With these experiments completed the Phonofilm system is ready now to do any style of recording, and reproduce it in a manner which will bar criticism of it as a 'squawky' or 'squeakie.'"

Vitaphone Trailer With Dialogue Goes on Air

What radio editors declared to be an authentically new wrinkle in novelty broadcasting, was maneuvered by the Stanley-Crandall forces the night of Sept. 6 in connection with the exploiting of the Warner Bros., all-talkie, "Lights of New York."

A half hour was arranged for the exploitation over WRC, chain station of the National Broadcasting Company, from 8 to 8:30 p. m. and through dexterous work by the theatre technicians and the studio experts, a five-minute trailer record of the dialogue high spots in "Lights of New York" was directly transmitted from the theatre projection booth through the microphone at the studio six blocks away.

This trailer record included a brief introductory by Conrad Nagel and then the night club scene, with music; dialogue and a final word of explanation by Conrad Nagel.

Gotham Will Establish Coast Talkie Studio

Establishment of another sound and talking studio in Hollywood within the next three months is announced by Budd Rogers, Vice-President of Gotham Productions, which controls the distribution of Bristolphone synchronizing disc device. With two sound stages to be built at Bristolphone factories and laboratories in Waterbury, Conn., this makes four stages to be in operation soon. Sam Sax, President of Gotham is supervising the studio construction on the West Coast.

Dr. Riesenfeld Scoring "The Cavalier"

"The Cavalier," one of the ten special productions announced by Tiffany-Stahl for the coming year, is included in the pictures to be synchronized by that company. The musical score and effects are now being made by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, who also synchronized "The Toilers," the Tiffany-Stahl Reginald Barker special production, soon to be released.

Soriero Praises Talking Pictures

Rochester Manager Sees Sound Films as Permanent Fixture

SYNCHRONIZED talking sound pictures are here to stay. Not only will they revolutionize the motion picture business and film showmanship, but they will help the legitimate and vaudeville stage as well, in the opinion of Thomas D. Soriero, manager of the Rochester Theatre, who is willing to back his assertion to the limit by raising the prices at his theatre against strong competition coincident with the inauguration of the Movietone and Vitaphone era at the Rochester.

Some two years ago, when Mr. Soriero was connected with one of the largest independent circuit theatres in the United States, he was asked to make a survey of the Vitaphone which then was playing John Barrymore in "Don Juan" at the Warner Theatre in New York, with a synchronized musical score. Later he was asked to make a survey for Louis B. Mayer, of Metro-Mayer-Goldwyn. The results of these surveys he combined under the heading, "Synchronized singing, talking and sound pictures have come to stay"—which he repeats today, more strongly than ever.

"Talking pictures," Mr. Soriero said, "have come to stay in such forms as musical comedies, dramas that adapt themselves to dialogue, opera and vaudeville acts. To make these pictures successful the majority of the actors and actresses will have to be drawn from the legitimate, opera and vaudeville stage. In every case where sound is the primary basis of the production the emphasis is not on sound, rather the action, the plot and the characteristics of the picture itself must predominate.

"It was not long after I finished my survey that Vitaphones and Movietones began to be installed in greater numbers. The difference between the two is that the Vitaphone uses a disc in adjustment, whereas the Movietone works in synchronization on the side of the film.

"When first the synchronized pictures attracted attention, the only talking parts were in short Vitaphone subjects, and these were in the main drawn from vaudeville, opera and jazz bands. It was not until considerably later that the larger productions received any pronounced attention. In each ease, these parts were played by only the best-known and most experienced actors and actresses, coming chiefly from the legitimate stage, opera and vaudeville. At the outset, the program consisted of two or three short subjects of Vitaphone used as a filler for the remainder of the program of unsynchronized motion pictures.

"At this time there were very few synchronized pictures, and these did not have talking and singing. However, it was not long before the public tired of this. Then came Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer," which created interest all over again. It proved conclusively that the public wanted synchronization in the large productions, with dialogue, singing, sound and music.

"And that is natural. Nothing can blind the clear thinker to the inevitable conclusion that all-sound pictures will be the universal screen entertainment of the future. People go to picture houses for entertainment. The simpler the form of entertainment the more relaxation can be derived from it. A talking motion picture is the simplest form of entertainment ever devised.

"The patron of the combined talking picture does not have to strain himself either to see or to hear, an advantage that no other form of entertainment possesses. In the silent picture there is always a moment of speculation on the part of the audience between the time when the actor's lips move and that when the title appears on the screen, and there is left to the imagination of the audience that part of the conversation that is not reduced to titles. There is no speculation, no work for the imagination in an all-combined-sound picture.

"Let those who doubt that the 'talkie' is here to stay go into any theatre that is running one of the latest talking pictures. Watch the audience lean forward and listen with rapt attention while the players are speaking. Watch the audience relax—sit back and whisper comments when the talking ceases and the old familar printed title is flashed. The picture is once more a dead thing—without life until another talking sequence occurs.

"Both the Vitaphone and Movietone will help to increase the attendance in all theatres, for the public is always anxious to see and hear great actors and actresses in person, and as they see and hear them in the Movietone and Vitaphone, they in turn will become anxious to see them in the flesh. In other words, the synchronized singing, talking and sound pictures will prove a benefit to all theatres.

"These pictures are not a passing fad, they are here to stay permanently. Yet there are certain difficulties that arise. For instance, the vaudeville booking agents must be far more particular in arranging their bills for those theatres having Movietones and Vitaphones. If John Barrymore is playing on the screen in a combination picture, then the vaudeville must have people of a high rating to make the program pleasing to the audience.

"I have installed in the Rochester Theatre both the Movietone and the Vitaphone. Merely synchronized photoplays will mean nothing. Rather, they must be a combination of sound, dialogue, singing and music to be effective. In theatrical circles such a program is known as the variety bill.

"Within two years the theatre lacking sound pictures will be obsolete. For the first time in the history of the business the small down-town theatre or neighborhood house can present exactly the same screen program that the biggest de luxe theatres offer. Herein lies the difference, then, for the big houses offering vaudeville or presentations. These acts must measure up to the high quality of the screen productions, and must be as opposite and different as possible to provide variety to the bill.

Paramount Breaks Ground for Four New Sound Stages

GROUND was broken during the week for immediate construction of four new sound stages, augmenting the sound producing facilities at the Paramount Hollywood studios. This announcement from Jesse Lasky follows the return of Frank A. Brandow, studio manager, from the East with plans for the new buildings based on Paramount's experience in sound film production.

These plans, originally formulated by Roy J. Pomeroy, director of sound effects, in collaboration with leading electrical and acoustics engineers of the Western Electric and Bell Telephone companies, call for the erection of the most modern type sound stage made possible by scientific research and development.

"Paramount's new sound stages will have every facility for the production of pictures synchronized with the human voice and with sound effects," Mr. Lasky declared. "Acoustically and electrically they represent the genius of the greatest scientific minds of America. It was only after a very careful appraisal of all the elements entering into the production of sound films that plans for the new stages were drawn. Our experience in this work dating back two years when 'Wings' was synchronized and more particularly during the past four months while recording the human voice in several pictures, has resulted in a degree of perfection on the present sound stage that will now be possible on the new ones."

"Bargain in Kremlin" to Be Movietoned

"THE BARGAIN IN THE KREMLIN," by Sir Philip Gibbs, has been purchased by the Universal Pictures Corporation for early production. This Russian story of a famous violinist will be Movietoned. Joseph Schildkraut will play the role of the violinist if it is possible for him to complete his work in "Show Boat" before "The Bargain in Kremlin" goes into production. Schildraut is an accomplished violinist.

Edward Sloman has been assigned by Carl Laemmle to direct this production, and J. Grubb Alexander is preparing the adaptation.

C. of Cs Financing Installations

Civic Pride Prompts Local Organizations To Equip Theatres

TALKING motion pictures threaten to become a civic proposition. In the small towns it seems to be becoming a matter of civic pride that the leading moving picture house be equipped with a sound reproducing device. The small town exhibitor may not be able to finance the costly installation of Vitaphone and Movietone, but it seems he is going to have this equipment regardless.

Out in Texas they have started a movement that threatens to develop into extensive proportion. They have heard about the sound pictures and they want them. The local exhibitor may think the $10,000 or $12,000 too costly for the installation, but the local Chamber of Commerce says the citizens are entitled to the best and so the Chamber of Commerce are seeing to it that installations are ordered.

The Chambers of Commerce are progressive out in Texas. The Waco Chamber heard of the furore that was being created by talking pictures in the larger cites and decided they were none too good for Waco. So a delegation waited upon the local manager of the Dent circuit house and asked that Vitaphone be installed. It required too much of an outlay, the manager retorted, in effect.

The Chamber of Commerce made the proposition that they would sell coupon books to cover the cost of installation. They got busy with the prominent citizens and others and sold the books in denominations of $2.50 and up to $12.50. The people of Waco wanted the talkies and the amount necessary was soon subscribed and the equipment ordered. The coupon books will be redeemable at the box-office for admission tickets.

Temple is a town located some thirty-eight miles from Waco. The latter Chamber of Commerce had exploited the fact that Waco would have talking pictures. Temple decided they, too, must have the talkies, so the Temple Chamber of Commerce got busy. In short order, they sold enough subscription books to take care of the installation at the Arcadia Theatre, another house of the Dent Circuit.

Subsequent meetings of Chambers of Commerce in Paris, Tyler, Harlingen and Raiger, all towns in the state of Texas developed similar conditions. If Waco and Temple were to have the talkies, they, too, must have them. So subscription books were hastily printed and as hasitly sold. As a consequenee the Dent circuit will be well equipped with sound reproduction devices and at no immediate outlay to the management.

As the complete amount is raised for the installation of a machine via the coupon books the sum total is turned over to the theatre management and the application for the equipment for the theatre is made. It amounts merely to the underwriting of the price of equipment by the local Chambers of Commerce and the exhibitor apparently is charged no interest on the money.

Eventually, of course, the exhibitor pays for the price of the equipment in the redemption of the coupon books. Each of the coupons in these books is good for five cents, ten cents or upward at the box-office and applies on the price of an admission ticket. This will curtail the "take" at the box-office until such time as the coupons are exhausted, but it is certainly a bargain for the exhibitor, who pays for the equipment by subscriptions from his patrons and in turn pays off gradually and indirectly only by honoring the coupons.

According to advices from the different towns in Texas whose Chambers of Commerce have underwritten the cost of installation of sound reproduction devices this plan will make many new converts to the movies. It is said that as a matter of civic pride many took the subscription books who rarely if ever attend a motion picture house. Merchants of the different towns were generous subscribers and will reward efficieney of employees with coupons to the movie houses.

The movement is one that opens an avenue to exhibitors in nearly all small towns and it will doubtless meet with the approval of many Chambers of Commerce, particularly where the excessive cost of the installation could not possibly be met otherwise by the exhibitors. Vitaphone equipment will be installed in these houses at the earliest possible moment, according to officials of the Vitaphone Company.

"Interference" First Paramount All-Talkie

PARAMOUNT'S first all-talking picture will be the stage play "Interference."

Although the synchronization of this production has been under way for the past four weeks at the company's Hollywood studios, plans to release it with complete spoken dialogue from beginning to end were revealed only in an announcement from Jesse L. Lasky. Coming with Mr. Lasky's announcement was the further disclosure that half of the "Interference" synchronization has already been accomplished, and that the production will be ready for exhibition throughout the country during the latter part of November.

Sound Picture Reviews

By CHESTER J. SMITH

Movietone News

FOX MOVIETONE NEWS, as revealed in the leading houses along Broadway this week emphasizes the importanee of the talking picture as applied to world events. Here is a splendid reeord which doubtless will be preserved for posterity, of the signing in Paris of the international agreement for the renunciation of war.

It brings the onlooker directly to the scene of action and discloses every incident of the proceedings. Secretary of State Kellogg is heard in a few words of appreciation for the treatment accorded him in Paris. He is introduced by Ambassador Herriek. Aristide Briand's speech is delivered by him in French and then translated by an interpreter into English.

Another striking feature of this newsreel is in the launching in Germany of the S. S. Bremen, the world's largest ship and the christening by President von Hindenburg, who delivers his address in German. The cheering of the crowds, the shrieking of the sirens and all other incidental noises are plainly audible.

A Regular Business Man

This Vitaphone subject, an all-talkie two-reeler features Robert Ober in a vehicle that is hardly up to the standard as some of the others that have been presented on Vitaphone. With Ober appear Margery Meadows, Luey Beaumont and John St. Polis. Their voices all register with complete satisfaction, but it is evident that the skit was hastily thrown together to meet a demand for new Vitaphone skits with the increased popularity of the talkies. It is of the sentimental order with a lot of inconsequential dialogue, but it will do perhaps as a filler while the novelty of the thing is still at its height.

Vaudeville Artists Sign for Vitaphone Acts

Jane Green, "blue" singer of musical comedies and the variety stage, and Redmond and Wells, variety headliners, are among the latest artists to be signed for Vitaphone appearances.

Miss Green has been a featured player in many musical shows among which were "The Greenwich Village Follies," "The Dancing Girl," "What's In A Name," "Midnight Rounders," "The Grab Bag," and "Cinderella on Broadway."

Redmond and Wells have been variety headliners for a number of years.

Pathe Developing Sound Accompaniments

Rudolph Berliner, musical director, is now busy at the Pathe studio on the synchronized sound accompaniments for "Show Folks" and "Captain Swagger," both Pathe productions.

Only 7 Silent Features for M-G-M

Schenck Announces Balance of Program Will Be With Sound

SO convinced are the executives of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer that sound and dialogue pictures are destined for tremendous success in the future that an announcement from Nicholas Schenck, president of the company, reveals the fact there will be but seven silent pictures on this season's program. All others will be synchronized with sound and music or will have sound effects, music and dialogue synchronized.

In announcing the plans for the season, Mr. Schenck said:

"More than a thousand theatres will be wired by January first. Consequently in advance of that time we will be ready with a complete service to all our customers in this line.

"Our studio at the coast will be in full operation within a few weeks and before September is out we will be similarly situated in the East with the opening of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sound studios which were formerly run by Cosmopolitan.

"In the West we will continue our production of nineteen features with partial or complete talking sequences. In the East we will immediately place into production thirty films of a vaudeville nature, for which contracts have been entered into with many prominent performers.

"Meanwhile our activities in the production of our announced program of synchronized and silent pictures will continue along their routined schedule. I have compiled herewith a list of all productions sound or silent, short or feature length, which are in production, finished, or about to go into production.

"While many of the talking films so far shown have been interesting, it is the novelty of them which has most helped their success. Our plans are looking beyond the novelty stage."

New season pictures which are to be made entirely in dialgoue or with talking sequences include "The Trial of Mary Dugan," "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" and "Alias Jimmy Valentine." A complete list of the nineteen films follow:

William Haines in "Alias Jimmy Valentine," with Karl Dane, Lionel Barrymore, Leila Hyams and Tully Marshall; "The Bridge of San Luis Rey;" William Haines, in "A Man's Man;" John Gilbert, in "Thirst;" Ramon Novarro, in "The Pagan;" Marion Davies, in "Dumb Dora," "The Little Warrior" and "Buddies;" Norma Shearer, in "Ballyhoo," an "A Free Soul;" Karl Dane and George K. Arthur, in "All at Sea;" Buster Keaton, in "Spite Marriage;" "Broadway Melody," a Cosmopolitan production; "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," with a strong cast headed by Norma Shearer; "The Bellamy Trial," with Leatrice Joy, Betty Bronson, Eddie Nugent; "The Trial of Mary Dugan," an all-talking screen rendition; "Nize Baby," with Vera Gordon, Harold Waldridge, Tenen Holtz, Alexander Carr and Sally Eilers.

A story of Negro life.

About twenty additional M-G-M productions for 1928-29 will have synchronized scores and sound effects. These include the pictures which Cecil B. DeMille will make at Culver City under the terms of his new contract, "Trader Horn," "White Shadows in the South Seas," and some of the most important starring vehicles of the year. A list of films now definitely placed in this group is given here:

"Show People," co-starring Marion Davies and William Haines; also presenting many well-known stars and personalities of the movie world including Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and others of prominence.

John Gilbert and Greta Garbo in "A Woman of Affairs;" Greta Garbo in "Tiger Skin," an original by Elinor Glyn, and in "The Single Standard," by Adela Rogers St. John; John Gilbert in "The Masks of the Devil." In the cast will be Eva Von Berne, Ralph Forbes, George Fawcett, Theodore Roberts and Alma Rubens.

William Haines in "Excess Baggage," from the successful play; Lon Chaney in "While the City Sleeps," with Anita Page in the feminine lead; Ramon Novarro in "Gold Braid;" Lillian Gish in "The Wind," with Lars Hanson and Montagu Love.

Peter B. Kyne's "Tide of Empire;" Joan Crawford in "Our Dancing Daughters," with Anita Page, Jack Mack Brown, Eddie Nugent.

Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle in "The Baby Cyclone;" "Trader Horn;" "Mother and Sons," a Cosmopolitan production; "The Trail of '98," with Dolores Del Rio, Ralph Forbes, Karl Dane, Tenen Holtz and George Cooper; "White Shadows in the South Seas," with Raquel Torres, Monte Blue and native players; "Adrienne Lecouveur," with Joan Crawford, Nils Asther in featured roles.

Only seven of the total number of M-G-M new season films will be orthodox "silent pictures." The list follows:

Buster Keaton in "The Cameraman," with Marceline Day in the feminine lead; Karl Dane and George K. Arthur in "Brotherly Love," with Jean Arthur in the feminine lead; Flash, the wonder dog, in "Grease Paint;" Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle in "Beau Broadway," with Sue Carol and James J. Jeffries in the cast; Tim McCoy in "Humming Wires," "Sioux Blood" and "Perfecto."

Evans Appointed Vitaphone Engineer for Brooklyn Studio

PORTER H. EVANS, for the past eight years connected with the Bell Telephone Laboratories as Radio Engineer, has joined the Vitaphone Corporation as engineer in charge of the new Vitaphone studio, soon to be under operation in Brooklyn.

During Mr. Evans' association with the Bell Telephone Laboratories, he supervised the installation of several of the most important radio broadcasting stations in the country, among which are WOR, WABC, WGBS and WPG.

Mr. Evans' activities for the past year have been concerned with the development of radio for aeroplanes. He has also had a great deal of experience in the development and perfection of talking picture equipment. Before starting active work in Brooklyn, Mr. Evans will make a brief visit to the Warner Bros. West Coast studio where he will confer with Nugent Slaughter, Chief Engineer for Vitaphone.

It is anticipated that the new Brooklyn Vitaphone studio will be in operation about the middle of October.

First Sound Stage of Pathe Is Ready

PREPARATIONS for sound pictures at the Pathe Studios in Culver City have progressed so rapidly that the middle of the month will find the first sound stage in operation. A large sound stage adjoining Stage 7 has been completed, and Photophone recording apparatus is being installed. The office building at Washington and Ince Boulevards is being converted into offices for Benjamin Glazer, supervisor of sound, and his staff.

Walsh Will Direct, Play Lead in All-Talkie

Raoul Walsh, who already has demonstrated his ability as an actor as well as a director, will again double in the two roles in "The Caballero's Way," an O'Henry story which Fox Films will produce as an all-dialogue Movietone feature. It will be Walsh's first effort in a talking role on the screen.

Walsh will play the role of the "Cisco Kid" in the picture and will direct Maria Alba and George O'Brien in the two other principal roles.

Pert Kelton Signs for Vitaphone Act

Pert Kelton, comedienne of the musical comedy stage, has signed for a Vitaphone appearance. Miss Kelton will soon enact her original songs and eccentric dances for Vitaphone.

Miss Kelton appeared on the variety stages of the United States for six years before she made her debut in musical comedy in Ziegfeld's, "Sunny." Her last appearance in New York was as the featured comedienne of "The Five O'Clock Girl," which she will rejoin after completing her Vitaphone appearance.

8 Fox Features With Dialogue Due by January 1

FOX sound pictures have passed the planning stage, with the added facilities of four huge sound stages covering forty acres at Fox Hills, and with the signing of many stage players, writers and directors.

According to announcement by Winfield Sheehan, eight feature pictures with dialogue and seven all-talkie two reel comedies will be ready for release by January 1st. Five of the full length productions will be entirely in dialogue and three of them, which already have been completed, will have talking sequences.

The three finished pictures are "Mother Knows Best," featuring Madge Bellamy; "Making the Grade" and "The Air Circus," which opened two weeks ago at the Gaiety Theatre in New York City. The first two are fifty per cent talkies and in "The Air Circus" Louise Dresser, Sue Carol, David Rollins and Arthur Lake speak their lines.

The two new feature productions which will be all-dialogue pictures are O'Henry's "The Caballero's Way," which Raoul Walsh is directing with Maria Alba in the role of the Spanish girl, and "Badges," a play by Max Marcin, which Lew Seiler will direct.

On the completion of "The Caballero's Way," Raoul Walsh will begin production of the Earl Derr Biggers mystery melodrama "Behind That Curtain." J. G. Blystone will make "Through Different Eyes," Milton Gropper's play, in Movietone. The title for the fifth all-talking feature has not yet been selected.

In the comedy field the Fox Company has three two-reel dialogue comedies completed. They are "The Family Picnic," "Mystery Mansion" and "Four A. M."

"Napoleon's Barber," by Arthur Caesar, is being made into a two-reel Movietone comedy by John Ford. "Mind Your Business," by Hugh Herbert, who plays one of the leading roles under the direction of Benjamin Stoloff, is another of the new comedies. The other members of this cast include Ben Bard, Dorothy McGowan, Mickey Bennett and Ben Hall.

Charles (Chic) Sale has already completed work on one dialogue comedy and is now at work on a two-reel Movietone comedy titled "The Ladies Man."

This rapid development in the production of feature talking pictures by Fox Film Corporation is being paralleled by Fox Movietone News, which will offer two releases weekly beginning October 1, instead of one as at present. By that time thirty field units will be scattered throughout the world, gathering news events in sight and sound.

"Picture Voice" Seen As Test For Players by Montagne

A BIG new field of entertainment possibilities is opened up by the advent of sound, according to the view of Edward J. Montagne, editor-in-chief for Universal, as expressed to a representative of Motion Picture News this week.

Mr. Montagne, who is in New York looking over plays and books, takes a progressive attitude toward the changes brought about by sound. He believes the production forces must approach the problem in that spirit.

Pointing out that many types of plays and other material once were considered not picture stuff, he adds that these are now available because sound makes possible new technique which silence could not.

"In a sense," he said, "we are starting all over again in production. The public is continually looking for the new thing in entertainment, and right now sound is giving it to them. This means, of course, that the studios will have to work out an entirely new technique for sound pictures. There will be constant improvements in the mechanical devices, and it is up to the production people to keep pace with them.

"I believe sound will bring new personalities to the screen. I do not mean by this that our present established stars will disappear, necessarily, but that the test for all will be whether or not they fit the new era. Sound pictures will develop their own talent, to a large degree, just as silent pictures did. In the future—and the not distant future, either—the player who will be prominent will have what I call the 'picture voice.' Such players may come from the stage, or the ranks of present stars, or they may be entirely new personalities at present unknown."

M-G-M Signs Imposing Array of Stars for Short Features

MUSICAL comedy, operatic and vaudeville stars are reaping the harvest of the sound pictures. Already a large number of Broadway headliners have affixed their signatures to lucrative contracts and the list is being added to daily. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is signing them by the score for its short Movietone features with which to round out complete theatre programs.

During the past week a number of important contracts have been negotiated with stars by this company. Frances Williams, one of the featured players in the new edition of George White's Scandals, will sing and dance for Movietone and the M-G-M program. Robert Chisholm, who starred under the Arthur Hammerstein banner in "Golden Dawn," is another whose signature has been secured.

Among other artists recently signed by M-G-M are the following: John Charles Thomas, noted baritone; Allan Prior, Australian tenor; Ella Shields, English singing comedienne; George Dewey Washington, of vaudeville fame; Joseph Regan, Irish-American tenor; Kramer and Boyle, vaudeville team; Harry Rose, prominent on the vaudeville stage; Mr. and Mrs. Norman Phillips and Norman Phillips, Jr., of last year's Scandals.

The foregoing are additions to the stars previously signed by M-G-M. Included in the latter list are: Eva Le Gallienne, Van and Schenck, Mary Eaton, Oscar Shaw, Louise Groody, Miller and Lyle, Jules Bledsoe, Mabel Wayne, Marion Harris, Walt Roesner, Ponce Sisters, Paul Tisen and orchestra, Colonial Sextette, Morris and Campbell, Elsa Ersi and Nat Ayer, Odette Myrtil, Charles King, Sunshine Sammy, Leo Beers, Yorke and King, Fuzzy Knight, Frank Gaby and Johnny Marvin.

While this makes an imposing array of talent for one company, it is said that the roster of M-G-M stars is by no means completed. Negotiations are under way with a number of players whose names shine regularly in the Broadway lights.

United Artists Arrange Synchronizations

Synchronizations on four United Artists Pictures were arranged this week. Nathaniel Shilkret and the Victor Orchestra will score Dolores del Rio's "Revenge" with gypsy music and sound effects. Dr. Hugo Reisenfeld is coming from Hollywood to Camden, N. J., to synchronize Vilma Banky's "The Awakening" and Norma Talmadge's "The Woman Disputed"; the former film has been recorded in part already, in Hollywood.

David Wark Griffith's "The Battle of the Sexes" will be synchronized at Camden by Josef Pasternack and the Victor Orchestra.

All synchronizations on the five completed United Artists Pictures will be ready for national release on these films. On September 7th, "Two Lovers" will be released ;October 13th, "The Battle of the Sexes"; October 20th, "The Woman Disputed"; November 3rd, "Revenge"; and November 17th, "The Awakening."

First "Topics of Day" Talkie Under Way

After a series of voice tests, the cast for the first of the Pathe Topics of the Day Talkies has been chosen, and the initial subject is scheduled to go into production this week at the RCA Photophone Studios in New York.

The four men and four women selected were given final voice tests at the studios of the National Broadcasting Company last Saturday. This determined the artists for the first cast. Don Hancock tried out the actors in pairs, a man and a woman, requiring them to read the script before a microphone while he listened to a loud speaker in a sound-proof room.

"Give and Take" Sound Version Due Soon

Synchronization of "Give and Take," Universal's comedy drama adaptation of the Broadway stage success, has been completed, and the sound version will soon be on the market.

First "U" All-Talkie Shown at Preview

"Madelon" or "Melody of Love" Proves Amusing Film Entertainment at Chinese Theatre

WHILE the major studios in and around Hollywood are frantically building sound stages and laboratories in preparation for their first "talking" pictures, Universal quietly went ahead and produced a sound picture which is 100 per cent dialogue and musical score. It was presented at a special preview at Grauman's Chinese theatre, Hollywood, for a score of newspaper people and for a first attempt made a favorable impression.

The picture, which is called "Madelon" or "Melody of Love," (the final title has not been decided) was presented in seven reels and can stand considerable cutting to tighten up the dialogue and make it smoother running. It was directed by A. B. Heath, with Walter Pidgeon playing the lead, supported by Mildred Harris, Tom Dugan, Jane Winton, Victor Potel and Jack Richardson. The story was written by Robt. Arch and concerns an episode of the World War. Roy Hunter had charge of the technical and Movietone portions of the picture, while Bert Fiske wrote the musical score. Nat Goldstone supervised the production.

With but a slight story to work on, Director Heath managed to hold the interest by working up to a "miracle" climax that was quite effective. The story concerns two New York youths who go to war when America enters the struggle. One, a song writer, leaves a sweetheart behind. The other falls in love with a French girl with a beautiful voice. Both are injured in battle and, upon recovering, return to the United States. Injury to the musician's hand, however, prevents him from carrying on and, finding his girl has been untrue to him, he becomes a dereliet. The French girl comes to America and finds employment in a cafe. The musician wanders into the resort and is urged to play for the French girl. Strength comes into his paralyzed fingers and he finds happiness with the French girl. A quartette of Los Angeles policemen dressed as A. E. F. who harmonized at intervals, have good voices for Movietone reproduction. Walter Pidgeon also proved pleasing both in his dialogue and piano playing and singing. Miss Harris did not photograph well and lacks a good speaking voice for talking pictures.

The picture, as a first attempt, reflects considerable credit upon the Universal organization as it was made under difficult circumstances.—Ray Murray.

Born in Connecticut and in Ohio

Joseph Franklin Poland, born in Waterbury, Conn., sold his first story to a motion picture company when he was still a freshman at Columbia University. The writing bug stung him severely at this point, and the dust has never yet been wiped off his law books.

After selling some sixty odd one and two reelers, written at night while he worked in Wall Street, New York, during the day, Poland joined the old Kalem Company as staff writer. Following this came engagements with Vitagraph, Fox and Metro, all in New York, but at the end of several years he gave up staff work and started writing originals. Within a period of fourteen months he had his name on seventeen original productions produced by every company then in the industry. He left New York to accept an engagement with Thomas H. Ince and during his two and a half years with Ince, Poland wrote for Douglas MacLean and other stars and learned much from that master producer. Then he wrote two of Colleen Moore's successes during the first year when she blossomed out as a box office attraction. They were "The Perfect Flapper," and "Flirting with Love."

Eventually Universal, seeking a man who conld superviso the getting into production some thirty feature comedies a year, asked Poland to take the job. And out of that assignment came what Carl Laemmle and Universal proudly described as the most consistent line-up of feature comedies the company had ever presented.

Poland, who is still connected with Universal, is supervising "It Can Be Done," and whenever an obstacle is encountered, he merely points to the title and favorite slogan of his chief, Carl Laemmle, and a solution to the difficulty is immediately found.

The young writer from Connecticut made a place for himself in California.

Perseverance and the keenest desire to learn every phase of his business is what landed Leon d'Usseau near the top of his profession. That is why he is now supervisor of production at the FBO Studio and assistant to William LeBaron, in charge of production.

Prior to his arrival in Hollywood in 1915, d'Usseau had been first, an actor on the stage, and then a newspaper reporter. From this he worked into the publicity and exploitation field and then into a partnership that controlled six theatres. These experiences gave him a wide knowledge of every thing but the production end, and that was the particular end to which he aspired. His first job in a motion picture studio was that of property man. Having studied art in New York, the evidence of which showed in his dressing of sets he was quickly given the responsibility of designing and dressing sets. He gained prominence, as a result, by being among the first in the industry to receive screen credit as an art director.

After a year of this, in which he was making rapid advancement, d'Usseau deliberately gave it up to become an assistant director, which he considered a step nearer his goal. He took up cutting, title writing, continuities and original scripts, establishing himself firmly in each branch. Then for two years he devoted himself to the assignment of scenario editor, which he gave up to become a director.

Having carved a niche for himself, d'Usseau is still a keen student of everything that has to do with production and he maintains his reputation of being a capable man in anything he attempts.

This son of the Buckeye State was born in Toledo and was educated at St. John's College and the University of Michigan.

The Wampas "Fliers" Party

The Wampas had as guests of honor at its last meeting Miss Ruth Elder and the "Round the World" fliers, Lieut. Leslie Arnold, Jack Harding and Harry Ogden. The meeting was in charge of Harry Hammond Beall and was a tribute to the aerial events held here this week. Sid Grauman furnished the musical entertainment with numbers from his prologue at the Chinese theatre. Posters on the walls also acclaimed the fact that it was Pete Smith's birthday.

Laemmle Back Again

Edward Laemmle, Universal director, is back at the studio preparing his next production. While abroad Laemmle investigated the possibilities of showing Hollywood-made talking pictures on the continent.

Sam Wood Convalescing

Sam Wood, M-G-M director, is recovering from an appendicitis operation at the Hollywood hospital, where he was rushed last week.

Louise Brooks as the Canary

Due to Illness of Ruth Taylor, Louise Brooks has been returned to the role of the Canary in "The Canary Murder Case," which Paramount will film with William Powell as Philo Vance.

Newcomer

A young lady with no previous screen experience has been given a contract by Fox. She is Betty Collins, discovered by Charles Klein, while making "The Case of Mary Brown."

A Bigger and Better Hersholt

The synchronization of sound with action in "The Braggart," Jean Hersholt's forthcoming starring vehicle for Universal, will reveal the Universal star in an histrionic light never previously achieved, Carl Laemmle predicts.

Murnau Resumes Filming

Pendleton, Oregon, famed for its yearly "round-ups," recently found its population increased by more than 100 new residents. The influx composed a Fox unit headed by F. W. Murnau, who will direct "Our Daily Bread."

Finishing Editing Job

George Crone has finished the supervision of the cutting and and editing of "The Floating College," for Tiffany-Stahl. It is Mr. Crone's first free-lancing venture.

Considine in the Air

John W. Considine, Jr., studio head of United Artists, flew from Hollywood to Banff, Canada, this week, to confer with John Barrymore and Ernst Lubitsch about "King of the Mountains," in production up in the American Alps. Next week he will be wafted by plane to New York, to place in production "Say It With Music."

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB
Clearing House for Box Office Problems and Theatre Operation

By Charles E. Lewis
of the Alfred Gottesman Theatrical Enterprises, New England

(Editor's Note: This is the second of a series of short articles by Charles E. Lewis, who recently completed a tour of the Mid-Western states for the Motion Picture News to study exhibitor conditions first-hand.)

Comparing Eastern and Western Conditions

For the second of this series I take the next question that stands out as important by reason of the number of times it has been put to me.

Audience reaction does differ in the Middle West as compared to the East.

If anything, they are more critical than you would imagine. After all, what creates comparison and criticism in an audience? Is it not the fact that they now frequent the larger cities and theatres? Is it not that they are rapidly becoming show-wise and take more time to shop for their entertainment? Most certainly these represent the prime factors in this new discrimination by the average theatre-goer today. And so I found that most of the theatres on my trip were more up-to-date in operation and their audiences more keen about the little things that go to make a theatre popular, a performance more enjoyable. In one town of about 20,000 people, in a new and beautiful theatre, I was sitting with the manager on the mezzanine promenade when two ladies approached and greeted him. They seemed to be annoyed that this theatre should run the feature which they had just witnessed and which they thought was very inferior. They could not be told that it was block-booked with a batch of other pictures because they were not one bit interested in any such thing. They were only concerned with the fact that they had to sit through a bad feature and were surprised that this theatre would run it. The manager told me after they left that during the three days' run of this particular feature he had received over fifty verbal complaints, and then he took me to his office and showed me 22 letters on the same subject. He even showed me complaints about short stuff, including a newsreel that contained one subject about a week old. And this condition, by no means, was confined to this one theatre or town. I found the same thing in half a dozen other places, and in many theatres where I sat to watch the show or part of it I head various remarks about me that I was not accustomed to hear back East. The managers out there, however, lend a willing ear to such complaints and suggestions, whereas I found in the East that managers were inclined to treat such things as "kicks from pests." Perhaps if those managers would pay more attention to those "pests" they would find themselves with more successful theatres to run.

Remember, if one complains, a hundred feel the same but don't say a word.

The Hired Boy

Brother members, let us make you acquainted with the one and only Harvey "Doc" Arlington, who styles himself — Fitzpatrick McElroy's "Hired-Boy," and has been with the latter circuit for the past two years and is now located at Muncie, Indiana, locking after the firm's interests in the Rivoli, Strand and Star Theatres.

We respectfully recommend that any member living within reasonable distance of Muncie, take a ride over and make the acquaintance of "Doc" and be assured it will be well worth your while because he is a real "dyed-in-the-wool" showman, who was busy planning his first ballyhoo while he was still cutting his teeth at the tender age of 6 months. He is still at it—and how!

Getting Them Young

While on the recent mid-western trip we happened across a town out in Indiana where the theatre advertising in the newspapers attracted our attention, so we were mighty interested in meeting the "man" who wrote such advertising. But the real surprise arrived when we found that it was not a man, but just a boy.

Ralph Cokain is the youngster we mean, and as his picture shows, he is really not much more than a boy. But this "kid" has ideas and properly handled should more than make the grade. He has brains, a knack for writing a good eye-arresting ad, and he knows how to express himself. With his youth and imagination he can't help getting ahead in this business.

Ralph handles the advertising for about four theatres out in Marion, Indiana, and has sent us some interesting "copy" which we will give our careful attention. Look for some of it in the very near future because it is worth waiting for. We sort of look upon this youngster as our adopted son and don't forget, Ralph, we want to hear from you again very soon.

In the issue of August 18, we published an account of a "Clean-Up Matinee' which was successfully handled by Manager C. F. Lawrence of Schine's Ohio theatre, Lima, Ohio. We are reproducing above two photographs which were received too late to publish with the story. Look at these pictures and then turn back and read about the idea itself.

"The Lion and the Mouse"

Frank S. Mickley, manager of the Earle Theatre in Allentown, Pa., and a recent member of the Club, forwarded a most unusual and novel advertising stunt on "The Lion and the Mouse." Lack of space in this issue makes it impossible to reproduce the circulars he sent us, but we do want to tell you that he flooded his town with this circular. And it was one of the best we have seen in ages. It showed the picture of a cage, with the advice to "Hold this up to the light and see if you can see "The Lion and the Mouse." Needless to say, everyone who got hold of these circulars was busy holding it up to the light. This suggestion offers untold possibilities which we cannot go into right now. You might drop a line to Mr. Mickley and let him tell you more about it in detail. He might also have some copies of the circular which he will let you have. Do this, brother members, it will be well worth your time.

At the conclusion of Mr. Mickley's letter he says: "I am glad to be a member as I look forward to this department regularly and trust that I may have other matters of exploitation to send you and that I may receive some ideas from my fellow club members." That's the spirit, Frank, and we all feel the same. That is the answer as to why the Club has been such a success.

This Is Sad But True

In reading a copy of the British trade paper, "The Bioscope," we came across the following paragraph which we want you all to read: "It is easier to talk with the American President than with the managers of some New York cinemas."

And brothers, that sentence is sad but all too true. Why this condition should exist is to me a mystery and I think I have been running theatres long enough to know whether my job entailed so much work (?) that I could not take the time to see and meet people who might want to see me. I could (unfortunately) quote a list of theatre managers of just this type. Men who have sold themselves the ridiculous idea that because they are managing large theatres they should make themselves inaccessible to visitors.

Take a "regular" manager, a man who really does find himself crowded with plenty to do and perhaps not enough assistance, he will always find the few moments to say hello to any visitor regardless of whether that visitor is a patron or a pest. It's worth thinking over, boys, and give it a lot of thought. You are not so important or big, but that someone else is more important and perhaps bigger. Right?

Vitaphone Music for "Breaks"

My references to the Eckel Theatre in Syracuse in a recent issue has brought forth quite a few requests for further details. As I recall the performance I witnessed, at the break of the show and while the crowd was moving he closed his screen curtains and put on his house lights, then by use of his non-synchronized attachment he played several popular records. At the finish of the record, or rather as its end drew near, he started to dim down his house lights so that they were almost out when the finish of the record came. Then he went right into his newsreel, or opening subject.

The organ specialty that was talked about, was spotted before the feature.

Exploitation for Crook Stories

There are so many pictures now being released about crooks, underworld and murder, and almost everyone of them contains a scene of a court room trial, so we suggest that you follow R. N. Nellis' "Summons" idea which he used at his Liberty Theatre in Washington, Indiana. In this instance, he made up an exact duplicate of a regular court summons properly filled in to fit his attraction and play dates and distributed them throughout the town.

"MANAGER'S ROUND TABLE CLUB"

WHY should you join?

BECAUSE, it affords you the opportunity of inter-changing ideas with fellow exhibitors on Advertising, Exploitation and Theatre Operation.

Get away from that old fashioned idea that you alone know everything. Just lend an ear to the other fellow and find that you have lots to learn—and lots to teach others.

WE want your application here in time to put you on the second membership list which will be published very soon. Fill in the application and send it to me care of the NEWS, 729 Seventh Ave., N. Y. C.

Celebrates Tenth Anniversary With Free Shows for All

ONE of the most unique anniversary celebrations on record in the picture theatre business took place in Zanesville, Ohio, on September 5, when every theatre in the town was open to the public without admission charge as a gift to the people by Caldwell Brown, general manager of the Brown Theatrical Co., owners of all the theatres in Zanesville, in celebration of his 10th anniversary as a showman.

Brown invited everybody to his party in a display ad occupying a third of a page in the Times Recorder. His invitation read:

"Today is my 10th Anniversary in the theatrical business in Zanesville. Just ten years ago today I presented my first show in this city in the Schultz theatre. Do you remember what it was? Just to refresh your memory it was Metro's 'To Hell with the Kaiser.' How many remember it? It does not seem that ten years have passed, does it? I am celebrating my anniversary today. I want you to celebrate with me. Everything is free at every theatre today? I have given our cashiers and ticket takers a vacation today, so just walk into any theatre today as my guest. Don't be backward, as I want all my friends and patrons in Zanesville and Southeastern Ohio to come right in and enjoy a good show on me. Remember, it is free at the Liberty, Quimby, Imperial, and Grand theatres today. Caldwell Brown."

From the attendance at each of the four theatres, the people of Zanesville and Southeastern Ohio showed their eagerness to celebrate with Mr. Brown his tenth anniversary in show business. The Times Recorder, in a page one article reporting the event, estimated that 28,000 persons attended the shows during the day.

"Downtown streets," the article continued, "assumed the aspect of Christmas shopping days. From 1 o'clock in the afternoon until 11:15 last night, when the last performances at the four playhouses ended and the crowds poured out, the business district was somewhat distracted from its usual quietude."

In addition to the four theatres mentioned, the Brown Theatrical Co., operates the Schultz Opera and Weller theatres. The latter two are undergoing repairs.

Brown expressed himself as delighted with the results. "It made me happy to see the crowds surging into the theatres," he told a reporter.

Though the free shows were not announced until the morning of the day on which they were offered, the news spread like wildfire, and approximately 12,000 persons attended the afternoon performances. Brown stopped tallying them after the counting machines had clicked off a total of 27,381 at 9:30 P. M.

Launch Campaign for Opening of New Fox Theatre in Detroit

FEATURES which will figure importantly in the entertainments and the service provided Detroit theatregoers at the new Fox house—one of the largest in the country, with a seating capacity of 5,000—are being exploited in a campaign of extensive proportions which is building up to a climax as the opening date draws near.

Sixty musicians in the orchestra pit, and on the stage, sixty choral voices under the direction of Adolphe Kornspan conductor, and Frederick Stock, associate conductor, will feature the opening Sept. 15. Besides musical effects the new Fox will have a ballet group of thirty girls, stage shows and feature films.

Ushers at the Fox will be trained in the system inaugurated by S. L. Rothafel, and Eugene Le Gendre will assume charge of the military drills. Fresh from long service in the Marines, Le Gendre originated the military system of theatre-usher training for the New York Hippodrome back in 1904. The ushers will wear dark blue coats with military collars, a Sam Brown belt over the shoulder, and gray trousers for the afternoon. In the evening the uniform will be replaced with dinner jacket, dark blue trousers, stiff shirt, white gloves and patent leather oxfords.

In connection with the showing of "The Tempest" at United Artists, Charles Baron, publicity director, arranged 75 record displays with Victor stores; billed 75 24-sheet; 1,000 street car cards; 150 eight-sheets; 25 perfume tie-ups; 50 jewelry story displays; library book marks and persuaded twenty-five local dance orchestras to feature the theme song of the show. Special displays in downtown department stores were also employed. Following this heavy campaign the U-A opened last Friday to a crowd numbering nearly 15,000, and Walker Stuart has been named assistant to Baron.

Grocery Chain in Tie-Up With Theatre for Act

The Piggly Wiggly grocery stores in Montgomery, Ala., featured a tie-in line to advertise their products in conjunction with the drive put on by Manager H. C. Farley, of the Empire Theatre, to exploit the presentation of Gene Dennis.

The Piggly Wiggly stores printed and distributed 6,000 circulars advertising some of their commodities with a headline at the top reading, "Free, 150 Tickets to the Empire—Let Piggly Wiggly solve your groceery problems—Let Gene Dennis at the Empire three days next week solve other problems."

Showmanship

MANAGER J. M. FRANKLIN of B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, had a whole regiment on his hands Friday evening, September 7, when the Governor-General's Foot Guards, the household regiment of Viscount Willingdon, Canadian Viceroy, paraded to the theatre with its own bands. The occasion was the appearance on the stage of the Foot Guards Band of 50 pieces for concerts during the week of September 3. Incidentally, a sound picture effect was obtained by the presentation of moving pictures of the band parading through the streets of Ottawa with the musical unit itself playing the regimental march behind the screen. As the picture faded out, the curtain was raised, revealing the band on the stage. A large crowd gathered at the theatre when the regiment appeared on the scene after parading from th Armory.

CO-OPERATIVE advertising pages are developing as the favorite method of exploiting "Lights of New York." Following the lead of the Strand Theatre on Broadway and its participation in the first co-operative ad page ever put over with the New York Times, exhibitors in other cities are capitalizing on the same idea. The latest page of this type achieved in connection with "Lights of New York" was put over by the Mark Strand Theatre in Worcester, Mass. Around a good size ad space purchased by the theatre were more than a dozen other advertisements contributed by electrical and radio stores.

THE Southwestern Iowa Baseball tournament started August 22nd in Council Bluffs, Ia., and "Warming Up," starring Richard Dix, opened at the Broadway Theatre, Council Bluffs August 26th for a three-day run. Manager D. Chatkin tied up with the baseball team by placing two 5x15 banners in the park and two 3x5 banners on concession stands. One of the larger ers' knowledge that if they poked a ball against er's knowledge that if they poked a ball against it, it would be good for a pass for themselves and party.

THE "Greater Movie Season" idea was well exploited in San Diego, Calif. The general chairman of the local committee was Dwight L. Hill, manager of the Pacific National Theatres' local houses. A proclamation was secured from Mayor Harry C. Clark and this was reproduced in the form of large posters. Permits were given by the common council for display of two large banners across two of the prominent down town streets. The theatres made a tie-up with the county fair management.

MANAGER WALTER TEBBETTS, of Oriental Theatre, Portland, Ore., had some excellent tie-ups in connection with a run on "Uncle Tom's Cabin," using the Log Cabin Baking Company and also Sun Freeze Ice Cream Company. He also placarded the country for a radius of fifty miles from Portland.

THE Oriental Theatre, Detroit, has inaugurated the custom of featuring a "surprise" show every day during the dinner hour program. Patrons who attend after the regular daily matinee are treated to two full-length picture features and also may remain for the vaudeville show of six acts in the evening.

Rotsky Campaign Makes "Sound Films" the "Talk" of Montreal

THE first presentation of a sound picture program in Canada, at the Palace Theatre, Montreal, under the direction of Manager George T. Rotsky, during the week of September 1 was literally the "talk" of Montreal. The attendance was so heavy that Manager Rotsky carried over the whole program for a second week.

The initial program was as follows: "Street Angel," Fox Movietone; Raquel Meller in "Corpus Christi." Robert Benchley in "The Treasurer's Report." and Nina Tarasova in "The Hut," three movietone short subjects, and the Fox Movietone News. This show was presented continuously from 11 A. M. to 11 P. M. for the 14 days.

A morning show has proved a permanent success at the Palace Theatre, Montreal, where George Rotsky holds the reins of office. This bargain performance, the admission for which is 25 cents, opens at 11 A. M. The Palace is in the heart of the retail shopping section of Montreal and many shoppers have been attending. Matters are facilitated through the presentation of sound pictures, no house orchestra being required.

Local Ball Club Plays Double Header in Honor of Dix

The Fort Smith Baseball Club dedicated one of its double header days as "Richard Dix" day, in honor of the star's picture, "Warming Up."

Moore got a few musicians together and then went to the Graham Bros. Agency and got the loan of a two-ton truck which was used to transport the musicians all over town. Banners on both sides and rear of truck announced the double header as well as Richard Dix in "Warming Up" at the Joie theatre.

Special announcements were made by the official league baseball announcer that Richard Dix in "Warming Up" would open at the Joie the following Monday.

A baseball autographed by Richard Dix was given to the Mayor who tossed the ball from the grandstand which was used in the game. Two other Richard Dix autographed balls were given to persons after the double header who held lucky numbers on their seat stubs. This stunt was the basis for write-ups in the local newspapers—always mentioning the title of picture, star, theatre and play dates in the articles.

The baseball sign was later used during the showing of the picture by being carried through the streets of the city by two uniformed boys.

Million Dollar Newspaper Ad. Campaign for Warners

A ONE million dollar advertising campaign fund has been set aside by Warner Bros. to advertise Vitaphone pictures direct to the public through big city newspapers. The appropriation has been made for a series of six advertisements seven columns wide and twenty-one inches deep to run in 125 of the leading dailies throughout the country.

These ads will tell of the stars who will be heard exclusively on Vitaphone. The stars included are Al Jolson, Dolores Costello, Fannie Brice, John Barrymore, Monte Blue, Texas Guinan, George Arliss and others.

The first of the advertisements will describe Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool." It will appear the week of September 17, the same week that the picture will have its world premiere at the Winter Garden in New York City. Every newspaper in New York City, including the Jewish Press, will carry these Vitaphone advertisements.

Albany News, Atlanta Constitution, Atlanta, Georgian, Baltimore News, Birmingham News-Herald, Boston American, Boston Herald & Traveler, Boston Post, Buffalo Courier Express, Buffalo News, Buffalo Times, Chicago Daily News, Cincinnati Post, Cleveland Press, Cleveland News, Columbus Dispatch, Dallas News, Dallas Times-Herald, Denver Post, Detroit News, Detroit Free Press, Des Moines Register & Tribune, Duluth Herald, Grand Rapids Press, Hartford Courant, Hollywood Citizen, Houston Chronicle, Indianapolis News, Indianapolis Star, Kansas City Post, Kansas City Star & Times, Louisville Courier Journal-Times, Memphis Commercial Appeal, Milwaukee Wisconsin News, Minneapolis Tribune, Los Angeles Examiner, Los Angeles Express, Los Angeles Herald, Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News, Los Angeles Record, Los Angeles Times, Nashville Banner, New Haven Register, New Orleans Item-Tribune, New Orleans Times Picayune, Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch, Oklahoma City News, Oklahoman, Omaha World Herald, Philadelphia Inquirer, Philadelphia Public Ledger, Pittsburgh Press, Portland Oregonian, Portland Oregon Journal, Providence Bulletin, Richmond News Leader, Rochester Times-Union, St. Louis Globe-Democrat, St. Louis Star, St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press, St. Paul News, Salt Lake City Desert News, Salt Lake City Telegram, San Antonio Express-News, San Francisco Call, San Francisco Chroniele, San Francisco Examiner, Seattle Post-Intelligeneer, Seattle Times, Spokane Spokesman-Review, Syracuse Post-Standard, Syracuse Journal, Toledo Blade, Washington Post and Washington Times.

Flower Matinees Featured by Canada Showmen

Two exhibitors of Ontario have conducted special flower matinees with direct success, thereby performing an act of charity that was looked upon as a wonderful good-will builder.

During the presentation, at Griffin's Theatre, St. Catharines, of "Mademoiselle from Armentieres," children bringing a bouquet were admitted free to one matinee show, prizes for the best flowers being offered by Manager G. J. Forhan. More than 400 bouquets were received and these were distributed among disabled soldiers at the local hospitals and at the Old Folks' Home.

A flower matinee also proved an excellent feature at the Algoma Theatre, Sault Ste. Marie, where some 600 children brought flowers to a Saturday morning show. The lobby was filled to overflowing with the floral gifts and the members of the Rotary Club distributed them at the hospitals and institutions. The stunt was arranged by Manager W. P. McGeachie.

Lange Engaged to Compose Music Scores for Capitol

A contract has been signed between the Capitol Theatre, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures Corporation and Arthur Lange, whereby the noted arranger of musical scores will make all special musical arrangements for the stage presentations and pictures for the Capitol Theatre, and also for the synchronized scores of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures.

The contract calls for the exclusive services of Mr. Lange, with the exception of his commercial work with several of the music publishers.

Lange will be remembered as having conducted the orchestras last season for the musical comedy plays, "Honeymoon Lane" and "Sidewalks of New York." He is accredited with many unusual arrangements of symphonic and jazz compositions.

Roxy Usher Wins Boost to Production Staff

George Friary, one of the Roxy ushers, has been appointed assistant production manager to Douglas Murray, likewise new in the berth of production manager. This is the fourteenth promotion to be made from the uniformed ranks this year.

Tabloid Flares Exploit Sub Crash

A FOUR-PAGE tabloid, following the orthodox make-up and style of the pictorial newspapers, has been circulated about New York City to exploit the showing of "Submarine" at the Embassy Theatre.

The tabloid shows stills from the production with straight news captions telling about a submarine castastrophe in which 40 members of the crew of a submersible were trapped in the torpedo compartment and were rescued by a navy diver.

Advertisements for the Embassy show are featured on the inside pages of the trick tabloid, which was gotten out by Alex Moss, director of advertising and publicity for Columbia Pictures Corp.

Key City Reports

New York City

WHEN a couple of dozen theatres can extract over a half-million in real money from the customers, theatre business, and business in general, cannot be very bad. That is exactly what happened along Broadway the past week and we are not saying a word about second run houses, legits or what have you. Briefly, it looks as though the good work done during August would repeat during September—and why not, with the cooler weather coming on. During the past week honors also appear to be almost evenly divided between sound and silent, with sound perhaps having a shade the better of the argument.

"Fazil," never threatening to push over any records while playing high hat, continued the high marks recently being made at the Roxy. Which serves to demonstrate still further that the movie is mass entertainment and to get real money must play to the masses at their figure. Sharing in the general prosperity, the Paramount also came through with a better than usual week with "The Water Hole" (Par.) and the good returns can be expected to hold up with Jackie Coogan and his Dad as added attractions for the current week. The Strand, resuming its talkie program with "State Street Sadie" (WB) also turned in a splendid gate. This picture is spoken of as a distinct improvement in sound technique.

Jannings in "The Patriot" continues to set the fast pace made the preceding weeks at the Rialto. This one has clicked perfectly with this theatre's patronage and it will probably be good for a month and a half stay. Up in the Rivoli, "Tempest" is still showing strength which is good work for this picture, considering its long run at the Embassy. The Capitol had Marion Davies in "The Cardboard Lover" and this popular actress well demonstrated her pulling power in this town—to the extent that this picture was held for another week. Very satisfactory business. The Cameo repeated an excellent previous week's showing of "Dawn" (Selwyn) and the picture will probably be held.

Among the specials M-G-M's "White Shadows" at the Astor, again came through with flying colors for the week and the same statement can go for First National's "Lilac Time" at the Central. These two, and Warner's "The Terror," at Warners, are gathering in plenty of coin. And they're all done with sound.

Columbia's "Submarine" appears to be all Harry Cohn said it was for reports say it is playing capacity at the Embassy. Harry can now take his vacation with a light heart. There seems to be no let up at the Criterion where "Wings" still holds forth even 'though it's playing stands in most of the larger cities all over the country. Fox's "Air Circus" was the new arrival at the Gaiety last week and did very well for the period. A good Movietone program is helping along. At the Globe "Red Dance" and Movietone (Fox) did another average week.

Minneapolis

THE Minnesota state fair, which draws thousands of visitors to the Twin Cities annually during the first week in September, did its bit toward making the week a happy one theatrically.

The Minnesota Theatre, of course, attracted hundreds of out-of-town visitors who were anxious to see the northwest showhouses, and were greeted by a good program which included "The Sawdust Paradise," Clark and McCullough in "The Interview," and the Publix stage production, "Kat Kabaret." Emil Jannings in "The Patriot" received some fine critical notices, and was very well patronized at the State, but not sufficiently to warrant holding it over a second week. "Three Ring Marriage" at the Lyric proved an enjoyable and popular attraction, while Greta Garbo played to good business in "The Mysterious Lady" at the Grand, a second run loop theatre.

At Pantages "The Foreign Legion" turned out to be a fine business-getter, and it was profitably exploited by the Pantages management. The Hennepin-Orpheum, too, had an unusually good picture in "The Cop" and this film topped off the vaudeville program in excellent fashion.

The neighborhood houses didn't profit much by the State Fair crowds, but they at least enjoyed some cool weather and in some instances showed very good grosses.

Pittsburgh

LABOR DAY WEEK, combined with the advent of cooler weather brought Pittsburgh theatres the best business they have enjoyed in many weeks, many playing to S. R. O., for the first time in a couple of years.

Loew's Penn celebrated its first birthday anniversary, with Marion Davies' "Cardboard Lover" on the screen and the Publix Unit, "Bittersweet Blues" on the stage. An excellent offering from beginning to end, the complete bill was one of the most entertaining ever shown here. The Penn played to S. R. O. all week.

The Stanley had "Warming Up," starring Richard Dix, with sound accompaniment. The film thrilled especially those patrons who understand the grand old game of baseball. But for those who are not interested in the game, it was not so "hot." The stage presentation featured some unusual dancing by the six Berkoff girls headed by Frieda and Gertrude Berkoff. Business for the week was very good.

Loew's Aldine was re-opened after having been closed for the summer, during which time Vitaphone and Movietone were installed. The first offering was "The Street Angel," and the house did a whale of a business, holding the production over for a second week. (This is a rarity in Pittsburgh.) Short subjects included the Fox Movietone Newsreel, the George Bernard Shaw short "talkie," and Clark and McCullough on the Vitaphone.

The Regent had "Lilac Time," with sound accompaniment, and played to the biggest business at this house in years. S. R. O. at all performances.

The Grand and Liberty had "The Street of Sin." The Grand is downtown, and the Liberty in the East End. Both houses did better than average, the film clicking with the patrons. Jannings is creating a tremendous following here.

The Cameraphone had a double bill, using Gotham's "United States Smith," and a second run on "The Jazz Singer." It used Al Jolson phonograph records in connection with the "Jazz Singer." Both productions scored, and "United States Smith" proved to be an excellent comedy. Business was above average.

The Alhambra offered John Gilbert in "Four Walls," a fairly good crook drama. An Our Gang comedy, "Crazy House," made a big hit. Business—average.

The Nixon, legitimate theatre, began a two-week run of "Simba."

San Francisco

DURING the past week in San Francisco, the pictures, generally, did not draw as well as the first run motion picture theatres usually do. The two theatres that did the best business were, Loew's Warfield and the El Capitan theatres. These two reported good business the entire week.

At Loew's Warfield, "The Red Dance" with Dolores Del Rio on the screen, together with the home coming of Rube Wolf filled that theatre the entire week. It is thought that Al Smith on the Fox Movietone attracted many to that theatre. "Phyllis of the Follies"on screen at the El Capitan, was exceptionally well received together with high class presentation acts, all week at this theatre.

"The King of Kings," was shown a second week at the St. Francis Theatre, and although this time not spoken against by ministers, rabbis and organizations, as sections of it were changed, it did not draw well. It was shown at popular prices. The Granada Theatre reported only fair business with "The River Pirate," shown together with a good Publix Revue, entitled, "Knick Knacks."

The Embassy Theatre reported fair business only with "Women They Talk About." The Union Square Theatre also reported fair business with "Dancing Days," and "Devils Trademark," shown together with vaudeville. "Jazz Mad," on the screen shown together with vaudeville at the Golden Gate Theatre, did not draw well. The Orpheum Theatre did very well with "Honeymoon Flats," also shown with the regular Orpheum vaudeville. These shows now are 3 hours long. In fact too long for many.

In the residential theatres, the Coliseum Theatre was crowded every evening with "The Thirteenth Hour," together with presentation acts. The Alexandria Theatre also reported remarkable business with "The Actress," as did the Majestic Theatre with "The Gaucho."

Chicago

FALL weather conditions continued to help Chicago motion picture theatres the first part of last week, and many houses had an excellent box office report.

"Wings," re-created with sound and brought back to McVickers for its first popular price showing in Chicago, played to large crowds throughout the week, while "Excess Baggage" did a fair business at the Chicago and "O Kay" drew well at the Oriental. "Lilac Time," in its fourth week at the Roosevelt, continued to be a popular attraction. United Artists Theatre also was going strong with "Tempest" as its drawing card.

The Capitol had "King of Kings" as its feature picture, with Movietone features, attendance being very satisfactory. The Avalon offered "The Foreign Legion" as its screen attraction and the Tunney-Heeney fight pictures as an added feature, plus a big stage show, the combination going over big.

The Granada and Marbro Theatres played "A Grain of Dust," both offering their usual big stage specialties, the Granada including in its program Benny Meroff and his orchestra, John Steel in person, Movietone and Vitaphone; the Marbro including Charles Kaley and his orchetra and "Kiddie Jazz Revue," Movietone and Vitaphone, both having another big week.

Albany

EXHIBITORS in Albany and Troy were jubilant last week when business came back with a bang and on Labor Day, crowds stormed the theatres in such numbers as to all but set a new record for the day. In these two cities, Labor Day really marks the opening of the fall, so far as the theatres are concerned. This year the day was all that could be desired, at least from the standpoint of the exhibitor, rain falling for several hours and forcing thousands to the theatres for their entertainment. The weather became cooler on Tuesday and continued so throughout the remainder of the week, adding thousands of dollars, no doubt, to the box office receipts.

The outstanding feature of the week easily proved to be "Wings" at the Capitol, where it played to admissions ranging from 50 cents to a dollar and a half; it packed the house to the very roof every night with matinees running nearly as large.

"The Patriot" opened extremely large at the Mark Strand in Albany, playing to standing room only, on Labor day, but slipping somewhat during the week to the extent that there were vacant seats at the second show on more than one night. The Leland, using Lon Chaney in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh" and facing opposition from the Capitol and the Mark Strand, played to full houses, however, throughout the week. At the Clinton Square, double features including "Three Ringed Marriage" and "The Devil's Skipper" went over very well day in and day out, and turned in a nice profit.

At the Mark Ritz, "Out of the Ruins" fared well during the week. Proctor's Grand used "The Hawk's Nest," but this picture was panned by the newspaper critics and probably did not contribute much toward making up the bill generally. Reports from the neighborhood houses in Albany are such as to indicate that the owners of these theatres have absolutely no kick in so far as business was concerned for the week.

At the Troy theatre, there was a split week with "Warming Up," pleasing good crowds. The last of the week was given over to "Loves of an Actress" and this also went over well, in fact probably better than the first of the week. Proctor's Troy theatre flashed up "Diamond Handcuffs" in its newspaper advertisements and the picture pleased big crowds. The Lincoln used "Just Married," but without doing anything remarkable in the way of business. Neighborhood houses in Troy report good business for the week. The American, in Troy, one of the Stanley houses, reopened this past week, after having been closed for a month or so.

Tampa

WITH a very good Sunday business, followed by an excellent Monday, Labor Day, all Tampa theatres started the week with a surplus. "Tempest" was the featured attraction at the Tampa for the first half, and that picture was a real card. It not only pulled 'em the first two days but it kept them coming the following two. "The Water Hole" was another good card and it kept the check up over average for the last half, so the week went over better than average, and everybody was pleased.

The Victory had another talkie, or at least one with several taking scenes, "Women They Talk About." Gov. Smith on the Movietone helped out on the draw and then there were four good Vitaphone acts to round out the program, so the Victory went over to excellent business.

"Heart to Heart" opened the week for the Strand, playing two days and getting in on the holiday crowds, so it showed up nicely and gave that house better than average business, but "The Race for Life," which followed did not prove a draw. There was a time when the dog pictures were sure-fire, but fans seem to have grown tired of them and as a consequence the business was just fair. "Bachelor's Paradise" finished the week, and this picture went over to about average returns.

The Franklin, with second runs at cheap prices, continues to attract good crowds. This week they brought back the old Chaplin, "The Gold Rush" and it made 'em laugh. Then they had "The 50-50 Girl" and "The Cossacks." This latter picture proved the best card of the trio.

Los Angeles

DUE to a heat wave which struck this section Tuesday, following Labor Day, matinee crowds at all theatres fell off and night attendance has not been up to standard, ostensibly due to the same weather contion.

"Four Walls," which did well at Loew's State, was succeeded by "The Cardboard Lover," another M-G-M picture, which opened with satisfactory business with Marion Davies as star and the names of Jetta Goudal and Nils Asther featured in connection with the attraction.

At the Metropolitan Theatre "Four Sons" holds forth. This picture had a run here at the Carthay Circle some time ago. It is said to be doing fairly. Another repeat appears at the Criterion, where "Wings" is the attraction. This is doing moderately well, although it formerly ran at the Biltmore.

"The Godless Girl," the C. B. DeMille offering, continues to draw average business at the Biltmore, where it is now in its third week.

The Samuel Goldwyn picture, "Two Lovers," still holds on at United Artists, but is doing only a fair business. "Lilac Time" remains at the Carthay Circle, in its second month, with business average.

Hollywood houses are still enjoying better business than theatres down town. "The Terror," at Warner Brothers' Hollywood Theatre, has continued to draw, despite the hot weather and good business is also reported at Grauman's Chinese, where "White Shadows in the South Seas" also continues.

Oklahoma City

THEATRICAL business in Oklahoma City the past week has been very good, and the weather, following a good rain, has been much cooler than for some time past.

Capitol: Esther Ralston in "The Sawdust Paradise," supported by Hobart Bosworth and Reed Howes, enjoyed splendid business, and the Vitaphone units are among the best yet seen here, and the Fox movietone news lets you see and hear the world's happenings.

Empress: "Lilac Time," starring Colleen Moore started on its second week with full and pleased houses. Gary Cooper lent splendid support and the picture a First National, was pronounced excellent.

Criterion: Gary Cooper and Fay Wray in Paramount's "The First Kiss" pleased big business for a week.

Liberty: "Fazil" in its second week, continued to enjoy capacity business.

Indianapolis

MOVIE business was somewhat healthier last week due to State Fair crowds in the city but receipts did not meet expectations.

John Barrymore in "The Tempest" at Loew's Palace and Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell in "Street Angel" led the week's business.

"Street Angel" was held the second week because of its popularity.

"Beggars of Life" at the Indiana and "Heart to Heart" at the Circle, did fair business. Dick Powell, Circle master of Ceremonies, presented the "Twelfth Anniversary Revue."

Neighborhood houses reported business fair.

Seattle

BUSINESS was about average for this time of year at the first run houses last week. The Seattle, key house, featured "Oh Kay" on the screen and Fanchon-Marco's "Doggone Idea" on the stage. The film was not very enthusiastically received; generally considered below par. The stage show was rather entertaining, and the work of Gene Morgan as master of ceremonies continues to find increased favor with the audiences. Business just average; not what it should be for this house.

At the Fifth Avenue Theatre, "The Red Dance" played to satisfactory houses, although it could not be considered a big money-getter. It was heartily praised by most audiences. Hermie King and the Band had a number of well-liked specialties. Business fairly good only.

"State Street Sadie" at the Blue Mouse Theatre finishes up its second week to very big business, with supporting Vitaphone and Movietone shorts. The film could have easily played another week, but previous bookings prevented. Business very strong for the entire engagement.

Across the street at the Music Box Theatre, "Glorious Betsy" played its fourth and final week to big houses also. This opening attraction at Hamrick's new house established a wonderful box office mark in its month run, and set a pace that will mean plenty of dollars if future films can keep up with it.

The big theatrical surprise of the week was the dismal showing made by "King of Kings" at its first popular price engagement here. Universal put the film in the Columbia Theatre at 50c admission at all times, and it hardly rippled the surface of the show business, standing patrons out in line for just a short time on one night, and the rest of the week playing to very mediocre business. A second week follows, due to contracts and not box-office reports.

"The Road to Romance" was just a fair money-getter at the United Artists Theatre, now renamed the Coliseum. Business here was below average. The same might be said for "The Poor Nut" at the Embassy Theatre, which is rumored to be changing over to a two-a-week first run policy in place of the present week-run schedule at 15c and 25c

"Anybody Here Seen Kelly?" was a very mediocre film at Pantages, in conjunction with the usual vaudeville. At the Orpheum, "Serenade" was the screen feature, but despite the star the film was evidence in itself of why the big first run houses shelved it and then sold it to this vaudeville house. The stage show was quite acceptable, and business was good.

Neighborhood business, with the exception of one or two Vitaphone houses, has been very light during recent weeks, and suburban managers are hoping for an early autumn as a stimulant to business. "The Trial of Mary Dugan" on the stage of the Metropolitan Theatre at $3.30 top has done a very strong business for the last seven days.

Birmingham

BUSINESS was sub-normal in Birmingham the past week, although the Ritz, with F B O's "Perfect Crime," with dialogue and sound effects, had a very good week's business.

The Alabama, with John Barrymore in "Tempest" had a comparatively poor week. Reports indicate that the Temple, with Marion Davies in "The Cardboard Lover" (M-G-M) had an average week.

The Trianon, with Tiffany-Stahl's "The Devil's Skipper," featuring Belle Bennett, flopped. "Women They Talk About" (Warners), with William Collier, Jr., Irene Rich and Audrey Ferris, had a fair week at the Strand.

Business held up reasonably well in the neighborhood houses.

Cincinnati

"LILAC TIME," in its third week at the Stillman, has done the biggest business in the twelve years the house has been operating. Crowds have attended every performance. Extra shows have been crowded into the program by opening at ten o'clock in the morning, and patrons have been standing three and four rows deep. Needless to say, it will continue at least a fourth week, making a trilogy of "The Big Parade," and "The Jazz Singer," the only three pictures to play four weeks this year.

"State Street Sadie" also broke records at the Cameo. This was the first talking picture shown at the Cameo under the new 100 per cent talking policy recently adopted for this house. Acknowledged to be an underworld picture of average drawing power, it was raised to a high level of entertainment by the talking sequences which were clear and distinct throughout. It also is being held over.

"Excess Baggage" played to very big business at the Allen. A splendid picture, with Haines doing a straight role with great credit.

"The Cameraman" did capacity business at the State. This was due both to the really fine entertaiment qualities of the picture and to the personal appearance of the "Our Gang" comedy kids. The picture was liked well enough to stand on its own feet, however, and was acclaimed the best picture Buster Keaton has made in a long while.

Keith's Palace had a very good week with "Sawdust Paradise" as the feature attraction, coupled with a fine vaudeville bill headlined by Wallace Eddinger. This was not regarded as one of the big drawing cards of the year, but it pleased those who take their films seriously.

"Just Married" divided honors of the week with "Modern Mothers" at Keith's East 105th Street. "Just Married" was very well liked, attended and reviewed. Good, light comedy, well presented, offered satisfactory entertainment. "Modern Mothers," also well done, gave the youngsters a great kick. It was food for thought, well sugar coated with fine sets and exciting situations.

The Park brought its Greater Movie Season to a successful close with "Four Walls" the first half of the week and "Hot News" the last half of the week. Although totally different in type, they were both well rated and made good showings on the right side of the ledger.

Neighborhood houses are not yet playing any of the new pictures, and so cannot base their business on any new conditions. Things are undoubtedly slow in the outlying district both because the attractions are from last season, and also because the neighborhood houses are silent.

Portland, Ore.

VACATIONS are about over for the majority, the hot weather is behind us, and with the continuation of Greater Movie Season, and an additional supply of superfilm attractions attendance is showing a marked increase at practically all houses.

"The Fleet's In" and brought Clara Bow with it again. It is having a world premiere at The Broadway, and has proved one of the best business stimulants in weeks. George Stoll and his merry musical gang put over in nice shape the novelty number King for a day and as usual called in Herman Kenin and his Multnomah Hotel band for Monday.

"The Peoples Theatre came out with a first run in "Vamping Venus" at popular prices and did a nice business, especially over Labor Day. Charlie Murray and Louise Fazenda furnished the comedy in liberal quantity.

Another big increase in patronage was reported by Manager Floyd Maxwell at the Portland Theatre with "The Racket" which in spite of some fourteen cuts gave the audience a new angle on crook melodrama. The program entertainingly completed by Fanchon & Marco's "Hi-Yaller" stage show, which included the Four Covans, with novelty tap dancing, followed by the Four Emperors of Harmony; Evans and Weaver led off with tap numbers aided by the dusky ensemble of maidens in an elaborate setting. Iris Wilkins offered "Madame Butterfly" as an organ solo, and Don Wilkins called the turns in snappy fashion.

The Auditorium opened for a lengthy operatic season with the Britz Opera Company. Their first attraction "Sari" sponsored by some of the leading clubs did a nice business. Outstanding soloists were James Stevens, Nadj Rosetti and Ed Andrews, veteran light opera comedian.

"The Foreign Legion" with Norman Kerry and Mary Nolan taking the leads, proved one of the best film attractions of the fall season at Pantages, and with accompanying acts did a big business.

Attendance made a small gain at the Columbia Theatre with the comedy "How to Handle Women" as the major attraction. Sampietro and his boys played their usual snappy stuff and International News reel rounded out a good bill.

Intrigue was found at the core of "The Divine Sinner" the attraction at the Capitol. Attendance also showing increase.

Dallas

UNUSUALLY cool weather the past week had little effect on business at the Dallas first run theatres, although receipts as a whole were good. Business the past week was directly traceable to the pictures being shown and where the attraction was weak the gross reflected it very clearly.

"Sawdust Paradise" with Esther Ralston, at the Melba failed to get more than fair business for the seven day run but a small profit was shown which was remarkable considering the attraction offered, which was far below the highly entertaining pictures the Melba has been accustomed to showing. However, considering everything the results of the week were higher than expected.

At the Majestic "Gang War," starring Olive Borden and Jack Pickford, got the business and proved to be a very entertaining attraction. A full house was checked off every night and matinees were much heavier. The real drawing card on the program was Ben Turpin in person, and although his skit was dissappointing to the patrons, he packed them in every night.

"Forgotten Faces," with Clive Brook, Mary Brian and William Powell, accounted for good receipts at the Palace, for the past week although nothing to compare with the previous week when "Lilac Time" was shown. The picture was fair entertainment but did nothing to enhance the Palace with the patrons. A good Publix presentation helped to put the program over and was well received.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin," with Margarita Fischer and an all-star cast, brought the Capitol packed houses at all performances and lifted the theatre out of the fair business rut which it has been in for the past several weeks. This attraction will no doubt be the turning point for the capitol as the new 20-piece symphony orchestra first made its appearance with this picture and was more than well received.

The Old Mill was able to account for only fair business with "The Big Noise" featuring Chester Conklin and Alice White. The picture was not strong enough to stand up in the face of the unusually heavy competition of the week.

At the Arcadia, "Ladies of the Mob" with Clara Bow and Richard Arlen, "Thirteenth Hour," with Lionel Barrymore, and "Grandma's Boy" featuring Harold Lloyd, had fair receipts for the week but not the usual good business.

Harrisburg, Pa.

FORMIDABLE competition for the regular theatres of Harrisburg was provided during the week by the showing of "Wings," for which the Majestic Theatre, which has been dark all summer, was reopened. The Majestic, as a general proposition, is devoted to legitimate road shows or stock, with an occasional picture spectacle. "Wings" was shown daily matinee and night—with night top prices $1.50, but notwithstanding the relatively high prices of seats it drew splendid crowds while the other movie theatres suffered some slight loss of patronage.

Nevertheless those who did attend the regular first run houses generally were well satisfied with the merits of the programs. The Colonial presented "The Street Angel" with Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, and the criticisms all were very flattering. Probably the Colonial suffered less than any other theatre in amount of business lost in competition with "Wings." Those who saw "The First Kiss," starring Fay Wray and Gary Cooper, at the Victoria, seemed to be very well satisfied, while Marion Davies in "The Cardboard Lover" at Loew's Regent provided a lot of comedy intermingled with romance which appealed especially to feminine patronage. The State offered, for the first half of the week, Syd Chaplin in "The Missing Link," while Charley Ray, the picture star, appeared in person in a clever skit in the vaudeville half of the State's program. The Broad Street Theatre offered a double bill consisting of "So This Is Love," with Shirley Mason, William Collier, Jr., and Johnnie Walker, and "Buried Gold," starring Al. Hoxie. "Honor Bound" was successfuly shown in the National, with George O'Brien in the principal role, while "The Haunted Ship," wth Montague Love, Dorothy Sebastian and Tom Santichi, drew fair crowds to the Russell. The annual Harrisburg Fair, held all week, was a counter attraction to the picture shows.

Cincinnati

WHETHER it was the observance of Paramount Week, the weather or some other factor, the deponent sayeth not, but the fact remains that all Cincinnati houses enjoyed what amounted to return of regular season's business during last week.

Topping the list in this respect was the Albee, with "The First Kiss," aided and abetted by one of the best vaudeville programs seen at this house in many moons. Labor Day saw a packed house shortly after the doors opened, and this was the rule rather than the exception throughout the week.

The Capitol, presenting Esther Ralston in "Sawdust Paradise," with sound effects, did an excellent business; in fact, better than has been experienced at this house since the summer slump.

Emil Jannings in "The Patriot" at the Lyric, playing second week, kept the customers coming in a steady stream, which also was true during the first week's engagement. The picture, as well as the attendance, left little to be desired.

Keith's with "The Mating Call" enjoyed excellent attendance, the business at this house likewise being such as to bring joy to the hearts of the management.

"Just Married" at the Strand got a big share of the week's money. The play was seen here in legitimate, and later in stock, both within the comparatively recent past, which blazed a trail for the picture.

"Stocks and Blondes," first half, and "If I Were Single," last-half, did well at the Family, all the regulars turning out in addition to an apparently additional clientele, this house playing at 15 cents top.

Palace, vaudeville and pictures, had an extra good week, the Labor Day crowds helping swell the sum-total of the week's receipts.

Atlanta

OPENING with phenomenal business on Monday, Labor Day, theatres in Atlanta, with the exception of the Capitol and Keith's Georgia took an appreciable slump, in most instances falling below the average.

Loew's Capitol easily takes the lead far above all other houses, marking the house's initial week under the Loew regime, succeeding Universal's which was relinquished on last Saturday night after last show, with box-office history. John Gilbert and Joan Crawford in M-G-M's "Four Walls" plus a first class vaudeville drew steady crowds throughout the week despite continuous heavy rains which whipped the majority of theatres into red.

The Howard, playing Emil Jannings and Lewis Stone in "The Patriot," suffered considerably. Weather conditions and lack of public drawing power of the picture itself caused the downfall. Although acclaimed as a piece of cinematic art, "The Patriot" failed at the box-office.

The Rialto held a fair week with "Women They Talk About" and would have had an increase had rains been less frequent. Likewise, the Metropolitan's bill, "Pajamas" went over well but fell due to rains.

"Dare-Devil's Reward" and "Branded Sombrero" brought the Tudor about an average week.

The New Alamo took a slump with four second runs and "Gypsy of the North."

Loew's Grand, which began its new policy of return engagements of roadshows and occasional first runs, although opening with good business on Monday, starved the remainder of the week showing "The Big Parade."

Kansas City

A RETURN of warm weather temporarily halted the return to normal attendance marks in Kansas City, although the week's business at most of the first run down town theatres was not what could be called unprofitable.

"Excess Baggage" at Loew's Midland drew fairly well all week, although not quite what would have been expected of it if weather conditions had been more favorable. At the Mainstreet "The Red Mark" did a good weeks' business, the attendance remaining at about the same point it has stood for the last month or so. "San Francisco Nights" at the Pantages held up exceptionally well all week, playing to well filled houses at both matinee and night performances.

"Court Martial" at the Uptown did not quite measure up to the attendance of several previous pictures, but the week's attendance could be called good. Nothing unusual in exploitation was done by any of the theatres.

Ottawa

FEATURES of excellence and patronage all around that was highly enthusing to exhibitors were noted in Ottawa, Ontario, during the week of September 3, business being of high volume everywhere. This activity was aided considerably through the observance of Labor Day on the Monday and the return to the city of many who had spent the summer at country and mountain residences. They were all eager for the pictures and they were treated to good ones.

Wide comment was aroused by "The Patriot" at the Regent Theatre particularly because of Emil Jannings' acting as the crazy czar. Others in the cast were also capable, making it one of the best acted pictures in years. There were a couple of kicks about the "mistresses" but, otherwise, the feature went over big.

Another unusual feature was "Forgotten Faces" which was the dramatic treat at B. F. Keith's Theatre. Crowds liked it immensely because of the good story and interesting characterizations. Attendance was fine.

Still another popular feature was "Out of the Ruins" at the Centre Theatre, in which Richard Barthelmess continued to live up to his high standard. It was absorbing drama with several punches that stirred the patrons. A big week here too.

For good comedy, mixed with some drama, there was "Hot News" at the Imperial Theatre. Bebe Daniels and a flock of assistant artists all showed well and the patrons voted it one of Daniels' best in a year. With the exception of Monday, matinees were a little off but evening crowds were good.

The Fern Theatre, catering to a neighborhood clientele, had an excellent attraction in "Legion of the Condemned" and the crowds responded nicely. For the last half, the juveniles were enthused with their old friend, Tom Mix, in "Arizona Wildcat," with a Felix cartoon, a comedy and the serial "Masked Menace."

The Rex Theatre was once more busy, a reason being the circus thriller, "Wagon Show," and a chapter of "Vanishing Rider," with a comedy and news weekly.

Baltimore

TWO theatres playing talking films, one playing a sound and musical picture and another playing a straight silent movie, did excellent business during the week beginning, Monday September 3.

"Lights of New York," co-starring Helene Costello and Cullen Landis, was the feature talkie at the Metropolitan and New. During its first week at those houses where it played day and date, business was excellent.

The sound film was "Four Sons," which stood them up practically during the entire week afternoons and evenings at the New Theatre. At each of the houses short talking and sound films were shown on the same bills.

Crowds also gathered at Loew's Century where "The Cardboard Lover," starring Marion Davies, was the featured film attraction. The stage presentation act was entitled "Wonderful Girl," which was headed by Ted Claire and his Century syncopators with a cast of vaudeville headliners. The picture and the stage show appealed greatly to the audiences.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" proved a flop at the Auditorium, a legitimate house where an attempt was made to road show it at the $1 top at nights and 50 cents top afternoons. This could hardly be expected to come out good when right next door at the Stanley, John Barrymore in the sound production of "The Tempest" at 60 cents top evenings and 35 cents top afternoons.

"Tempest," however, at the Stanley, did not go over as well as expected. While this picture is one of the finest in which Barrymore has been seen, business there for the week could not be classed as pretty good. An orchestra and organ furnish music there and other films were shown on the bill.

"Peter the Corsair," the foreign made production starring Paul Richter, proved a flop at the Little Theatre, the 250 seater operated by the Motion Picture Guild. It appeared that competition offered at other houses was too strong.

"Home James," starring Laura La Plante, was the feature film attraction at the Keith-Albee New Garden. This picture was entertaining comedy but business was only fair throughout the week with five acts of Keith-Albee high class vaudeville on the same bill.

At the Keith-Albee Hippodrome, however, "The Night Flyer," starring William Boyd, proved an entertaining attraction and with five acts of Keith-Albee family time vaudeville, the business picked up considerably for that week and wound up good.

At Loew's Valencia "The Water Hole" with Jack Holt and Nancy Carroll proved a fairly good business getter and picked up strongly during the last two days. But poor records continue to furnish the music on the non-synchronous device used.

Salt Lake City

THEATRE business at the down-town first run houses is proving to be very satisfactory since the closing of the resorts on Labor Day although very warm weather has again been experienced here this week in comparison with the cool early fall days of last week. However, the evenings are refreshingly cool and the evening performances are very well attended.

The Capitol Theatre enjoyed splendid patronage during their week's run of "The Water Hole." A Paramount picture in color, which was shown in conjunction with the Fanchon and Marco stage presentation.

It is reported that highly satisfactory business has resulted at the Pantages Theatre during the showing of "The Foreign Legion" in connection with the vaudeville performance.

The Gem Theatre also experienced an unusually good week due to the picture presentation "The Cop," featuring Wm. Boyd.

"The Patriot," with Emil Jannings, Florence Vidor and Neil Hamilton, though received by some as rather gruesome, was well attended and commended in regard to the acting and cast, by all, at the Victory. This picture was synchronized.

A fairly good week was had at the Paramount Empress Theatre, the feature picture having been "Just Married," which was received warmly by the audiences.

Conrad Nagel and May McAvoy in "If I Were Single" played to crowded houses at the American, where the Country Store stage presentation still seems to be the main attraction.

Wesco Leases Liberty, Portland, to Hamrick

John Hamrick, owner and general manager of the Blue Mouse and Music Box Theatres in Seattle, Washington, the Blue Mouse Theatre in Tacoma and the Blue Mouse Theatre in Portland, Ore., last week announced the leasing of the Liberty Theatre in Portland from West Coast Theatres, Inc. He has already begun alterations and installation of Vitaphone and Movietone equipment, and plans to reopen the remodeled house in September or October under the name of the Music Box Theatre. It will be operated as a long-run house for Warner Brothers' special attractions.

Prior to leasing to Mr. Hamrick, the Liberty was a first-run house operated by West Coast on a program picture policy.

Place Film in Cornerstone of Film Center Bldg.

Two strips of motion picture film, one the ordinary print and the other containing dialogue and music synchronization, have been placed inside of the cornerstone of the Film Center Building in New York City. This is in the nature of a tribute by the owners of the building to the motion picture industry.

Opinions on Pictures

Heart to Heart

A Good Number of Its Kind

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A PLEASANT little romance is served up here, one that doesn't demand too much brain exertion from an audience, but which glides along rather smoothly, telling its story with a minimum of effort.

The thread of the plot is thin, very thin, but it has its appealing moments in the convincing manner in which its scenes are enacted. Several of the sequences carry the homely touch so characteristic of the director, William Beaudine, when he gets into the heart of a story.

The idea brings forth an American girl who marries an Italian prince. When she becomes a widow she returns to the old homestead, after years of absence. It's a hick town, and the natives put on the dog to welcome the princess. She surprises them by appearing in simple garb. Hence they don't recognize her. And she is mistaken for a dressmaker. You can see that the idea here is worthy of comedy complications—and there it has been given.

It's a picture full of good hokum and should click very well with the average customers.

Louise Fazenda and Lucien Littlefield do first rate character work, and Lloyd Hughes and Mary Astor attend to the romance.

Drawing Power: Should get over with cast. Suitable for average trade. Should be hum-dinger in small town. Exploitation Angles: Play up title and feature Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes. Tell of the visit of native daughter to her old home town after years of absence. Feature Louise Fazenda.

Produced and distributed by First National. Length, six reels. Released, Sept., 1928. The Cast: Mary Astor, Lloyd Hughes, Lucien Littlefield, Louise Fazenda, Virginia Gray, Eileen Manning. Director, William Beaudine.

Submarine

Spectacular and Thrilling—a Great Picture

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE Columbia boys have something to be proud of in this picture—one which can stand up with the rest of the better offerings and take its bow. It surely unfolds a background of shots which can be called genuinely novel and picturesque. It has all the flavor of an exciting news-reel plus dramatic effects which make it doubly interesting. The catastrophes of the two submarines of Uncle Sam which shocked the nation some time ago provide the substance of the plot.

It is a picture which shouldn't be missed. It is graphic in its shots—many of which heretofore have never been caught by a camera. The action takes the spectator to the bottom of the ocean and there discloses a group of sufferers imprisoned in a submarine, who take hope and courage even though the fumes of their atmosphere have doomed them to die.

The plot is simplicity itself—it revolves around heroics and rescues dovetailed with amazing thrills. It isn't entirely morbid. There are moments when it releases some first rate humor. The pathos is well tempered. With everything in tip-top working order it proves that the director knows his stuff. The picture is also finely acted by a cast comprising Jack Holt, Dorothy Revier, Ralph Graves, Clarence Burton and Arthur Rankin. Altogether "Submarine" is there forty ways — and then some. Nothing quite like it has been revealed before on the screen. Yeah, the Columbia boys should feel proud.

Drawing Power: Title and realism and good advertising should make this a real seller. For big and little houses. Exploitation Angles: Stress plot and play up heroics and that it is a film version of what transpires when a submarine tragedy occurs. Play up Jack Holt—who stages a come-back.

THEME: Drama of submarine tragedy.

Produced and distributed by Columbia. Length, eight reels. Released, Sept. 1928. The Cast: Jack Holt, Clarence Burton, Ralph Graves, Arthur Rankin, Dorothy Revier. Director, Frank R. Capra.

Power

Fairly Well Done

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

WILLIAM BOYD and Alan Hale are the two swaggering, roystering rivals in love and Jacqueline Logan is the sweet little thing with all the wile and craft of a gold digger in this he-man story, patterned preeminently for the masculine. The story is fairly interesting, it being the account of the rivals' exploits and of how they were dished out of their savings by a sweet and attractive dame.

It is for the most part comedy, although there is one thrill climax. Set against a background of dam construction, the story is paced evenly, is spiced with mannish titles and humor and holds its own as appropriate celluloid for practically all sorts of houses. The men'll like it, so will the lady folk and the kids.

Drawing Power: A fairly good attraction anywhere. Exploitation Angles: Feature Boyd, who gets the "he-man" roles and Hale as a comedian. Use the riveter as attractor. Use material on dam construction.

THEME: Comedy drama of the love exploits of two fellow dam workers. They both get involved in a feud over different girls and one of the lassies gets her hands on all their savings. Though they get stung, they still pursue their little pastimes.

Produced by Ralph Block. Distributed by Pathe. To be released Sept 23. Length, 6,092 feet. The Cast: William Boyd, Alan Hale, Jacqueline Logan, Jerry Drew, Joan Bennett, Carol Lombard, Pauline Curley. Story and Continuity by Tay Garnett. Director, Howard Higgin.

Diamond Handcuffs

Nice Little Production

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

HERE'S a satisfying piece. The customers should find it so in its three stories cleverly interwoven one with the other and in the good acting, production and direction. An idea from Stevenson—how a ruby fascinated and brought misfortune to all who possessed it—furnishes the theme and it is a theme which has not been movieized to death, at least not yet.

You have stark tragedy in an African diamond mine in the first story, a triangle in a modern setting in the second, and an underworld locale in the third and last. Charles Stevens and Lena Malena do good work in the first (this girl Lena exhibits plenty of talent), Conrad Nagel, Gwen Lee and John Roche in the second, and Eleanor Boardman, Sam Hardy and Lawrence Gray in the final tale. All of the stories are complete and although they are laid in different locales they are all connected by the diamond and by the presence of Lena Malena, who finds death trying to possess it.

Drawing Power: A nice little puller. Exploitation Angles: The press book is obliging in this respect.

THEME: Three stories dealing with the pursuit of a diamond, which brings ill luck to whomsoever possesses it.

Produced by Cosmopolitan. Distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Released, May 5. The Cast: Eleanor Boardman, Sam Hardy, Conrad Nagel, Lawrence Gray, Gwen Lee, John Roche, Lena Malena, Chas. Stevens, George Cooper, Lew Harvey E. Alyn Warren. Story by Carey Wilson and Henry C. Vance. Continuity, Bradley King. Titles, Joe Farnham. Scenario, Willis Goldbeek. Director, John P. McCarthy.

"Polar Perils"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THIS frigid comedy, starring Monty Collins, sparkles interestingly now and then, and ever so often lapses into a calm and rigid state, uninterrupted by gags. It is gaited too slowly for its peppy star and to this reporter seems but a fair Mermaid comedy.

The Arctic wastes, dumb Eskimos, icy igloos, flapping seals, plenty of cold and all the rest of the Polar attractions are the uncongenial surroundings in which Monty, attractive Estelle Bradley and their negro servant find themselves when their plane, bound for the Pole and glory, crashes. They find refuge in an Eskimo colony and receive a freezing reception.

The chief bits of fun consist of Monty's efforts to fish through the ice, his continual precipitations into the water, the pursuit of the negro by a persevering seal, and a lot of helter-skelter of no particular importance. Miss Bradley is used for pictorial loveliness, and the main task of comedy making fall on Monty and his African slave. The Eskimos come through with a scene showing them eating Monty's clothes with evident enjoyment.

Hot Heels

Good Work, Mr. Tryon

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

OF course, everyone is aware of the astounding progress that Glenn Tryon has made in his latest few vehicles. From the status of just-ordinary-comedian he has risen to be one of the top-notchers in screen humor. Given worthwhile story material this boy can take his place at the front of the procession.

He turns in a dandy performance in "Hot Heels." All the way through he is zippily dispensing gags, and with an individual technique, too. There are some behind-the-soda-counter scenes that are just as good as those in "Speedy," and he has a brilliant comedy climax in an Apache dance. The most effective sort of pantomine is on display in this little episode, Tryon and Patsy Ruth Miller working as the dancers to clock-work rhythm. This is the film's high light, and it is a good one.

But the climax of the story—a horse race—is a flop. Too bad that the good work of previous reels had to terminate so weakly.

This much is certain: give Tryon genuinely good stories and you can rest assured that he will come through with flying colors.

Drawing Power: A good comedy for any house. Explotation Angles: Wake up audiences with regard to this talented performer. Stage a "hot heels' dancing contest. Tie-up with shoe stores. Capitalize on sidewalk foot prints.

THEME: Small town hotel owner, sells his property to finance show of dancing girl with whom he is smitten. She thinks him a freshie, but when he risks his all, and is nearly ruined by confidence men and saves his fortune by winning a horse race, they come to an understanding and wed.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Released, May 13. Length, 5,874 feet. The Cast: Glenn Tyron, Patsy Ruth Miller, Gretel Yoltz, James Bradbury, Sr., Tod Sloan, Lloyd Whitlock. Story and direction by Wm. Craft. Scenario, Harry O. Hoyt. Cameraman, Arthur Todd.

The House of Shame

Good Box Office Material

(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

ATYPICALLY true-to-life domestic situation, handled in an adroit manner and brought to the screen as exceptionally fine entertainment. While many other films of a domestic nature have fallen by the wayside, due to the utilizing of time-worn triangle "gags," this Chesterfield production from the pen of Lee Authmar, stands out, because of the novel treatment of its story. The interest is held throughout the entire footage with the unfolding of many unexpected twists, and a gripping element of suspense.

Virginia Brown Faire, heading a strong cast, is given plenty of opportunity to display her ability, and proves a natural. Creighton Hale, in the role of Virginia's cheating husband, gives a commendable performance, as does Lloyd Whitlock, portraying the lover. Florence Dudley, Fred Walton and Carlton King round out the support. Credit for excellent direction goes to Burton King.

When the wife finds that her husband has been misappropriating the funds of his employer, she offers to intercede in his behalf. The employer interpreting her offer in the worldly light of such overtures, not only does not press the charge but advances the husband from cashier to manager of the company. In the meantime gossip links the names of the employer and wife.

Following her sacrifice, the wife learns the perfidy of her husband, who has become enmeshed in the toils of a gold-digging blonde. Subsequent complications come thick and fast, when wife and employer realize they love each other. In a maniacal frenzy, the husband is killed when he backs under a motor car, and the unhappy wife finally finds happiness with the man who really loves her.

Drawing Power: There is no question as to this one being a box-office click, as it is a picture that the average audience is bound to enjoy. Exploitation Angles: Play up title and novel situations.

Vultures of the Sea

A Thrilling Sea Story

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

HERE is a serial that promises to be a little bit out of the ordinary. It is produced more along the lines of a feature picture with each of the chapters almost a story in itself. It promises to have all of the action and all of the suspense of the usual serial with an added touch of interest because it is just a little bit different.

It is a sea tale whose tremendous possibilities are revealed in the first three chapters, which were all that were revealed for the purpose of this review. Ordinalily a reviewer is not partial to these serials, but I confess a desire to see the balance of it. As usual in stories of this kind the types are more or less rough and tough, but they are, nevertheless, interesting because they are kept in action with almost every foot of each chapter.

The story has to do with this rough crew aboard ship. There has been a murder committed because there is loot hidden aboard the ship. An innocent man is condemned to the gallows and he has but thirty days to live. His son is satisfied of his innocence and he ships back on the bark to clear up the mystery. He falls into love with the girl owner of the ship, who has been left in charge of the cruel mate. Attempts are made to do away with the youth and the girl. They have some thrilling experiences and they come through them all safely. They will continue to do so until the real murderer is discovered and the loot recovered, but they are going to offer some thrilling entertainment before the mystery is all cleared up.

Shirley Mason and Johnnie Walker are in the starring roles, with Tom Santschi featured. The production is exceptional for a serial. There are many remarklable shots in the rigging of the ship and elsewhere. Richard Thorpe is to be commended for his good direction. The production was personally supervised by Nat Levine, who presents the serial in the name of Mascot Serials.

The cast, in addition to Miss Mason, Walker and Santschi, includes Boris Karloff, John Carpenter, George Magrill, Joe Bennett, Arthur Dewey, Frank Hagney, Joseph Mack, J. P. Lockney and Lafe McKee.

The Desert Bride

Full of Thrills; Splendid Production

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS drama laid in Near East is splendidly produced and is jammed full of action, romance, intrigue, thrills and everything that should make it appealing at the box office. The photography is exceptionally good and there are some tremendous and beautiful sets. Betty Compson has the starring role and she does some splendid work, as do Alan Forrest as the heroic young captain of the Intelligence Department, Edward Martindel as the Colonel and Otto Matiesen as the villain. The latter's performance is about as finished a one for the type as has been seen for a long time.

The story is most intense and the interest never lags for a single moment. Thrilling episodes follow one another in rapid succession and the suspense keeps one at a high pitch of excitement. The sandstorm on the desert and all of the other thrills are well done. It is a splendid piece of direction and not once are the most tense scenes overdone.

The story tells of the love of the young Captain of the Intelligence department and Diane Duval, pet of the French officers. He is sent on a dangerous mission, on which he is made a prisoner by Kassim Ben Ali, outwardly the friend of the French, but secretly head of the revolutionists. The Captain refuses to divulge to him where he has hidden the confiscated guns and ammunition. The girl is also made prisoner and before the Captain's very eyes is sold to the highest bidder. They eventually make their escape as the French troops storm the palace.

Drawing Power: A picture of many thrills, much romance, intrigue and action, it should do well at any box office. Exploitation Angles: The colorful background of the Near East. The thrilling escape; the storming of the castle; the good east.

THEME: Drama of the Near East in which Captain of the Intelligence Department, who loves the pet of the French officers, is sent on a dangerous mission where he is made captive. The girl, also a prisoner, is brought before him and auctioned off when he refused to divulge the hiding place of confiscated ammunition and guns seized from the revolutionists. They make their escape when the French troops storm the palace.

Produced and distributed by Columbia Pictures. Length, 5,528 feet. Released, March 26, 1928. Cast: Betty Compson, Allan Forrest, Edward Martindel, Otto Matiesen, Roscoe Karns, Frank Austin. Produced by Harry Cohn. Directed by Walter Lang. Story by Ewart Adamson. Adaptation by Elmer Harris. Continuity by Anthony Coldewey.

"Gold in Alaska"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THE adventure of Al Falfa and the feud between Milton Mouse and Thomas Cat are continued in this new Aesop cartoon. With the discovery of gold, all the animals trek to Alaska and among them are the above trio. Milton Mouse tries his luck at mining with enviable results. Tom Cat, however, siezes his gold and his bride-to-be and is making off with them when Milton launches into pursuit and also obtains the aid of mounted policemen. Of course, the villain is overwhelmed just the same as in the regular program accounts of the doings of the mounties.

The Count of Ten

Program Material

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

WEAK intervals in which the story sags sadly make spotty this tale of a pugilist and Charlie Ray vehicle. The star gives a fairly effective performance and James Gleason is splendid as his manager and Jobyna Ralston okay as the heroine. The acting is generally good as done by the other members of the cast.

However, it is the story that is so shaky. They go to such great pains and endeavors to pull the wool over the hero's eyes and create a misunderstanding between himself and his dearest possession—his wife. They (the plot constructors) even ask him to do the impossible in the big scene wherein he goes in to battle the champ with a pair of broken dukes. The attempt was made to impress with the self-sacrificing nature of the hero in this sequence and so they have him take a terrific body lacing and then a mental one.

This climax hangs on so thin a thread of plausibility that it misses fire. Ray's "Scrap Iron," made years ago, is a much better pug picture than this one.

Drawing Power: A fair number. Exploitation Angles: String up boxing gloves in lobby and marquee.. Make use of sponge water pail, gong and other implements familiar to the ring. A truck ballyhoo is a good idea.

THEME: Story of a prize fighter who loses his wealth because of sponging in-laws. Believing his wife is to have a child, he takes a whipping in the ring only to find he had been deceived. His brother-in-law, however, had been responsible for the trickery and the husband and wife, their misunderstanding ironed out, get rid of the in-laws to start life anew.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Released, June 17. Length, 6,279 feet. The Cast: Charles Ray, Jobyna Ralston, James Gleason, Edythe Chapman, Arthur Lake, Charles Sellon, George Magrill, Jackie Combs. Story, Gerald Beaumont. Director, James Flood.

Broadway Daddies

Snappy and Well Done

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

JACQUELINE LOGAN goes back to her days in the Ziegfield Follies in this lively and entertaining feature of Columbia Pictures. The story, a quite complicated one, is unfolded simply and capably by a cast which does splendid work. There is considerable of the Broadway night life revealed, but at the same time there is plenty of romance and always the action is well sustained.

Miss Logan is at her best in this feature which permits her to dance and to cavort as she once did as a Follies girl. She is equally good, however, in the romantic scenes. Rex Lease as the young son of the wealthy banker also acquits himself most creditably. They make a splendid combination for a picture of this type.

The plot of the story is not entirely a new one, though it takes a novel turn here and there and holds the interest throughout. The youth is the son of a wealthy banker but is parading in old clothes to test the love of the girl, who is much sought by Broadway Daddies. The wealthy father is led to believe that the girl is the mistress of a Broadway habitue and induces the girl to give his son up. The girl is announced as the bizarre Oriental dancer who will perform at a party they are to attend. Instead the heavily veiled girl who does the dancing is revealed as a colored girl and a note left by the real girl convinces the father she is an entirely proper person for his son to marry.

Drawing Power: The lively story and good cast should make it an attractive picture for almost any type of house. Exploitation Angles: The dancing of the former Follies Girl; the cabaret scenes; the good cast.

THEME: Drama in which son of a wealthy banker falls in love with a Broadway dancing girl, who is pointed to the father as the mistress of another. The father eventually becomes convinced that she is a desirable daughter-in-law.

Produced and distributed by Columbia Pictures. Length, 5,537 feet. Released Apr. 7, 1928. Cast: Jacqueline Logan, Alec B. Francis, Rex Lease, Phillips Smalley, De Sacia Mooers, Clarissa Selwynne, Betty Francisco. Produced by Harry Cohn. Directed by Fred Windermere. Story by Victoria Moore. Continuity by Anthony Coldeway.

Old Age Handicap

Abounds in Sentimental Hokum

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THE mortgage on the homestead, the jockey injured at the last moment and the girl substituting at the last minute to bring home the bacon; these are the old familiar scenes in this hodge-podge of sentimentality that shrieks incessantly for applause. There is no attempt to disguise the old favorite sequences, except that in this instance instead of using young fiery thoroughbreds the entrants in the race must be over twelve years old.

True, the background for it all is laid in more modern surroundings, which permits the director to bring in some cabaret scenes that have been popular in other pictures. There is a sentimental story of the youth of the poor but honest and large family preferring the shanty-town girl to the wealthy banker's daughter and spurning the latter's advances. There is the touch of the shanty-town girl becoming the rage as a cabaret performer and being molested by the scion of a wealthy family. There is justification shown for the desertion by the father of the large family. In fact, he is brought back as a somewhat heroic figure. It is just one sentimental shriek after another and it is not helped any by poor direction.

Drawing Power: They may still fall for this type of picture in the smaller neighborhood houses where they will rally to any sort of sentimental appeal. Exploitation Angles: The horse race; the cabaret scenes.

THEME: Drama of youth of poor family who prefers the love of a shanty-town girl to that of the wealthy banker's daughter. The girl he loves wins the handicap and the $5,000 prize that goes with it, thus lifting the mortgage on the old homestead.

Produced and distributed by Trinity Pictures. Cast: Alberta Vaughn, Gareth Hughes, Vivian Rich, Olaf Hytton, Mavis Villers, Jimmy Humes, Carolyn Wethall, Robert Rodman, Frank Mattison, Jr., Ford Jessen, Hall Cline, Edna Hearn, Bud Shaw, Arthur Hotaling, White Star. Director, Frank S. Mattison. Story by Tod Underwood. Adapted by Cecil Burtin Hill.

Rinty of the Desert

An Everyday Affair

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THE Barrymore of the screen hounds again is seen as an almost human benefactor to good and upright adults and the snarling enemy of two-legged villians who do their best to boss things. Rin-Tin-Tin is getting a trifle elderly by this time, but like many of his human contemporaries who have a long string of roles under the Kliegs to their credit, he is convincing. There are but few dogs on the screen who are as well trained as the Warner Bros. hound.

His latest is a fair attraction. There are gangsters that kidnap the father of Rinty's young mistress, the dog trailing him to the gang's den where he has to fight another dog and save his master from expiring in a pit. Then when the villains are routed, Rinty is nearly exterminated when officers of the law almost shoot him thinking he had attacked the girl's lover.

The story is fairly convincing. Let it be said for Rinty that he is a good little actor, most intelligent in his performance. Audrey Ferris is charming as the girl, Carol Nye passable as her boy friend and Otto Hoffman good as her father.

Drawing Power: Good for the neighborhood. Exploitation Angles: The western type of ballyhoo and attracting will suffice here.

THEME: Drama of desert dog and of how he befriends his human companions when they need help most.

Produced and distributed by Warner Bros. Released April 21. Length, 4,820 feet. The Cast: Rinty, Audrey Ferris, Carrol Nye, Paul Panzer, Otto Hoffman, Grover Lignon. Story, Frank Steele. Adaptation, Harvy Gates. Director, Ross Lederman.

Hell Ship

An Interesting Sea Tale

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

VICTOR SEASTROM is author, director and scenarist of this rather interesting sea story, which, however, becomes so involved in spots that the action is considerably slowed up. There is a lot of realism in the story and the various incidents, and to the credit of the director it must be said that it is a well done picture.

Seastrom, as the mate, Matheson Lang as the captain and Jenny Hasselquist as the captain's wife all give accurate portrayals of somewhat difficult roles that must be well done to be convincing. The trio becomes much involved because the mate had been a sweetheart of the captain's wife in their youth, and the captain still is insanely jealous. There are many dramatic incidents to make it a good program picture.

Drawing Power: The type of picture should make it popular in the neighborhood houses. Exploitation Angles: The thrilling sequences aboard ship offer exploitation possibilities; the title and the good work of the east.

THEME: Sea drama in which mate aboard boat is former sweetheart of captain's wife, who is also aboard. Dramatic sequences are entirely the result of the captain's insane jealousy, but a clear understanding is reached before the conclusion.

Produced by Victor Seastrom. Released by Collwyn Pictures. Length, 5,800 feet. Story and direction by Victor Seastrom. The Cast: Victor Seastrom, Matheson Lang, Jenny Hasselquist.

The Raider Emden

Splendid Story of Naval Warfare

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

BETTER by far than the usual story of adventure on the high seas, more forceful and vigorous than the average Hollywood sea films, stimulating and extremely entertaining in the vigor and crispness of its action, this production from the Emelka Studios of Munich based on the exploits of the famous German raider is a splendid production, good enough to calibre and big enough in theme to project on the screen of any house. The acting is fine.

It is the German counterpart of the British film "The Battles of Coronel and Falkland Islands." It is not as nicely produced nor as convincingly presented as its rival, in our estimation, but rest assured that it is right behind it. One is just a trifle better than the other, that is all.

The picture was made under the auspices of the German Admiralty and it breathes authenticity. Intelligently handled, so ably photographed, its note that of the grandeur of battle and the grimness of war, the struggles of mighty naval monsters on the deep, it is, from the viewpoint of worthwhile pictures, worth about a hundred horse, dog and athletic man operas.

It is a novel picture to offer your patrons. It is an entertaining discourse on recent history, without feminine allures or masculine grace, but with thrilling scenes and all strangeness of truth to tingle the senses.

Drawing Power: A fairly good attraction. Exploitation Angles: It's history, thrilling history—tell 'em so. Exploit the cruiser's fame as a raider and how she met defeat.

THEME: A page from the late world war, of the damage done to the Allies' fleets by the German raider, the Emden, and of how she went down to glorious defeat before the British guns.

Produced by Emelka Studios. Distributed here by Columbia. Special Cast. Story by Capt. Lieut. Van Muecke. Director, Louis Ralph (also the star in role of Admiral von Muller).

The Black Ace

A Good Western Film

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

FASHIONED by a man who knows his Western tales, and directed by one equally adapt in all matters pertaining to this particular brand of film, "The Black Ace" provides some good entertainment. Yes, Ford I. Beebe and Leo Maloney have made a good job of this story, which they wrote and directed, respectively.

Some competent portrayals are had in the hero's role, played by Don Coleman, the heroine's interpreted by Jeanette Loff, and in the performance of Noble Johnson as the villain. However, the palm for acting in this opus goes to J. P. McGowan, who is fine in the role of the girl's father, and who figures importantly in the story.

This one has the qualities of the good Western picture—action, good story, stirring climax and a constant warfare, with accompanying ups and downs between hero and villain. It is a nice addition to the list of Pathewesterns, and is suitable film provender for neighborhood and second-run houses whose patronage is partial to this type of entertainment.

Drawing Power: A good bet. Exploitation Angles: You know exactly what to do, Mr. Exhibitor.

THEME: Western drama of a Texas Ranger's quest for the man who slew his father. The trail brings him close to his foster-father, whose daughter he loves, but he finally captures his man, who was compelling his foster-father to do evil by threatening to expose his past. Happiness at the finis.

Produced by Leo D. Maloney Productions. Distributed by Pathe. Released, September 2, 1928. Length, 5,722 feet. The Cast: Don Coleman, Billy Butts, Jeanette Loff, J. P. McGowan, Noble Johnson, Wm. Steele, Ben Corbett, Edward Jones. Scenario by Ford I. Beebe. Cameraman, Edward A. Kull. Director, Leo D. Maloney.

After the Storm

A Weak Sister

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THERE'S not much to the story and manner of its presentation. Crude would be the right word. Though this one was turned out by the same studio that produced "The Hell Ship," it is not one, two or three with that maritime special. When a picture is made to be convincing and turns out to be anything but that, one can in all fairness say that it is not really good celluloid.

Hobart Bosworth has the leading role—that of a half demented skipper. His characterization has not been nicely determined. He lets the role run away with him and never for a moment shows the least indication of restraint. Result—a role which is painted luridly and without any sense of proportion in its portrayer's strivings to make it utterly convincing. Charles Delaney and Eugenia Gilbert in the juvenile roles are fair in weak parts.

A program filler.

Drawing Power: Only fair. Exploitation Angles: This one needs exploitation, so utilize lifeboat effects, searchlights, oars, life savers, ship bells to attract the eyes of clients.

THEME: Old sea captain, thinking a woman had tricked him, detests the lady's daughter when she comes to him for help. When he sees his son falling in love with the girl he forbids the match. He realizes his error in time to save the young couple from drowning and wed them aboard his ship.

Produced and distributed by Columbia. Released April 19. Length, 5,459 feet. The Cast: Hobart Bosworth, Charles Delaney, Eugene Gilbert, Maude George, George Kuwa, Linda Loredo. Adaptation and Continuity: Will M. Ritchey. Director, George B. Seitz.

"Cook, Papa, Cook"

(Educational—One Reel)

HENRY MURDOCK, who passed away so suddenly a week or so ago, is featured in this new Cameo comedy. It cuts a deep notch as a laugh provoker and there are continual caperings, a fast flow of gags and plenty of balmy antics from Murdock.

Beginning with a family spat, which provides a torrent of words and water, the theme of the comedy is designated when Murdock decides that he will cook breakfast for himself and his peeved helpmate. He wrecks the kitchen and spoils quite a bit of food in his frantic and helpless efforts to cook a simple meal. Finally, he achieves a fairly appetizing dish only to find that his wife has been filling in on candy and does not feel the slightest interest in breakfast.

It is really quite amusing and so conceived that one is bound to laugh during its unreeling. —RAYMOND GANLY.

"The Campus Carmen"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THE opera "Carmen" is burlesqued in this Mack Sennett comedy, whose laugh pulse is a little below normal. The idea of burlesquing this story seems more successful in the imagination than it does in fact. Chaplin tried it some years ago, and his effort was not much, as we remember it. Sennett's production, planned differently and well stocked with his famed charmers, is saved by the appearance of a bull, a comedy treat, to whom the toreador gives battle.

If it were not for this one scene the two reels would well appear to be pretty faded when it comes to a question of real laughs. Perhaps "faded" is not appropriate here, for the wise Sennett has garbed his reels with some pretty technicolor work which brings into clearer relief the attractiveness of a coterie of girls. But the criticism can readily be applied to the gag material on hand.

The lassies of Sunnyside College decide to produce "Carmen." Everything progresses wrongly, and laughs are released not overwhelmingly but at an extremely moderate pace. However, with the arrival of the bull fight scene some reel stuff comes into play and the laughs have full sway. Johnny Burke and an assistant wrap themselves up in a cow's skin and impersonate the beast in this sequence. The fore and rear parts of the animal become separated, and the bull fighter is in a quandary in the amusing situations which follow.

The technicolor scenes give the number a certain amount of class.

"The Prodigal Pup"

(Universal—One Reel)

ONE of the most unique single reel films to make its appearance in some time was shown in Glendale, Cal., last week. It was written and produced under the supervision of Sam Jacobson, director of publicity for Universal studios and is the second of a series of twelve single-reel subject Universal plans making. The entire picture is about a cute little pup and is enacted entirely by canines.

"Oscar" the pup is told to stay at home and mind the babies by his mother. Being of an adventurous nature, however, Oscar starts out on venture bound. All goes well until he attempts to cross a busy boulevard in the city, where he blocks traffic while the officer is rescuing him from the wheels of passing automobiles. With a sound spanking he is sent on his way. While returning home he is caught in a storm and drenched and bedraggled he crawls into the dog house to be soundly berated by his mother who has returned home in the meantime.

The titles are clever, the photography excellent and several comical inserts of Oscar rolling his eyes bring forth the laughs. Jacques Rolin directed. Original story by Sam'l Jacobson.

"The Lucky Duck"

(Educational—One Reel)

A NEW comedian, Billy Dale, makes his debut in the Educational circle in this Cameo and fairly enjoyable results are achieved. There are spicy gags strewn throughout the reel, which moves sprightly after the manner of this brand of comedies.

Briefly, the tale consists of Billy's luck and hard luck in holding the winning number in a lottery, losing and regaining it, winning and smashing the prize. All of the comedy simmers nicely and causes a fair set of laughs.

Francis H. Martin directed and William Hyer focused the camera. In supporting roles are Henry Murdock, Della Peterson and Georgia O'Dell.

This chap, Dale, impresses as having talent enough to fare well in snappy comedy work.—RAYMOND GANLY.

Salt Lake City

A HOUSE dating back to the time of the pioneer Mormons has closed its doors. The closing of the old historic Salt Lake Theatre, built by Brigham Young in the old Utah days, which occurred Sept. 1, leaves Salt Lake City without a house wherein to house road shows and big attractions generally.

The Louis Marcus Enterprises, operating six theatres in this territory, is in touch with eastern booking agencies with the object in view of booking traveling stage attractions at the Paramount-Empress theatre. This will necessitate a change in policy.

By way of the proposed change in policy Louis Marcus this week signed a contract with Ralph Cloniger, a popular stock actor who left Salt Lake a couple of years ago to enter motion pictures on the coast, to stage a fifty-minute dramatic playlet each week for an indefinite period in connection with a feature picture to be presented each week.

Whenever, if the deal goes through, a road show attraction is booked at the Paramount-Empress, Clonger and his company of players will appear in one of the other Marcus houses located in Ogden, Provo or Twin Falls.

The old Salt Lake theatre recently purchased by the Mountain States Telephone Company, is to be torn down and a modern office building erected on the site. The equipment is for sale and the old green room relics of stars who appeared there forty years ago have been presented to the Deseret Museum.

Director George Edward Lewis of the Pioneer Film Corporation reports that within the next few days they will move their location to Idaho Falls and the south fork of the Snake River at Heise Springs in Idaho, from their present location near the mouth of Little Cottonwood Canyon of this city, to complete the scene of the crossing of the Green River made famous by the Utah Pioneers. This film is titled "The Exodus."

Earl D. Smith, former manager of the local branch for the National Theatre Supply Company, has resigned this week to devote his entire time to his theatre interests, having recently built the Tower theatre here. His place as manager has been filled by O. J. Hazen, assistant manager for some time. The position of assistant manager is being filled by Ed. Stoker. Miss Verla Croutch has been appointed bookkeeper.

Footlights spanned the canyon of emotions that lies between sadness and joy a few nights ago here at the American Theatre, and brought smiles and laughter to a host of men, women and children who attended the theatrical benefit for the family of Richard R. Hyde whose daughter Marjorie, former cashier at the American Theatre, and son Dick, lost their lives through flames at the Normandy Apartment fire a short time ago. Mr. and Mrs. Hyde and one remaining daughter are still in a local hospital in a very critical condition through the same catastrophe.

Several thousands of dollars were raised through this theatrical benefit which was sponsored by a committee of theatrical managers here, including: George E. Carpenter, of the Capitol; David Schayer of the American; Carl Porter of the Paramount Empress; Grant Pemberton of the Pantages; Ray M. Hendry of the Victory, and also George D. Pyper, dean of Salt Lake theatrical men.

A Correction

A PARAGRAPH in a recent issue of this publication, under the Milwaukee heading, stated that "John Ludwig recently motored to Minneapolis for the purpose of closing his Minneapolis exchange." This was entirely erroneous, for, according to a communication from Mr. Ludwig, he has given out no information of this nature and has no intention of closing his Minneapolis office. The object of his trip to Minneapolis, he states, was not at all for this purpose. Motion Picture News regrets the error.

Minneapolis

MINNEAPOLIS may have a new play house within the next year, if plans of A. G. Bainbridge, operator of three legitimate houses in the Twin Cities, carry through. Mr. Bainbridge announced the other day that he will replace the antiquated Metropolitan theatre, which has been housing road attractions in Minneapolis for years, with a first class modern theatre. South East

Alabama

ANOTHER impressive premiere of a theatre in the Southeast was enjoyed last week. On Monday, September 3, in the presence of a large and enthusiastic gathering of citizens of Gentersville, Ala., and community, the Palace Theatre, latest addition to the chain of theatres operated by Amusement Enterprises, Inc., of which Thomas E. Orr is president and C. W. Woodall vice-president and secretary, was opened to the public.

The house is well situated, being on the State Highway and on one of the busiest corners of the town. Constructed of brick and celotex and fireproof throughout, it possesses a seating capacity of 450 and is equipped with latest seating, projecting and lighting devices.

Amusement Enterprises has pioneered in the operation of theatres in the Sand Mountain District of Alabama, where it has now under operation the Rialto, at Boaz; the Princess, Albertville; Palace, Guntersville, and the Liberty, at Attalla.

The local debate on Sound vs. Silence still waxes warm. Some managers declare that pictures which have dialogue merely distract audiences and will, when the novelty wears off, drive people away from the theatre. Others state that with the adding of the new dimension, eventually the public will demand that all pictures be dialogued. Nearly all are in unison that, at present, the field for the "soundies" is best demonstrated in pictures which have synchronized music and effects, rather than too much dialogue.

That good showmanship is a gift for recognizing and taking an advantage of an opportunity when presented was displayed this past summer by Frank S. Riggins operator of the Dixie Theatre, Blackshear, Ga.

For several years Mr. Riggins has operated his house in the evenings throughout the years, although during the summers until this one he has found it necessary to leave Blackshear due to ill health. While in Blackshear this summer during tobacco selling and buying season, Mr. Riggins noticed that farmers came early to the town, and had nothing to do until clients appeared. So, he conceived the idea of opening his theatre in the afternoons. So popular the shows proved to be that for the first time in the history of the theatre he really made an appreciable profit on his investment of the house.

Florida

Petitions asking for city commissioners to call an election in October on the subject of Sunday movies, were put in circulation last week in Lakeland. Some time ago a petition was presented to the commission asking them to put through an ordinance permitting Sunday shows. This petition was signed by 1,000. The commissioners called a public meeting and there was quite a little protest against the proposition by the ministers. The commissioners finally decided if petitions were presented to them, signed by one-fifth of the qualified voters they would call the election. The number needed to make up this one-fifth is only 625 so friends of the Sunday movement feel they will have their petitions filled pronto. However there is opposition and the election will no doubt be a hot one.

Mention was made in this column last week of a theatre fire in Green Cove Springs. The theatre burned was the Palace. Damage to the building amounted to $25,000. The other theatre there, the American, had been closed for the summer, but the owner, Frederick H. Lewis, re-opened it this week.

How about a film romance in which the motion picture exhibitor is featured; the rise of a theatre manager pictured? For instance, there is Stanley L. Segelbaum, the new manager of the Des Moines Theatre in Des Moines, son of one of the old pioneer families of Minneapolis. After the war they told him he had but three months to live. But he had, one day when convalescing in one of the big hospitals seen a little Irishman cheer up a whole ward of fellows who were feeling pretty blue with a joke or two. And Segelbaum thought "Well, if one little fellow can do that—" His present condition attests to his cheerfulness.

Mr. Segelbaum has been everything from office boy on at the Finkelstein and Ruben organization at Minneapolis and was manager of the Garrick, the Strand and the Lyric just before he came to Des Moines. He has as his assistant manager Abe Holdberg, who came to the DesMoines theatre from the Rialto Theatre at Omaha where he was service man and also served with the Publix art department there.

Watch for these boys at the top.

James Rose, local salesman for Pathe, was hemmed in at Rosendale, in the lower Catskills, during the recent flood.

Earl R. Brink, of Buffalo, a salesman for Paramount out of that city, was found dead in bed in Rochester, one day last week. Death was due to heart trouble.

Eli Rosenbaum, of Ogdensburg, exhibitor, has a daughter, who is probably the only school teacher who has a job and yet is unable to fill it. Some weeks ago, Miss Rosenbaum hired out to teach at Hemlock, but the schoolhouse burned down last week.

W. W. Farley, of Albany, exhibitor, is displaying a "Smith for President" plate on his car.

The Rialto in Potsdam, went over to musical comedy last week but will go back to pictures in the near future.

The new church being erected on Riverside Drive in New York city by the Park Avenue Baptist Congregation, will run motion pictures on each Saturday for children.

A 3000 pound rug, measuring 36 by 64 feet, has just been completed in Amsterdam, and was shipped last week for the Fox theatre in Detroit.

Amateur motion picture cameramen, members of the exclusive Schuyler Meadows country club at Albany, are securing some rather novel pictures these days in shots taken over the golf course.

COL. H. A. COLE, president of the M. P. T. O. of Texas states that at least fifty new members will be added to the Texas organization upon the completion of the new membership drive which is practically over. Prizes will be awarded to those who have secured the greatest number of new members.

Ben Turpin, who has been appearing as the headliner of the Majestic Theatre for the past week, accepted an invitation from the Junior Chamber of Commerce to assist in selling opening day keys for the State Fair of Texas and appeared in front of the Baker Hotel and sold the keys from an elevated platform during the noon hour Thursday. Mr. Turpin found it a very easy task to sell the keys and his action certainly aided the selling of the idea.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, the Democratic nominee for vice-president, made a personal appearance at the Majestic theatre and gave a very short talk from the stage of that theatre on Monday evening and was warmly received. His appearance boosted business for the evening for the Majestic and also brought forth commendation to the management for securing his presence.

The Palace Theatre entertained the visiting members of the Kiwanis Clubs of Texas and Oklahoma with a complimentary midnight preview of "The Tempest."

Victor Lowry, assistant manager of the Melba Theatre, will be in Fort Worth for two weeks assuming the duties of Harry Gould, who is away on his vacation. Mr. Lowry will return to the Melba when Mr. Gould completes his vacation.

Leslie Wilkes, manager of the First National Exchange is in San Antonio where he will confer with Mr. Epstein and others for four or five days.

A marked decrease in the attendance at the Saturday matinees has been noticed since the large department stores of the city started remaining open on Saturday afternoons.

Announcement was made by Frank Starz, director of publicity for the Interstate Circuit, that the theatres controlled by Interstate would play all FBO comedies. Six FBO features have been bought and will be shown over the entire circuit.

The Princess theatre at Del Rio will install Vitaphone according to Paul J. Poag manager of the theatre. The Princess is an R. and R. house. Movietone will also be included in the installation.

W. G. Underwood, general manager of Liberty Specialty has just returned from a trip to New York.

W. E. Paschall, general manager of Dent Theatres, has just returned from a trip to New York. Mr. Louis L. Dent, president of the organization, has also just returned to Dallas after a two months trip abroad.

Arthur S. Kane, district manager for United Artists was in Dallas to confer with Ralph Morrow manager of the local U. A. Exchange.

New York & New Jersey

AN entertainment and dance is being given the evening of Saturday September 22, by Seider and Moley at the Balconades Ball Room, 66th Street and Columbus Avenue, City. Al Moley is directing the affair in conjunction with Jim Ramsey. There will be dance contests, night club headliners and other items of interest on the program which is well calculated to please all who attend. The original Dixieland Jazz Band will supply the music.

The Willis theatre, located at 138th Street and Willis Avenue in the Bronx, opened as a vaudeville and motion picture house on Thursday, September 13. The house, one of the chain controlled by Consolidated Amusement Company, had been dark since June. Frank Jacobs is managing this theatre.

Harry Suchman, one of the Suchman brothers engaged locally in the theatre business, has been appointed to the post of general manager for the Jolson and Suchman Theatrical Enterprises. Hennie Suchman will take care of the bookings of films and vaudeville acts for the entire circuit.

Harry Harris, a wide-awake showman, has stolen a lead on his opposition, by securing the Vitaphone and Movietone for his Gotham theatre at 137th Street and Broadway in Manhattan. Equipment for the talking films will be installed right away.

There has been a postponement in Bronx movie circles. Loew's 167th Street did not open on September 12, as originally planned, but will throw open its doors on the 20th, instead.

Old Dame Rumor has been associated with the new Tuxedo theatre, a house now being built by Morris Blinders at 208th Street and Jerome Avenue, it being said along the row that a big circuit will ultimately take over the house. The Tuxedo has a seating capacity of 1,700. Vitaphone equipment will be installed just as soon as possible, it is planned.

The Paramount theatre, located one block away from the new Fox theatre at Flatbush Extension, will open, it is expected, about November 15. The Paramount is a 5,000-seater.

Walter Greene, who occupies the desk of general manager at the Chicago office of National Theatre Supply Company, was in town Thursday, September 13.

The Tremont Theatre at Tremont Avenue and Webster, Bronx, formerly a motion picture house controlled by Sidney Cohen, is now playing stock. Morris Sussman, general manager, is looking after the house.

Sam Suchman will manage the Park theatre at 173rd Street and 3rd Avenue, in the Bronx. He is one of the Suchman brothers.

A. Smith, formerly manager of the Luxor theatre before the theatre's recent consolidation, is now managing the Fleetwood theatre for the Suchman interests.

Young Ochs, Jr., son of Lee Ochs, and now in Europe, will be back in New York on September 22nd, it is thought. He has been gone for about four weeks.

One of the new features of the New York office of National Theatre Supply Company is a new showroom which is "a little theatre in itself." Here the theatre owners in search of theatre equipment will find draperies, chairs, lighting machines and everything else that goes to make up the modern motion picture house.

Joe Hornstein, general manager of the eastern division of the National Theatre Supply Company, who is well acquainted with the trend of business, reports that the business conditions of this year are in an improved state when they are compared to the similar period of last year. This year the number of theatre openings is much less than that of 1927, and the fact that business is in an improved state even in the face of these odds is a healthy indication.

The Boulevard Theatre, located at Jackson Heights, Long Island, will have a change of policy and will revert to road shows and other stage attractions in preference to its regular programs of vaudeville and pictures which the house has been playing for some time.

Harry Hecht, of Passaic and Paterson, New Jersey, has purchased several Peerless low-high intensity lamps from National Theatre Supply Company.

Mr. Winegar, who is assistant sales manager of the Steele Furniture Company which supplies theatres with seats, is now in charge of the chair department of the New York office of National Theatre Supply Company.

The Howard Beach Theatre, situated at Howard Beach, a suburb of Brooklyn, will be opened for the season on September 22.

Loew's 167th Street theatre is to open on September 20th.

What has ever been an all-vaudeville house—the B. F. Keith Riverside Theatre, in Manhattan, where the best of the Keith acts have been played following their exhibition at the Palace—will, it is rumored, change its policy to conform with that existing at the 81st Street and Broadway theatres; namely, vaudeville and picures on an all week basis.

F. B. Carter, formerly manager of the Tivoli theatre, Brooklyn, has been to Canada on a two months' vacation and has just returned to town. His future plans are unknown at this time.

J. Dolan is the new manager of the Beverley Theatre, on Church avenue in Brooklyn.

The Tiptop theatre, 357 Wilson avenue, Brooklyn, has been closed for some time and was reopened on September 15th.

The name of Schmuckler—Ned Schmuckler—will shortly be the name of a certain young lady, it is rumored in theatrical circles. The story is that Ned will soon go to Chicago for the wedding.

The New Jersey Theatrical Enterprises held the inaugural performance at their new Pascack theatre, on Center Avenue, Westwood, New Jersey, on the evening of August 30. The show and ceremonies began at 8 o'clock and a good time was had by all present.

The Ritz Theatre, at 180th Street and Boston Road, Bronx, which was formerly owned and closed by the Jolson-Suchman Enterprises, has been taken over by Irving Dashkin and Simon Osserman, the owner of the building, and will reopen shortly. The house is being entirely renovated, redecorated and re-equipped. Mr. Dashkin, who formerly managed the Ritz for four years and who recently managed Hy Gainsboro's Roosevelt theatre and Isaac Katz' Stillwell Theatre, will have complete supervision over the operation of this house.

George Seed, formerly of the S. and S. circuit, is now managing the Rugby theatre, located at 823 Utica Avenue, Brooklyn.

The Little theatre movement has grown, and grown, and grown. Michael Mindlin, who has developed little theatres in different neighborhoods to the idea of showing foreign films or reviving worthwhile efforts that have lain on the shelves, already has four theatres in the New York section to his credit and is now planning a new one for the city and two for other towns.

Mr. Mindlin's new theatre, on 57th Street and just a few steps east of Carnegie Hall, seats 400, and will serve, it is said, as the key theatre of his group. Some of the features planned for the house are a billiard room and a card room for the amusement of patrons. Of course, coffee will be served, too. This idea of coffee in the little theatre has developed into something of an institution.

Kid stars are invading Broadway. Little (or should it be Mr.) Jackie Coogan is performing at the Paramount and on Saturday of this week Hal Roach's "Our Gang" are expected to arrive for a week's work at the Capitol.

Only a short time ago her name was almost lost on the surrounding bill of stage fare at the Paramount, but now, a few blocks further up the street, her name appears in lights on the marquee of the Hammerstein theatre. That's the progress made by Helen Kane, who, in a comparatively short length of time, made the hurdle to success.

The Willis theatre in the Bronx was found by patrons to be entirely redecorated when it opened on Thursday for its fall and winter season.

The Metro theatre in the Bronx has adopted the idea of giving special concerts every Saturday night after the regular performance. The music will take in the classic as well as popular numbers. Maurice Bliss manages this enterprising Bronx house.

The constantly expanding Loew chain of theatres had another link added when on Wednesday evening the Fairmount, E. Tremont near Clinton Avenue, opened for the first time. There was a big inaugural program celebrating the event, N. T. G., of WHN fame, presiding. All seats were reserved for the premiere. The theatre, seating 2,500, will run on a continuous grind policy, and will exhibit films and vaudeville. It has practically every modern theatre improvement, including a sumptuous cooling plant.

After the Appellate Division in Brooklyn had granted a stay to the Peeksville board of trustees, restraining the operation of the temporary injunction which the Peeksville Theatre, Inc., had obtained to prevent the board from enforcing a Sunday closing ordinance, the police of Peeksville did not interfere on September 9 when the Colonial theatre showed motion pictures despite the ordinance passed by the village trustees banning Sunday exhibition of films.

Andy Anderson, city manager for the B. F. Keith's theatres in New Brunswick, New Jersey, has named K. A. Becker, formerly with the Los Angeles Times, as director of advertising and publicity of both the State and Rivoli in New Brunswick.

Personal endeavors to put the show over on the part of all connected with a theatre is what counts in building up a loyal clientele—and that goes for any house in any section.

An example of personal initiative in this respect is the case of the young organist at a picture theatre at Floral Park, Long Island, who has the task of putting over popular songs. Her idea to add a new angle to her job was tried out recently with the showing of a strip of film, 300 feet in length, showing her leaving home for the theatre, jumping into a plane because she is late for the job, hopping into an auto to finish the journey and winding up at the theatre. The screen showing her picture until she actually appears before the audience. It is something new in the job of the movie organist. Incidentally, the girl organist gets a big hand from the audience.

Going under the name of "Florence," this organist was stationed at the Floral Park originally with A. H. Schwartz, was also with J. J. McNeil, the builder, who recently took over the house. She is now again with Schwartz at his Queens Theatre in Queens Village, L. I.

D. Newman, who was with A. H. Schwartz for seven years recently resigned his position of office head at the New York office and is at present seeking new connections in the same capacity.

Pittsburgh

A THEATRE is permanently closing its doors. The Rex, seven-hundred-seat picture theatre in East Liberty, will close its doors for the last time at the end of the year. The Browarsky Brothers, Harry, Ben and Ike, who own this house, as well as the Hippodrome and Variety theatres on the Northside, have leased the Rex Theatre Building for a term of thirty years to a department store, which has also leased the storeroom adjacent to the Rex. The Browarskys have conducted the Rex for twenty years, and during these years it was a consistent money-maker, playing both first-run and second-run pictures. The brothers state that they are on the lookout for another picture theatre to add to their string by the first of the year at the latest.

The Superior Motion Picture Supply Company, independent supply house of Pittsburgh, is celebrating its second anniversary. Business is improving right along, according to A. F. Morrone, owner of the company, and a veteran projectionist and expert machinist.

Loew's Aldine, Pittsburgh, was re-opened on Labor Day after a summer closing, and the house has enjoyed tremendous business since its opening. Vitaphone and Movietone were installed.

The East Liberty Cameraphone theatre has the distinction of being the only theatre in Pittsburgh to turn out a National and State Beauty Queen. Of all the different Beauty Contests held in Pittsburgh no girl ever representing a local theatre, other than the Cameraphone has won a title.

Local theatres which have recently installed Reproduco Player Pipe Organs include the Moon, Vandergrift, and the Eclipse, Waynesburg.

Samuel Haimowitz, owner of several theatres in New Kensington, has had his name legally changed to Samuel Hyman.

Al Glazer postcards us from his home town, Scranton, where he has been vacationing. Al also took a little trip up into the New England states.

Exhibitor visitors on film row the past few days, included: Spear Marousis, Charles Freeman and John Newman, New Castle; William Gray, Monongahela; Theodore Mikalowsky, Masontown; Mike Manos, Greensburg; Carl Becker, Butler; and C. B. Hall, Parkersburg.

F. P. McGovern, manager of the Supreme Film Company, has recovered from an attack of pleurisy, and is again back on the job.

William Davis, of the Triangle theatre in East Liberty, is back in town after a vacation trip spent motoring through Canada, and a stop off in Atlantic City. Bill was accompanied by his wife and two children, and all report having had a great time. The tour covered 1,850 miles.

The Misses Ida Lieberman and Margaret Alexander have been addded to the office force of Columbia.

J. H. Lesley, local organ repairman and tuner, is vacationing "down on the farm" near Indianapolis, accompanied by his wife. John made the trip in his automobile from Pittsburgh in fourteen hours.

Harold Weinberger, of the Columbia Pictures Corporation, visited the old home town, Beason, N. Y., on Labor Day. While there, Harold met the aviator friend of his who gave him his first airplane ride fourteen years ago. Said airman gave Harold a two-hour ride on Labor Day which our boy friend will never forget. Incidentally, Harold now has a record of forty-two hours in the air, and claims the flight championship of Film Row.

M. Strum, exhibitor of Emeigh, Pa., made one of his infrequent trips to Film Row early the past week. He was accompanied by his son, C. H. Strum, who is planning to enter the dental college at Pittsburgh University this winter.

Miss Nettie Weis, cashier of Columbia Pictures, spent Labor Day visiting friends and relatives in New York City.

Jack Weyrauch, Pathe shipper, is back on the job after having spent a week's vacation camping near Prospect.

Wm. D. Jeanak, local distributor for the Selector Organs and Pianos, is back from a vacation trip to the New England States. He covered 2,500 miles.

F. C. Bonistall and Frank Windstein, both of whom are well-known local salesmen, have just joined the staff of Standard Film Exchange.

Sam'l Fineberg, whirlwind salesman for Columbia Film Service, is back from a five-day trip through the East. Sam, accompanied by his wife, stopped off one day in Atlantic City, and got enough sunburn in one afternoon to keep him awake for three nights.

C. F. McBride, of the McBride Theatre, Trafford, who has been confined to a local hospital for several weeks, is improving rapidly.

Jack G. Rainey, owner of the Film Distributing Company, has taken over the State Theatre in Mt. Oliver.

Cincinnati

AN extensive remodeling program is being carried forward at the Orpheum theatre, located at Peebles Corner, a close-in suburb of Cincinnati, of which Chester Martin was recently appointed manager. In addition to the house being wired for both Vitaphone and Movietone, it will be entirely redecorated, a new $20,000 organ installed, all lighting fixtures replaced, projection rooms enlarged and the ventilating system changed, the completed improvement to cost $80,000. When the house reopens later in September, a policy of four program changes weekly will be inaugurated to supplant the hitherto daily-change schedule.

The Boulevard theatre, Vine street and Central Parkway, Cincinnati, long used as a movie house, will shortly be taken over by the newly-organized Civic theatre for presentation of legitimate productions, according to a recent announcement.

Keith's and the Strand, Cincinnati, in line with the recently-adopted policy of the Lyric and Capitol, will hereafter open their week's program on Saturdays instead of Sundays. The Albee is the only other Cincinnati first-run house in the Libson chain to adhere to the Sunday opening.

The Park theatre, Northside, a Cincinnati suburb, has reopened after being closed for some time to permit finishing touches to many improvements which have been made in the house.

The Schines have taken over the leases of the Gem and Capitol theatres, Sidney, Ohio, from Thomas Broad and J. F. Kruel. The transfer included all equipment and furnishings, which were acquired on outright purchase.

According to announcement of James L. Weed, general manager of the Keith-Albee-Orpheum interests in Dayton, Ohio, the State theatre in that city will immediately be wired for Vitaphone and Movietone. Loew's, Dayton, has just completed installation of Movietone, while the Colonial has been featuring Vitaphone for several months.

The policy of the Strand theatre, Dayton, Ohio, has been changed to a twice-weekly change instead of full week, while the Colonial, Dayton, has inaugurated a Saturday opening instead of Sunday.

The Majestic, Columbus, of which Johnny Jones is manager, maintains "shoppers' hours," from 11 A. M. until 2 P. M., during which period admissions are reduced to 15 cents.

Costly New Theatre in Oil City, Pa., Opened with Ceremonies

ELABORATE ceremonies marked the opening of the new million-dollar Colonel Drake Theatre, in Oil City, Pa., on August 27, the 69th anniversary of the discovery of oil in that vicinity by Colonel Edwin L. Drake, for whom the playhouse is named. The building was erected by the Vemark Theatre Company, of which George J. Veach, of Oil City, is president.

Prior to the opening there was a street parade headed by the Lions band and conspicuous in which were the girl ushers in new green and gold uniforms. This was followed by exercises in the highly ornamental promenade overlooking the theatre lobby, which was crowded with guests, including many theatre men from nearby cities and towns.

Dr. Thomas Farmer, Oil City's oldest business man, delivered the invocation, and George H. Torrey, president of the Oil City Historical Society, told the history of the discovery of oil. There was an address by Lee A. McCracken, and a few remarks by Mr. Veach, whose grandson, Master John Bemis Veach, then pulled a cord which unveiled two large mural lobby paintings by J. C. Wonsetler, of Philadelphia, depicting scenes in the early development of the oil industry. This was followed by the uncovering of a bronze tablet dedicating the theatre to the people of Pennsylvania in the name of President Veach.

The assemblage then went into the auditorium where there were addresses by Leon H. Garvin, secretary of the Oil City Chamber of Commerce; Mayor T. L. Blair; Mr. Veach, and others. The first regular performance was then started in which the feature film was "Just Married." There was music during the evening by the Lions band and the Drake Symphony Orchestra, and organ recitals were given by Charles Fiers, who will be the regular organist. The entire program was broadcast from radio station WLBW.

U. A. Portland Theatre Opens September 14

Opening of the United Artists theatre in Portland, Ore., reconstructed from the old Majestic, has been billed for September 14. Cost of rebuilding together with furnishings, which have transformed it practically into a new and luxuriously appointed theatre is placed at $250,000.

The new theatre will be operated by J. J. Parker, president of the Consolidated Portland Theatres, who now control the Rivoli and Peoples theatres in cooperation with the United Artists.

Mr. Parker began his theatre business about twelve years ago when he purchased the Majestic which he operated successfully during the remainder of the time it was open.

The theatre will have Vitaphone and Movietone. The feature pictures will be those produced by the United Artists. The opening picture will be "Two Lovers" with Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky in the title roles.

Theatre - Business Project Planned for San Diego

Announcement has been made of plans to erect a combined theatre and business structure in San Diego to cost about $1,800,000, and that the theatre will become one of the chain of West Coast Theatres. The theatre auditorium will have a seating capacity of 3,250, making it by far the largest amusement house south of Oakland. The entire building will take up a city block, bounded by 7th, B, 8th and A streets, and the theatre will have long lobby entrances on two streets. The theatre unit will have a frontage of 140 feet on 7th street and 8th street and be 200 feet deep.

Award Contract for New West Tampa Theatre

Contract was awarded last week for the construction of the new Italian club and theatre in West Tampa, Florida. The cost of the building itself will be $65,000 and work is to commence in ten days.

The Italian club have a beautiful building in Ybor City, with a theatre seating around 600. This theatre has been operated by Victory Fernandez for the past two years and has been successful with a mixed program of motion pictures and tab shows.

It is not known as yet just what disposition will be made of the theatre in the West Tampa club building. There are two houses in West Tampa now. The Cazin at the corner of Howard and Main Streets and the Casino in the Spanish club building.

Crocker-Amazon House in Frisco to Open Soon

The theatre now being built in the Crocker-Amazon tract and which, when completed will join the family of Ackerman, Harris and Oppen theatres in San Francisco, will open soon. It will be called the Amazon theatre and will seat 1,500.

The Amazon will be located on the north side of Geneva Avenue between Paris and London Streets. Six stores will be housed in the structure and the theatre proper will be completely modern in every detail. R. P. Davis is the designer and Wm. R. A. Benson the architectural engineer.

Announcement as to the managerial staff is expected to be made shortly from the offices of Ackerman-Harris and Oppen.

Work Underway Shortly on Houma, La., Theatre

Work will be started at an early date on the construction of a new 1000-seat theatre, hotel and store building at Houma, La. Miss Santa Schurto is the owner and plans are now being prepared by the architectural firm of Lockett and Chacher, Balter Building, New Orleans, La.

The plans call for a building two stories, 117 by 237 feet in L shape of reinforced concrete, brick, stone and steel. There will be nine stores on the ground floor and a 50-room hotel will adjoin the theatre. The structure will cost about $250,000.

Work to Be Resumed on Capitol, Indianapolis

Plans are being made by the J. F. Wild Company, of Indianapolis, Ind., to have work resumed immediately on the construction of the Capitol Theatre building at Meridian and Thirteenth streets in Anderson, Ind. Technicalities regarding the title to the property that Harry Muller, theatre owner, has involved in the financing arrangements are being straightened out. The local company and Mr. Muller expect to rush the work in order that the theatre may be opened for the holiday trade.

Kilgen Wonder Organ

In the ALAMO of Chicago

as in hundreds of other splendid theatres where quality, not price, is the object—where Art is supreme—where perfection in musical expression is appraised at true value—there you will find the Kilgen. ˙ ˙ ˙ In your theatre, too—great or small—a Kilgen would be a dividend-paying investment. . . . . Not only in its ability to dramatize the photoplay as none other can; but in the rugged integrity of a construction which speaks in years of care-free service.

The Voice of the Silent Drama

MIRABILE AVDITV

Robert Morton
UNIT Organ

Here, in another of America's most beautiful theatres, a Robert Morton has been installed as a permanent music feature.

Audiences today are far more critical than ever before. Not only good music, but the best and most appropriate obtainable is absolutely essential to successful theatre operation.

In magnitude, variety, resources and beauty of tone color, the Robert Morton UNIT Organ excels any musical instrument ever produced. It is the supreme musical achievement for the motion picture theatre. Its music is real, genuine, intensifying every picturized scene, enhancing its beauty, and transferring the world of make-believe into a highly bewitching land of Romance because current Paramount product is doing the biggest business in history!

Pictures 1929

Read these actual clippings from one single issue of Variety (Sept. 12):

"Wings," $46,000, at McVicker's, Big;

— CHICAGO

McVicker's (Publix) — "Wings" and sound (Par) (2,200; 50-75). Ace money of the loop; $46,000 on first week at pop prices; only six shows daily because of length.

L. A. Climbs; $35,000 for Bow at Met.;

LOS ANGELES —

Metropolitan (W.C.-Pub) — "The Fleet's In" (Par) (3,595; 25-75). Clara Bow close to $35,000.

BANCROFT $14,700 IN TORONTO; PAN $12,000

Jannings $12,000 at Uptown;

Loew's (2,300; 30-60), "The Drag Net" (Par). Opened Labor Day to almost record of $5,200; built week's biz to near $15,000; Bancroft seldom seen here; stage show good.

Uptown (FP) (3,000; 30-60), "The Patriot" (Par). First time house has touched $12,000 since June; picture created talk and collected real cash; some thought picture a bit too real.

BUFFALO JUMPS

"First Kiss," $36,300; Hipp, $14,000— Houses Increase B. O. Scales

Buffalo, Sept. 11.

Buffalo (Publix) (3,600; 30-40-55-75)—"First Kiss" (Par) Publix unit. House has done phenomenal business the past fortnight; went to around $40,000 with "Lilac Time" and last week good for exceptional returns also; Labor day week-end exceptionally strong; $36,300

Hipp (Publix) (2,400; 50-60)—"Sawdust Paradise" and sound (Par) and vaude. Business braced with installation of sound; over $14,000.

Portland Big, $18,000;

Portland (Publix-W. C.) (3,500; 35-60) "The Racket" (Par). Registered well; F. & M.'s "Hi Yellah" stage show; $18,000.

Broadway (W. C.) (2,000; 35-60) "The Fleet's In" (Par). Went well; Movietone news; Georgie Stoll and band; $14,000.

Metropolitan (4,000; 50-65)—"Sawdust Paradise" (Par). Nice at $42,400.

— BOSTON

"Wings" $12,000 in Legit

Youngstown, O., Sept. 11.

"Wings" did $12,000 at the Park last week, the town's only legit house, and is holding over.

-Paramount, $80,600

Paramount—"Water Hole" (Par) (3,666; 40-65-75-$1). Picture not heralded as particularly strong but house ran neatly beyond average of past weeks; $80,600; Coogan here

Rialto—"The Patriot" and sound (Par) (1,960; 35-50-75-$1) (4th week). Jannings off but $100 from second week; $44,200 and seems sure of six weeks; when it does Criterion—"Wings" (Par) (836; long run picture glowed at $14,750 last week.

— NEW YORK

GRANADA'S NEW RECORD $33,000, "FLEET'S IN"

Granada (W. C.-Publix) "The Fleet's In" (Par) (2,785; 50-65-$1). Previous high for house, held by Bow's "It," topped by about a grand; little better than $33,000, great.

California (W. C.-Publix) "The Patriot" (Par) (2,200; 65-90). Jannings demonstrated his drawing power by passing $22,000; in for indefinite stay.

— SAN FRANCISCO

Loew's State (3,218; 50), "The Patriot" (Par). Drew best returns in several weeks with unusually commendatory notices; $15,500.

—NEW ORLEANS

DIX, $22,000 AT PALACE

Palace (Loew)—"Warming Up" and sound (Par) with Loew-Publix unit. Doing greatest consistent business of its career; almost $22,000.

Met (Stanley-Crandall)—"First Kiss" (Par) and Vita shorts (1,518; 35-50). Fay Wray and Gary Cooper credited with jump over previous picture; "Kiss," being silent, makes figure even better than the usual at $11,500; talkers and other sound

—WASHINGTON

$11,000 PROVIDENCE HIGH

Majesty (Fay) (2,200; 15-75)—"Forgotten Face" and sound (Par). Good for around $11,000.

Strand (Ind) (2,000; 15-50)—"Loves of an Actress" and sound (Par). Coined about $10,000, okay.

Capitol and Loew $500 Apart With Dix and "Faces"

Capitol (FP) (2,700; 40-60), "Forgotten Faces" (Par). Up to $17,000.

Loew's (FP) (3,200; 45 - 75), "Warming Up" (Par). Dix and good unit pulled in $16,500.

—MONTREAL

Valencia (Loew-U. A.), "Water Hole" (Par) (1,500; 25-50). Business up somewhat; $4,000 not big, but satisfactory at present low top.

Parkway (Loew-U. A.), "The First Kiss" (Par) (1,000; 15-35). Came in here with downtown success to credit; consistently good; house now getting Vita shorts and second runs; patrons like; about $4,300, a decided jump over previous week.

The New York Times.

Ingeniously contrived undersea melodrama. Scenes are so compelling and acting so competent that interest never slackens . . . A realistic conception of the horrors aboard a sunken submersible. Another praiseworthy point is that the characters are particularly well drawn. Direction is especially clever.
—Mordaunt Hall.

The Sun

An undersea disaster graphically depicted. Vivid and affecting. Admirably photographed and acted. As arresting a melodramatic episode as the past season has brought. When the big moment arrives, it is big indeed.—John S. Cohen, Jr.

The Morning Telegraph

A genuine hit. Has everything that movie audiences literally eat up . . . . Breath-taking suspense, heart interest, a well developed story, an excellent cast and perfect direction. Abounds in interesting sequences of submersibles and numerous instructive shots to us 'land-lubbers' who have no doubt seen our subs only in news reels. Unusual humor in the characters. The picture is a triumph.—H. D. S.,

DAILY EXHIBITORS' REVIEW

A natural box-office success with a theme that millions of people have become acquainted with and that will cause hands to grip seats and lumps to rise in everyone's throat. Good cast, fine direction and advance expoitation already created gratis, before you play it.—Wilkerson.

NEW YORK Herald Tribune

Something of the overpowering horror of a submarine disaster, of the hideous tragedy of a group of men left to go mad and gradually suffocate in the ocean's depth, is graphically depicted. Nothing short of brilliant in its sheer dramatic effectiveness. With considerable attention to detail and romantic effect, it captures the proper mood of its timely and terrifying subject with authentic power.

Talkies and Silents

Classification of Theatres and Pictures Advocated by An Exhibitor

By William A. Johnston

AN exhibitor friend of ours—Leon Jarodsky, of Paris, Ill.—writes us a letter which deserves the attention of the whole industry. It goes straight to the heart of the sound-silent picture problem, and whether you agree wholly with what he says or not, his argument is very much worth listening to:

Improvement in Pictures

Dear Mr. Johnston:

In April you published a letter in your editorial which I had written you. Whether it was just the general trend of the business or whether any attention was paid to this letter by the producers, I do not know; nevertheless it is distinctly noticeable that the pictures are being made more towards the lines which I suggested in that letter. The results are very satisfactory and business for the past thirty days has been steadily and surely improving. Here is a peculiar thing about the patron of the motion picture theatre. The lady patron wants pictures two or three seps above her own station socially; that is, she wants to live through a picture of that type. The man generally likes his pictures several stations below him in life. This is peculiar but nevertheless is a fact. The professional trade, doctors, lawyers, etc., and particularly doctors, want action pictures while the clerk in the store likes the same type of story that his ladylove likes.

If you will remember, I said that I did not believe that the talking picture would ever replace the silent drama. I still hold to that with certain reservations. Our town is seven thousand and has no Sunday movies while our neighboring city of seventy-five thousand has Sunday shows. It is only nineteen miles from us with street car and bus service. One theatre in this town has had Vitaphone equipment for well over a year. While I will own that that equipment has pulled this house out of the rut, the house is also being handled in a very showmanlike manner. The competitive houses to this house are in the hands of one of our biggest vaudeville chains and their two picture houses are not doing so well but their vaudeville house is doing better. In other words, the Vitaphone and vaudeville houses are doing most business. But you will notice my claim that the talking picture house is in the hands of a showman and the vaudeville house is in the hands of vaudeville people, while the other two picture houses, being in the hands of the vaudeville people, do not appear to be doing so well.

If the motion picture business does not watch its step it will rush headlong into suicide with this talking picture craze. I still say that talking pictures are a novelty. Here is what is going to happen: Virtually every patron in this town goes on various Sundays to Terre Haute because of this town being closed and we are probably in a better position to get the reaction of these patrons than possibly any other town having a first run situation such as we have, without having the talking picture installed in our own house.

Patrons and Talkies

There is a distinctive split in the attitude of the patrons towards the talking picture. Nine out of ten, in fact, I would say 95 per cent of our patrons, advise us not to put in the talking picture. This comes from the very best of our patrons and from people with whom we have very close contact. They do not like distortion in their music and the canned effect. They do not like talking pictures (most of them have seen "Lights of New York") except from a novelty standpoint. They liked the "Jazz Singer" but were smart enough to call it the exceptional and occasional. They all claim that the silent picture with the regular orchestra and organ music has a much greater appeal. One patron, for instance, said to me. "What would 'The Covered Wagon' have been with talking pictures, or the 'Ten Commandments,' or 'Ben Hur'?" Probably "What Price Glory" and "Big Parade" might have been all right but a lot of the close powerful action would have been sacrificed in the technique and that action is just what appeals to us.

A debate in the high school among the Juniors recently in the class to which my daughter belongs found that out of forty some pupils all but three had seen and heard the talking picture. It may sound peculiar but each and every one of these students, including the teacher, decided that they preferred silent drama and that the talking picture had its place in the future but that it would never overcome the silent drama.

Two Distinct Demands

Here is my thought on this subject: The demand for talking pictures will be individual and distinct from that for the silent drama. The houses having talking pictures will cater to their fan and the house with the silent picture will cater to the silent picture fan and both will cater to high-class audiences. The talking picture will not have the broad appeal that the silent picture has and the big money makers will be fewer and farther between, than among those of the silent drama. It will be necessary for theatres to run this in a manner similar to those towns operating today on a vaudeville and straight picture policy and you will find that their trade will follow the best picture among the talking pictures or rather the talking picture fan will follow the best pictures among the talking pictures and the silent picture fan will follow the best in the silent pictures.

I say one thing, and it had better be done and done at once. We have all made our money, big and little, from the silent picture business. We have all seen slumps and flush time. We have seen inventions come and go; but let the present day producers go straight ahead with their picture business catering and appealing to the silent picture business and institute a department wherein they make talking pictures for talking picture houses. Let them make their certain number of pictures for this trade and not attempt to cater and appeal to the silent picture business with it. If the talking pictures become strong enough and appeal to large enough classes, it will then of its own accord become the dominant thing in our business. While on the other hand by ruining silent pictures to make them fit for talking pictures you are going to force the silent picture out of the business for a business which I do not think will eventually have one-half the appeal that the present silent picture has.

Let the business take its own natural course and make pictures for the houses with talking equipment but keep that department distinctly separate and aside from the silent picture. In regard to synchronized pictures with music, after the picture has been made, if they care to synchronize it with music it will not hurt the picture. Have you ever stopped to think that this business has at various times catered to vast units of minority trade rather than the majority?

As an example, there is a big vaudeville house in a town of one hundred thousand people. This house actually does not cater to the majority but rather to the minority. There will be fifteen hundred people in this house next Sunday afternoon. It is generally forgotten that this house will cater to trade within a radius of fifty or sixty miles surrounding it. It will pick fifty people from this and that community out of that radius and if there are ten or fifteen such communities surrounding it, this alone will make a thousand people. While at the same time several thousand people may have gone to the picture shows in each of these communities. If this big house shows to five thousand people on that day and there are twenty little towns and each shows to eight hundred people and the picture houses of that bigger town, where the vaudeville house is located, have shown to a great many people, taking it in the aggregate we will find that the majorities have attended the straight pictures rather than the vaudeville. Of course, taking the people who came from each community to the vaudeville house, in the aggregate, it forms a tremendous crowd but that crowd is nothing compared with the balance of those who attended the straight pictures. That is what I am afraid the talking picture is headed for. Cater to the minorities but congregate them and do not force the majorities to accept their dictates.

Separate Picture Departments

Let us not ruin this business. It is good enough for any showman in any community where conditions are any ways near right and there is no use to try to bolster up a business with a false or futuristic front just to help the man who doesn't know how to get people into his theatre. Let the producers create separate picture departments for talking pictures and let the business take its own course and eventually it will prove out one way or the other. Let them produce and make their own stars instead of stealing and ruining, for the silent patron, those stars who are not able to talk.

I intend this letter strictly as constructive and if you can get any thought out of it which means anything to you, I am, with best wishes,

Yours very truly,
Leon Jarodsky.

Earl Hudson Joins M. P. News As Assistant Publisher

Well Known Motion Picture and Publishing Expert Takes Important Executive Position with This Publication

IT is with great satisfaction that I announce this week the return of Earl J. Hudson to the executive staff of Motion Picture News. He has already entered upon his duties as Assistant Publisher.

Mr. Hudson is returning to us (he was the first Circulation Manager of The News, back in 1914) after a wide and successful experience in other branches of the industry. He comes back to the publication business—the activity to which he first gave his fine talents and for which he is pre-eminently fitted.

As a newspaper man, he gained his first training in his home town, Elgin, Ill., going afterwards to Chicago, where he rose rapidly and became a feature writer for The Tribune. Motion pictures attracted him, and his association with The News followed.

He joined First National as a publicity man and made a distinguished record in that field. In the creation of news material which newspapers and trade papers were glad to print, Mr. Hudson showed unusual originality and initiative. Subsequently, he was promoted to be assistant to J. D. Williams, when the latter was general manager of First National, and occupied a similar position after R. A. Rowland joined the company.

At the time First National began to produce its own pictures, Earl Hudson went to the Coast as the business manager of a unit. His production abilities won immediate recognition and soon he was placed in charge. Under his supervision some of the best box-office pictures were turned out; and this record was followed by his appointment as the head of First National production units in the East.

It has always been the policy of Motion Picture News to bring into its organization men fully acquainted with the film industry; who know its problems; and who are fitted to work constructively and sympathetically in furthering the progress of the screen.

Earl J. Hudson

In addition to this invaluable experience in production, Mr. Hudson is fully acquainted with distribution problems. He also has a very extensive knowledge of exhibition, and numbers many theatre owners and managers as personal friends.

I know of no man in the industry better equipped to undertake, and carry through successfully, the important executive and administrative functions which are now his on Motion Picture News. I regard Earl Hudson as one of the ablest men in the whole publication field. And I am sure his association with us will meet with widespread approval and interest throughout the motion picure industry.

Troy Musicians Not to Ask Increase in Wages

Musicians at Troy theatres have decided not to ask for any increase in wages. In fact, a request for a year's contract from September 1 was denied at two or three of the theatres.

The projectionists union in Troy is watching the installation of talking equipment and in case of its installation at the Lincoln Theatre, the operators there will demand a boost in pay. The chief operator at the Troy Theatre is now receiving $75 a week, when talkies are shown, while the other three men to the booth receive $50 each.

New Films Put Into Work At Universal City

New productions that were put into work within the past few days at Universal's studios at Universal City included "The Hell Wrecker," starring Hoot Gibson; "Speeding Youth," a new two-reeler of the "Collegians" series; "The Ridin' Romeo," a short western, featuring George Chandler, "U's" new western player; and "The Society Cirens," a new Arthur Lake comedy. "The Hell Wrecker" will probably have a change of title, "Blow by Blow" seeming to be the name that it will eventually have.

Distribution for Gaumont-British Thru Canadian

Arthur A. Lee, vice-president of Gaumont-British Corporation of Canada, Ltd., has arranged for the physical distribution of their pictures in Canada through the Canadian Universal Film Company, Ltd., with offices throughout the Dominion. The Gaumont-British Corporation will have their own sales organization under the direction of Edward Auger, Managing Director. They will release from twenty-four to thirty feature pictures.

Pathe Discontinues Road Show Department

The road show department of Pathe Exchange, Inc., was discontinued September 8th, because of the postponement of the road tours of "The Godless Girl" and the synchronization of this production. Sam Blair, who was handling the booking, and Joe Shea, in charge of the publicity, have left Pathe.

David Bader Promoted to "U" Sales Department

David Bader, manager of Universal's accessory department for the past three years, has been promoted to be assistant to Ted Schlanger, eastern sales manager of Universal.

The post of accessory manager will be filled by Leo D. Balsly.

W. S. Rand Manager of Columbia Omaha Branch

Walter S. Rand has succeeded George W. Sampson as manager of the Omaha branch of Columbia Pictures.

In another field of the company's activities, in the story department, Howard Green has joined the staff of writers.

Arbitration Will Be Resumed by Northwest Exhibitor Unit

ARBITRATION by members of the Northwest Theatre Owners Association will be resumed Sept. 21, and all is peaceful between C. C. Pettijohn and W. A. Steffes, according to a recent report from Minneapolis. Mr. Steffes heads the Theatre Owners Association while Mr. Pettijohn is General Counsel for the Film Boards of Trade.

The start of the differences occurred some time ago when the Northwest Exhibitor Association refused to let its members sit on cases in which United Artists were involved. Soliciting of non-theatricals in direct oppositon to regular accounts was the main issue. Under the new order of things, all cases tried by the so-called "outlaw board," will be retried where the request is made.

Deal Not Imminent, Says Warner

No Immediate Prospect of K-A-O Purchase, He Declares; Is Asked to Head Sapiro Organization

FOLLOWING the official announcement of last week that the Warners had acquired Stanley, Harry M. Warner issued a statement denying that the purchase of Keith-Albee-Orpheum by Warners was imminent.

"In particular with reference to the statement that Warner Bros. are about to take over the Keith-Albee-Orpheum chain of theatres," states Mr. Warner, "at this time there is no immediate prospect of such a deal being consummated. We are, of course, as a developing firm, seeking an outlet for Vitaphone and Warner Bros. pictures, always ready to consider any proposition which would broaden our selling strength. That does not mean that Warner Bros. are indiscriminately going to buy theatres singly or in chains. When negotiations of importance have reached a stage where facts can be given, it will be our pleasure to communicate them to the newspapers and the public."

It is believed that any final negotiations for the purchase of K-A-O by Warners will not be entered into until the return of Joseph P. Kennedy, J. J. Murdock and Pat Casey from Europe. They are scheduled to arrive in New York next week.

With reference to First National, it is reported that Warners are seeking to pool with the First National franchise holders, contingent on the consummation of the K-A-O deal. There is nothing official on this, however.

Harry M. Warner has been asked by the New York exhibitor-co-operative (the Sapiro organization) to become its business advisor. Herbert R. Ebenstein stated that Aaron Sapiro would continue as head of the organization. The proposal to Warner is seen as a protective move for the members of the co-operative.

It is also reported on Broadway that Warners are negotiating a deal with the Shuberts, which would give the former a supply of play material for talkies and sound pictures, and additional theatre outlets.

S. M. Berg Assumes Sam Fox Co. Post

S. M. BERG, composer and authority on motion picture music, has been signed by the Sam Fox Publishing Company of America to take over the newly established department of sound picture synchronization and also the music scores department. Mr. Berg has for the past six and one-half years been associated with Keith-Prowse and Company in England.

With offices established in the Paramount Building, New York, Mr. Berg will be associated with J. S. Zamecnik and William Frederick Peters, who are under contract to the Sam Fox company. These latter have composed several photoplay scores, among them "Wings," "Abie's Irish Rose," "Way Down East" and others. Louis Francesco and Edward Kilenyi will also be associated with Mr. Berg in the special work.

Charles R. Rogers Signs New Kid "Find"

Back from a European trip with his family, Charles R. Rogers, producer for First National, revealed that during his stay in Berlin he signed to a long-term contract a child actor, Bobby Burns by name. The boy has already appeared in two pictures made in Berlin and he will come to America this January. He is four years old.

While in London, Mr. Rogers acquired options on two current stage productions, the titles of which he will announce just as soon as the final papers have been signed.

Judell Gets Chesterfield Program for Chicago

Judell, Inc., Ben Judell, president, this week signed for the product of Chesterfield Productions and will handle the latter in Illinois and Indiana territories. The Chicago exchange will confine its activities, it is said, to the Chesterfield program alone.

"The Singing Fool"

ALL the predictions of what sound can mean on the screen come true in "The Singing Fool". It is one of the greatest box-office attractions ever made, and places Al Jolson securely in the front rank of picture stars; gives him a position so commanding, in the new order of things, that no star, at the moment, stands beside him.

If "The Jazz Singer" brought the revolution, "The Singing Fool" intensifies it a hundred fold. Compared with the earlier production, "The Singing Fool" is a big leap forward, and it had to be, because "The Jazz Singer" itself was a notable achievement.

The night of September 19th, at the Winter Garden, New York, ranks in importance and revolutionary effect with any night ever witnessed in any department of the theatre; is of equal meaning with the premiere of "The Birth of A Nation", for instance, an occasion which transformed the motion picture overnight.

The screen is now definitely a new thing because of "The Singing Fool". All the efforts that will be made in sound will have to be compared with it, and will be compared with it by the public, which is absolutely certain to give this picture an overwhelming reception.

It is, moreover, incomparably the finest voice picture to date, an extraordinary combination of three elements: Jolson's seven songs; dialogue in which all the principal characters participate; and just the right admixture of silence.

It is, of course, the songs, plus Jolson's remarkable personality, that make the film a sensation. These passages are irresistible. They range from the "Mammy" mood to the pathos of "Sonny Boy", and are delivered by this great artist in magnificent fashion. The Winter Garden audience was stirred as few audiences have ever been, and every one of the songs brought an ovation.

But there is more in this picture than the songs, splendid as they are. Jolson demonstrates, far better than he did in "The Jazz Singer", that he is a great screen actor. His handling of the scenes with a new and wonderful child actor, David Lee, made history. Contrasting, are the fine passages of humor, brought to life by song, chiefly, but dialogue as well.

In no picture ever made have humor, heart interest and pathos been quite so well blended, because sound as the new factor makes all three far more effective than complete silence could.

On the eve of going to press we have time for only these few remarks. We shall have more—much more—to say of "The Singing Fool". It is a triumph for all concerned. For Jolson and his supporting players—Betty Bronson, Josephine Dunn, Edward Martindel, Arthur Housman, Reed Howes, Robert Emmett O'Connor and David Lee; for the director, Lloyd Bacon; for the scenarist, Graham Baker; the author, Leslie S. Barrows; for the cameraman, Byron Haskin. And, naturally, for the Warners, who have again, with a single picture, given the whole industry a tremendous push forward, and written a complete answer to those who believe that sound is only the passing fancy of a few enthusiasts.—Oscar Cooper.

Discusses World Wide

Aronson Tells of J. D. Williams' Extensive Plans for Distribution of Foreign Pictures

By HEINRICH FRANKEL

Berlin Correspondent, Motion Picture News

Berlin, Sept. 4, 1928.—The announcement of Al Aronson severing his connection with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and still more so the first news leaking out about his own plans, created an almost sensational stir of excitement in the German trade, thus newly emphasizing the weight of Aronson's personality and the importance rightly attached to any new scheme connected with his name.

After his many years' practical experience in Europe Aronson had come to the conclusion that a fair amount of European product should deserve considerably better and more lucrative exploitation on world markets than it actually got, so far an unproportionate amount of the profits having gone to agents and other intermediaries. Obviously all those short-comings are mainly due to lack of organization, and that's what made Aronson consider it a sound business proposition to supply such organization for any European product deserving it.

As J. D. Williams' plans in connection with World Wide and Earl Hammons were forming and starting to materialize at the same time and very much on the same lines, Aronson and Williams decided to join interests.

Mr. Aronson told your correspondent that he wishes it to be strictly understood that his new scheme does not in any way mean competition against American concerns and interests. What it means is just to open up and develop new ground which so far, lacking proper organization, had to be entirely neglected by European producers. The exploitation of the American market is, of course, only to be part of the new concern's enterprise. As its name implies, the idea is to open up all markets of the world's big ones and minor ones and thus to give European productions the chance which American concerns are enjoying thanks to their superior and all round export organization, the benefits of which are now for the first time to be accorded to European pictures.

The experience of the executives connected with the scheme will doubtless guarantee a proper selection of pictures; they will just be selected on their merit and on certain market values and they will be offered and sold to the exhibitor accordingly. Mr. Aronson pointed out to our correspondent that a big American concern could not possibly handle certain European product without incidentally lowering the market value of its own line-up, so that even a direct profit resulting for one or a few European pictures would be more than outbalanced by an indirect loss incurred for the company's own standard production. This handicap, Mr. Aronson went on, will be non-existing for the new concern which can afford to offer its product to the exhibitor, just according to its individual value, and without having to bother about the above mentioned handicap a big American concern would be faced with.

Thus obviously the new venture is sure to do a lot of good towards improving feelings between the trade in America and Europe by way of relieving American companies of sort of a moral burden incurred by (for the above mentioned reasons) often having to refuse to handle certain European product which will now be satisfactorily dealt with.

Furthermore, Mr. Aronson gave me to understand that very likely Central European distribution of his new concern's product will be unified very much on the lines of the old Fanamet organization, which comprised ten Central European markets. Mr. Aronson rightly pointed out that the idea of Fanamet, viz., the joint handling of different products with a number of minor territories, that this idea by no means proved a failure, but on the contrary, evidence has been supplied for the fact that those minor markets can be properly exploited and can afford satisfactory prices (which so far had never been gotten out of them), as long as a suitable organization is provided. This organization will be supplied. Likely developments of the scheme may very well result in unified physical distribution of all this selected product even in Germany and on the other big European markets.

Sound Pictures May Save Veteran House from Closing Down

THE sound pictures may be the means of saving the Stillman theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, from closing down despite the fact that plans have been under way to make this veteran house a thing of the past. At any rate, the way things stand at present, according to Assistant Manager William Haynes, is that everything is indefinite.

First National's "Lilac Time" proved the life saver for the Stillman. It broke all the Stillman's records and is the third picture in a year to hold at this house for four weeks. It is now stated that "Lilac Time" will be followed by "White Shadows" and "Wings."

Changes in policy for other Cleveland theatres have been announced. Specials, with and without sound and Maurice Spitalny with an enlarged symphony orchestra will become the policy of the Allen. Publix units will be moved from the Allen to the State while the State's combination policy will go into the Park theatre.

A. M. P. A. Holds Annual Election Meeting

Gallup Retires and George Harvey Is Newly Elected President; Harris Trophy Presented

THE annual closing meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., was held last Thursday noon at the Paramount Hotel, New York City. Business of the day included the election of a new set of officers, the installation of the new president and his cabinet, and the acceptance of the Sam Harris trophy for award by the Association. Bruce Gallup, the retiring president, presided at the meeting and summed up the work of the past year.

The body voted unanimously for the election of George Harvey, president; Paul Benjamin, vice-president; Dave Bader, secretary; Charles W. Farrell, treasurer; Directors: Bruce Gallup, Walter Eberhardt, A. L. Selig, Edward McNamee, Alex Moss; Auditing Committee: A. P. Waxman, Hopp Hadley, Leon Bamberger; National Counselor of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, Al Fineman; Managing Editor of the Bulletin, J. D. Trop; Business Manager of the Bulletin, Joe Fine; Trustee, C. L. Yearsley.

Before turning over his office to the newly-elected president, Bruce Gallup advanced a suggestion that the past presidents, many of whom are now high executives in the industry, form a group which could function in an advisory capacity to the governing body of the organization in the handling of important problems arising from time to time. C. L. Yearsley and Walter Eberhardt, past presidents, and others of the body approved this suggestion.

Edward L. Klein presented the Sam Harris trophy in behalf of Mr. Harris. Bruce Gallup accepted the cup and explained that the trophy would be awarded to the individual in the motion picture business, who has contributed by act, deed or suggestion, the best idea tending to create a better understanding and closer cooperation between British and American film industries, the cup to be held by the winner for one year. Gallup, as chairman of a committee composed of trade paper editors, will select the winner for the period from Sept. 1, 1927, to Sept. 1, 1928.

Labor War Continues

Serious Situation Reported at Kansas City and Other Points Still Remain Unsettled

A NON-UNION projectionist shot in Kansas City where a serious labor situation exists, closed door sessions in Minneapolis with hopes of an amicable settlement, the granting of a restraining order against Mansfield, Ohio projectionists and a no-decision meeting between union and theatre men in Pittsburgh sums up principal developments in the wage controversy during the past week.

In Kansas City the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri and the projectionists' union recently agreed on a contract for the ensuing year, but individual cases between exhibitors and various unions have made police guards necessary at one theatre.

Shortly after the shooting of a non-union projectionist at the Gayoso theatre, a large audience in the Capitol theatre was thrown into a turmoil when a "stench bomb" was thrown into an alley window.

Robert E. McDowell, the non-union projectionist of the Gayoso theatre who was shot, is in a dangerous condition.

Harry W. Roberts, manager of the Madison Theatre, Mansfield, Ohio, alleging that Howard L. Straub, Delbert Guthrie and Harry Delaney, projectionists, threatened to go on a strike without serving the customary two weeks' notice, applied to the courts for an injunction enjoining the men from carrying out their proposed action. Roberts, in his application points out that he entered into a new contract on September 1 of this year with Mansfield Local No. 576 of the International Alliance of Stage Employees to pay the wage scale agreed upon.

A temporary injunction was granted restraining the men from putting their proposed action into effect.

It is understood that in sessions being held behind closed doors the Minneapolis Operators' union is formulating a series of demands to make upon theatre owners.

It is said that they plan to demand an increase in wages and the doubling of present crews in houses having sound equipment. The first official meeting between the Northwest Theatre Owners' Association and members of the operators' union was held last week. One prominent exhibitor gave as his opinion that an amicable settlement would be reached.

No decision has as yet been reached between the theatre owners and officials of the Pittsburgh operators' union on the new wage scale presented by the operators. Several meetings have already been held, but no agreement has as yet been reached.

Change in F. N. September Dates

First National announces a change in the line-up of September releases. "The Whip" has been substituted for "The Barker" as the release for September 30th.

Other First National releases for September are unchanged.

Columbia Studios Have 5 Features in Work

Work has been started on five new feature productions at the Columbia studios on the coast.

"Sinners Parade" has almost been completed. This vehicle stars Victor Varconi and Dorothy Revier with Marjorie Bonner supporting. "Driftwood," "Stool Pigeon," "Greenwich Village" and "The Power of the Press" are other features upon which filming has started or preparatory work begun.

Harold Lloyd Starts His Initial Sound Film

Harold Lloyd has started work on his new comedy effort for Paramount which will have sound and dialogue. His new role will show him as the son of a police official of San Francisco and his search for criminals. Twenty acres of Westwood Hills property have been transformed into a Chinatown for atmospheric scenes. New sound stages are being completed at the Metropolitan studio for the comedian's unit. No leading lady has been chosen. Ted Wilde is directing with Lex Neale, Clyde Bruckman, Jay A. Howe and Felix Adler co-operating with the gag material. John L. Murphy will be in charge of production.

Five M-G-M Features for Release in October

Five pictures are set for release next month by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The quintet includes "Show People," with Marion Davies and William Haines; "Napoleon," the French production; "The Masks of the Devil," featuring John Gilbert; "Brotherly Love," a new Karl-Dane-George K. Arthur comedy; and "Shadows of the Night," a new vehicle for the dog star, Flash.

FBO's "Hardboiled" Has Sally O'Neill and Ince

Sally O'Neill and Ralph Ince will be the featured players of the FBO production, "Hardboiled," which Ince will also direct. The story, from the pen of Arthur Somers Roche, originally appeared in the "Cosmopolitan Magazine."

Renee Adoree Borrowed for "The Spieler"

Renee Adoree has been borrowed by Pathe from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to play the role of a carnival high diver in "The Spieler," which Tay Garnett will direct.

Mascot Serials Have All-star Cast

THREE serials, each having in its cast well known players who have been individually starred in feature pictures, will be released during 1928-29 by Mascot Pictures Corporation, Nat Levine, president.

The first production, "Vultures of the Sea," is now being released and its cast includes Shirley Mason, Johnnie Walker, Tom Santschi, Frank Hagney and Boris Karloff. The second, "The Vanishing West," numbers among its players Jack Daugherty, Leo Maloney, Yakima Canutt, Jack Perrin, William Fairbanks, Fred Church, Eileen Sedgwick and little Mickey Bennett. This will be ready for release Oct. 15. The third serial is "The Fatal Warning," a mystery melodrama, which will shortly go into production.

Buying Circuit Signing Up Major Product

THE product of Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Pathe and Columbia had been purchased by Affiliated Theatrical Utilities Corporation, New York State buying combine of which Nikitas Dipson and Fred Zimmerman are the heads. Last year this buying circuit experienced no little difficulty in acquiring the product of the major companies, but that is not the case this season.

On the contrary, companies seem eager to obtain bookings at the present time. This may be traced to the fact that Affiliated's position is strong, its 59 houses not having heavy opposition in their Buffalo zone and its 163 theatres in the Pittsburgh area also existing in a healthy condition. The rumored friction between Dipson and Zimmerman over the signing of the M-G-M product has been removed, it is said.

9 FBO Shorts Are Being Issued This Month

Nine short subjects are being released during the present month by FBO. The shorts and their respective release dates are as follows: "The Wages of Synthetic Sin," starring Alberta Vaughn, September 2; "Mickey's Movies," featuring Mickey Yule, September 9; "The Arabian Fights," another Vaughan vehicle, September 16; "Ruth Is Stranger Than Fiction," also starring Miss Vaughn, Sept. 23; "Curiosities, No. 1," September 26, and "Mickey's Battles," another of the Yule vehicles, September 30; "You Just Know She Dares 'Em," also with Alberta Vaughn, September 9; "Horsefeathers," the first of the Barney Google comedies, September 9; and "Fooling Casper," the first of the Toots and Casper series, September 16.

"Our Gang" in New York On Vacation Trip

Hal Roach's "Our Gang" made their first vacation to New York this week, arriving last Saturday, September 15, from Chicago on the Twentieth Century. Mr. Roach and Major Edward Bowes received them at the station. During the week they have been a featured part of the program at the Capitol. Last Sunday night they broadcast over WEAF as a part of the weekly radio hour of the Bowes theatre. A. L. French and Ray Coffin accompany the young film stars.

Warners Complete "On Trial," All-Talkie

"On Trial," entirely recorded through the Vitaphone and featuring Pauline Frederick, with support from Bert Lytell, Lois Wilson and others, was completed last week by Director Archie L. Mayo at the Warner Bros. studio in Hollywood.

Prominent British Film Men N. Y. Visitors

Harry Hall and J. C. Derham, both of Blackpool, England, and prominent in English exhibition circles, were visitors to New York the past week.

Missouri and Illinois M.P.T.O. Meeting

Members Decide Strict Neutrality on National Politics and Discuss Sound Pictures

STRICT neutrality upon all matters of a political trend is the only safe course for the moving picture exhibtors to pursue, especially during the excitement of a presidential year, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois decided in annual convention at the Elks' Club, St. Louis, on Tuesday, September 11.

The concensus of opinion of those present was that Mayor Jimmy Walker had handed out some very wholesome advice in his speech at Hollywood some weeks ago, when he stated that the motion picture industry should not become too active in partisan politics. The motion pictnre industry must tend to its own business and let the politicians look after themselves is the general view.

Because of the failure of the larges distributors of talking picture devices to send experts to St. Louis to address the convention it was not possible to put on the kind of demonstration of sound pictures President Wehrenberg and the other officers had hoped for. However, sound pictures occupied most of the time devoted to the executive session and all phases of sound picture exhibition were gone into.

Most of the exhibitors present agreed that from a practical standpoint the immediate installation of apparatus for showing sound pictures is out of the question so far as the small exhibitors are concerned. Sound pictures are too costly to be practical for the small theatre of this territory was the general view.

Fred Wehrnenberg, who operates several theatres in South St. Louis and who long has been prominent in St. Louis and Missouri independent motion picture affairs was re-elected president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois for the second time, making him the first man in the history of the organization to be elected president for three terms.

Other officers elected at the meeting were:

Vice-president, W. W. Watts, Springfield, Ill.; I. W. Rodgers, Poplar Bluff, Mo., and Cario, Ill.; J. F. Ross, Wallsvile, Mo.; J. C. Hewitt, Robinson, Ill., and T. E. Yemm, Duquoin, Ill. Secretary, Louis C. Hehl, 3242 South Jefferson avenue, St. Louis, Mo.; Treasurer, Oscar C. Lehr, St. Louis, Mo.; Sergeant-at-Arms, G. M. Luttrell, Jacksonville, Ill.; Executive Committee—Joseph Mogler, St. Louis, Mo.; J. C. Hewitt, Robinson, Ill.; W. W. Watts, Springfield, Ill.; Miss Mabel R. Miller, Madison, Ill.; Charles Goldman, St. Louis, Mo.; Maury Stahl, St. Louis, Mo.; W. O. Reeves, St. Louis, Mo.; T. E. Yemm, Duquoin, Ill.; Mrs. A. Hall, Dupo, Ill; L. A. Burenstein, Springfield, Ill.; I. W. Rodgers, Poplar Bluff, Mo., and Cairo, Ill.; Thomas James, St. Louis, and the president, secretary and treasurer of organization.

Board of Arbitration—Oscar C. Lehr, Ralph Goldman and Clarence Kaiman, all of St. Louis, and Fred Wehrenberg and Joseph Mogler, alternates.

Delegates to represent the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois at the National Convention to be held at Toronto, Canada, October 6, 17 and 18, 1928—Fred Wehrenberg, Oscar C. Lehr, Charles Goldmen, Thos. James and Clarence Kaiman, all of St. Louis; Robert C. Cluster, of Sparata, Ill., and Johnston City, Ill.; T. E. Yemm, Duquoin, Ill., and G. M. Littrell, Jacksonville, Ill.

M. P. T. O. A. Annual Meet

Canadian Members Active in Preparation for Toronto Convention, October 16, 17, 18

ACTIVE preparations are proceeding for the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' of America, which is to be held in Toronto, Ontario, at the King Edward Hotel, October 16, 17 and 18. Local arrangements are under the direction of John C. Brady, for many years an outstanding worker for independent exhibitors, who is proprietor of the Madison Theatre, Toronto. Mr. Brady, who is president of the Canadian M. P. T. O., is chairman of the general convention committee.

Co-operation for the Toronto convention has been extended by the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors Association of Canada through President John A. Cooper, Toronto, and by the Toronto Tourist and Publicity Bureau which has been sending out special literature. Col. Cooper is the head of the Hays organization in the Dominion.

In addition to Mr. Brady active workers in charge of certain features include Sam Major, exhibitor of Toronto; Miss Laura Elston, sec'y.; Alderman W. A. Saunders, Toronto; Harry Alexander, Toronto; and Harry Sedgwick, also of Toronto.

Release of "King of Kings" Backed by National Advertising

BACKED by a simultaneous advertising campaign in eight nationally-circulated magazines, "The King of Kings" (Pathe) will be shown in approximately 300 theatres on or about September 30, release date. Twelve and one-half per cent of these showings will be in sound. Hugo Reisenfeld prepared the musical score, rendered in the synchronized version by a symphony orchestra with incidental chorus of 110 voices.

Trade Reported Paralyzed in Porto Rico; No Word from Florida

THE motion pieture business has been paralyzed in Porto Rieo. due to the hurrieane whieh lately swept the entire island. aeeording to dispatehes reeeived in New York City. There are approximately 100 motion pieture theatres in Porto Rieo and praetieally every one of them have been put out of business by the storm, it is said.

Up to the time this was written no word has been reeeived as to theatre loss and damage in the devastated Palm Beaeh seetion of Florida. Millions of dollars damage have been reported and it seems reasonable to believe that theatres suffered their share. From Palm Beaeh the storm leaped along the Georgia and Carolina coasts and further damage is expected to be reported from these seetions.

Air Film Presentation

Will Hays to Give Lindbergh Picture to United States Government at Aero Society Dinner

WHAT the motion pieture eamera has done in the way of presenting aeronautieal news events will be demonstrated when for the first time a seven reel picture of Colonel Lindbergh's flight over the Atlantic, around the United States and through Central and South America, is shown at an appreciation dinner given by the Aeronautieal Industry to the motion picture industry, Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York City, next Monday night.

This film is not for comercial purposes, and will be presented to the Aeronautieal Chamber of Commeree by Will H. Hays, and in turn a copy will be presented to the United States Government. Subsequent to the dinner, Major Lester D. Gardiner, president of the Aeronautieal Chamber, will head a commission abroad which will make presentations to England, Franee and Belgium.

Among the guests from Washington offieial eireles will be Hon. Trubee Davison, Assistant Sec'y of War for Aviation, Major General James R. Fechet, Chief of the Air Corps, Hon. E. P. Warner, Assistant Sec'y of the Navy for Aviation, and Mr. W. P. MeCracken, Assistant Sec'y of Commeree for Aeronautics. Crack flying officers, members of foreign embassies and other dignitaries will also be included in a total of 1,000 guests. Col. Lindbergh may be present.

A. G. Fokker, in behalf of the Atlantie Aireraft Corporation, has placed one of this company's ships at the disposal of the dinner committee.

Against Price Cutting

Jack Miller Warns Exchanges Small Theatres Will Go If Slashing Continues

STATING that a price cutting war between some of the larger theatre circuit organizations in Chicago will eventually sound the downfall of the smaller eirenits and the exhibitor who operates the small theatre, Jack Miller, head of the Chicago exhibitor organization, recently warned the exchanges to that effect.

Miller asks that the exchanges sell the fifteen cent admission theatres at least eight to ten weeks behind release date and also advises members to add a protection clause in contracts. On ten cent houses he recommends that pictures be played a whole year behind release.

The trouble started when the admission of the Lincoln-Hippodrome theatre dropped to ten cents at matinees and to five and fifteen cents in the evening. Lubliner and Trinz then cut the Michigan's charge to five and fifteen cents in the afternoon and to live and twenty-five cents at night. The pictures played were as recent as one week after general release. A fifteen cent theatre in the downtown district is running pictures in the first week of their release and it is reported that two other Chicago houses expect to put on a like policy.

Ambassador Breaks St. Louis Theatre Records

ALL attendance records for St. Louis theatres were shattered by Skouras Brothers Ambasador Theatre, Seventh and Locust Streets, during its second year which closed on August 22, last. In the twelve months period 3,047,160 persons passed through the doors, an increase of 500,000 over the first year.

The average weekly attendance for the year was 58,599, a gain of 8,000 over the 1926-27 record.

Jackie Coogan proved the biggest drawing card of the year, pulling in 95,707 patrons, but did not equal the high mark set the previous year by Paul Whiteman and his orchestra. In Christmas Week, 1926, Whiteman played to 113,000 persons.

Sterns Start Off With 'Newlyweds" Release

This month the Stern Brothers, producers of comedies for Universal, began the new season by finishing four two-reelers for current showings. The first of the group is a "Newlyweds and Their Baby" comedy. "The Newlyweds' Hard Luck" is its title. It was directed by Franeis Corby, with Jack Egan and Derelys Perdue supporting Snookums. "Rubber Necks," with Sid Saylor, continue the adventures of George and was directed by Gus Meins and has Jean Doree and Harry Martell in the east. Buster Brown, played by Arthur Trimble, is the subject of "Half Back Buster," which has also Lois Hardwick, Tige, the dog; Sam Newfeld directed it. The final new Stern comedy is "Just Wait," in William Joe Young and Ned La Salle play Mike and Ike. Their feminine support comes from Betty Welsh and Harriett Mathews; Gus Meins directed.

FBO Regional Sales Meet in Chicago

FBO held a meeting for Chieago regional sales units last Sunday, September 9, at the Drake Hotel in the Windy City. J. I. Schnitzer, senior vice-president in charge of distribution, presided over the conclave. Other FBO officials present included E. B. Derr, treasurer, and Lee Marcus, general sales manager.

The meeting also included the following: Charles Rosenzweig, New York State sales manager; William Dahler, chief statistician; Sam Abrams, Milwaukee, manager; M. J. Friseh, Minneapolis, manager; Roy Zimmerman, Sioux Falls; S. W. Fitch, Omaha; Harry Frankel, Des Moines; Roy Churchill, Kansas City; Harry Weiss, St. Louis; Claud Penrod, Indianapolis; A. M. Elliott, Detroit; Harry Michalson, Cincinnati; A. J. Mertz, Cleveland, and Harry Dixon, Buffalo.

In and Out of Town

HAROLD SHUMATE, associate producer with Sam Sax in the production of Gotham's line-up, arrived in New York this week for the purpose of synchronizing "Times Square." He will spend much of his time at the Bristolphone studios at Waterbury, Conn.

RALPH BLOCK, associate producer at the Pathe studio in Culver City, arrived in New York Wednesday, September 19, for a series of story conferences. While in the city he will survey the story and play market.

M. A. BLOCK, who is in charge of the Year Book and Equipment Exhibit of the Ninth Annual Convention of the M. P. T. O. A. to be held at Toronto next month, has returned to New York after a three weeks' trip on the road. On Sunday evening, Octotrip on the road. On Sunday evening, September 4, Block will leave for Toronto to assist the convention committee.

AL ROCKETT, production and studio manager of First National, is now in New York, conferring with Irving D. Rossheim, president, and other executives. He expects to remain in the east for about two weeks.

AL JOLSON, who came to New York to attend the premiere of "The Singing Fool," will sail on Saturday, September 22, on the Ile de France. Upon arriving in England he will make a personal appearance at the first London showing of "The Jazz Singer," scheduled for September 27, at the Piccadilly Theatre.

News and Comment on All Phases of "Sound" Pictures

Small Exhibitors Wait Developments

Royster Says High Installation Costs Halt Southern Owners

N. L. ROYSTER, secretary-treasurer of the Theatre Owners' Association of North Carolina, in a letter to William A. Johnston, publisher of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, writes an interesting letter of conditions obtaining in the states of North Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia with regard to sound pictures and their effect on the small town exhibitor. He declares for the most part the exhibitor will await developments before making the costly installations.

The Royster letter follows:

Mr. William Johnston, Editor,
Motion Picture News,
New York City, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Johnston:

Having just completed a trip which took me through most of North Carolina, the Eastern half of Tennessee, and a portion of Virginia, I thought possibly your magazine would be interested in getting a first-hand report on the sound picture question in general, and conditions as a whole in this territory, which represents a great portion of the South.

As Secretary and Treasurer of the Theatre Owners' Association of North Carolina, I have naturally in this capacity inquired of, and have looked searchingly into the business conditions of small town exhibitors in general, as well as larger towns and cities, with a view of presenting several questions before our annual convention when it meets in December, therefore, I have very carefully tabulated conditions as I have found them.

To begin with, conditions as a whole through this territory, have been almost as bad as they were in and during the panic of 1907, and most certainly the worst they have seen since 1920. Many of the smaller town exhibitors have not only lost money operating their theatres, but a great many of them have been forced to borrow money to carry on. Loaded up with contracts, and with film rentals which averaged at least fifty per cent and more of their gross business, many of them have had tough sledding this spring and summer. I have checked up on film rentals in theatres throughout the above territory, and in most smaller towns, that is towns ranging from 3,000 to 25,000, I found that a great majority of the exhibitors were paying from fifty to sixty-five per cent of their gross receipts for film rentals on the average program pictures up to what we call specials.

I know of several small towns of 2,500 to 3,500 population where one theatre has to hustle to make a good return on the investment, but who now have opposition encouraged by some exchanges who have shot film rentals higher. Due to the sound picture question injecting itself right now, some of the exhibitors have gotten "panicky" and have allowed themselves to be led to signing contracts at prices that they can't possibly pay, and make a decent profit on their investment.

Regarding the "sound" picture question in small towns, and in some of the larger towns.

Every exhibitor who has competition, is watching his neighbor, and is wondering about various sound installations. The general opinion among the small town exhibitors seems to be that they are going to wait until the sound equipment for talking pictures gets standardized so that they won't have to install two or three different kinds of equipment to play the various talking pictures that are released. Another thing in their mind is that the average small town of 3,000 to 10,000 can't afford to install sound equipment at the present prices and rentals asked for them.

The vast majority of towns seem to be waiting for a year, or more until the prices on sound equipment come down in reason. Then too, exhibitors claim that they can't get a definite expression from headquarters as to what the equipment actually costs, terms and time of installation. I personally have inquired into the opinion of the general public in many towns as to what they thought of sound pictures, of those they saw, and opinions are about equally divided as to their likes and dislikes. I believe that in the average small town the sound, or synchronized films will no doubt increase business, but the thing uppermost in the minds of exhibitors, next to prices, is, are there enough capable actors and actresses in the motion picture industry to carry the talking picture forward as it should be carried. The small town exhibitors argues, with much plausibility, that the novelty of the talking picture has packed those theatres who have them, but will it last unless the actors become better actors in their manner of speech?

In Charlotte, N. C., I really and truly believe that the thing that has held business at its high summer peak, has been the Vitaphone and Movietone, while in Knoxville, Tenn., the general public there does not rave over it to any extent, and only in exceptional cases does the theatre which has the Vitaphone and Movietone, stand them in line as the Charlotte theatres do, hence it's a question for each individual town to figure out. If this information will prove of any benefit, you are at liberty to print and pass it on, if not, throw it in the waste basket.

Sincerely,
N. L. Royster, Secy.-Treas.,
T. O. A. of N. C., Charlotte, N. C.

Kansas Public Gives Opinions on Effect of Sound Pictures

AFTER a week of expression of public opinion on sound pictures through a column in the Kansas City Star it would seem that the populace in the Kansas City territory is of the following opinion:

Sound pictures will bring high class vaudeville attractions to the smaller towns which otherwise never could hope to see such acts in the flesh.

Sound pictures, in so far as news events of importance, political addresses, etc., are concerned, will be a huge success in the larger cities.

Sound pictures of a vaudeville nature are doomed for failure in the larger cities and, through their failure, will serve to augment interest in vaudeville acts in the flesh.

Dialogue for "Alias Jimmy Valentine"

"ALIAS JIMMY VALENTINE" will be the first Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture to contain a talking sequence. It is now in production on the coast, with William Haines in the starring role. Finishing touches will be put on the film before the end of the month.

Golden Given Charge of "U" Talkies

Universal has placed Edward Golden in charge of talking pictures and he is now organizing a special department at the home office, which will book direct for the time being synchronized pictures for which sales plans have not already been announced.

Sound Picture Reviews

By CHESTER J. SMITH

A Bit of Old Scotch

KITTY DONER has one of the liveliest short acts seen and heard on the Vitaphone to date. A vaudeville artist of international reputation, she puts all the pep and vim into her numbers on the screen that she does on the stage. Her voice registers splendidly and her dance numbers are exceptionally good. She sings an English number which she has done on the vaudeville stage for several years and then goes into a lot of Scotch patter with which she intermingles her lively dance steps. She is a real entertainer and her act will doubtless go big.

Crooning Along

The Croonaders, a male trio of uke and song artists present an act that goes over reasonably well. They perform as a trio and individually, but their numbers are not well chosen. Perhaps they will improve with more camera experience, but they seem too self conscious to do themselves full justice. Their instrumental work was better than their singing. There was no fault to be found with the way their voices registered, but they need better material to get over as well as they should.

The Foy Family carry on in this Vitaphone number, which has a bit of comedy, a song or two and some dancing individually and collectively by the troupe. It is a fairly lively act with the dancing the feature of it. Each apparently tries to outdo the other in the individual dancing and they cut some hot capers. The comedy is better than the average in these sketches. The act will undoubtedly go well.

Scott Tells of Furore Created by Talkies in Far East

WILLIAM SCOTT, FBO representative in Australia and the Far East, probably has as wide a knowledge of the effect of sound pictures on theatre audiences and exhibitors as anyone in the motion picture industry; at least he has been through an experience with them and is entirely familiar with their reactions in his territory. While this was not a particularly happy experience Mr. Scott is inclined to the opinion that the all-talkies will have a considerable vogue for some time to come and that they have a good chance for success in Australia and the Far East.

According to the FBO representative Australia and the Far East enjoyed synchronized pictures and the talkies some time previous to the world war. They created the same furore there then as they are doing in America today and it lasted less than a year. They had synchronization superior to ours, he said, but the amplification was not so good. Theatres having the foreign manufactured devices were packed to the doors for months before the adverse reaction set in and then they died.

"I am not saying the American sound pictures will not succeed," said Mr. Scott. "In fact I think they have every chance for success, particularly the all-talking melodramas and musical shows. In Australia and the Far East just before the war we went through a similar experience to which you are now having. The device used was the Gaumont Chrono-Megaphone and the synchronization was absolutely perfect, but the amplification not so good. In some parts of the house you could hear perfectly but in other parts the sound was somewhat blurred.

"Nothing in the way of feature length pictures was attempted, but celebrity artists such as Harry Lauder were used and audiences went wildly excited over these films for a period of about nine months or a year. Perhaps because of a lack of talent or something they quit producing them at that time and there has been no cry for them since. Recently the old time melodrama has come back strongly in my territory. Legitimate houses are doing extremely well with this type of play and I think talking melodramas would succeed equally well.

"The American film business in the Far East is rather a difficult proposition with the German market cutting in heavily. German distributors are extending the most liberal credit with the idea of coralling all of the business. They are giving exhibitors from three to six months, or practically what time they need to meet payments. The Krupps are making a projector considerably cheaper than it is being produced on the American market and these projectors are being generally used. I understand they will soon be making sound projectors and when they do it will undoubtedly be at a much lower price than is being offered now and at more liberal terms of credit.

"In the Far Eastern country the talkie is limited to the English speaking people. In India they had the Chrono-Megaphone, but there are too many dialects out there for it to be very popular with all of the theatre goers as a great number of different records would be necessary to make them all understand. In different cities in China, too, they have as many as twenty-two dialects and it would be almost impossible to satisfy them all. The question of expense is something much to be considered. Australia is the best market but there are comparatively few houses that could well afford American equipment as it is now priced. The largest Australian houses seat just about 3,000 but you can understand how they have to keep their overhead down to realize a profit when I tell you the largest of these houses gross not over $15,000 on the week. This is so because of the fact that the beaches offer too many counter attractions. In most parts of Australia they have ten months of Summer weather and in the other parts they have Summer the year round. They are consequently an outdoor-loving people there and you cannot drag them into the picture houses in the afternoon. The result is that on a full day's business they realize just about one capacity house. The top price at the leading houses is $1.

Sophie Tucker to Star in Vitaphone Picture

Sophie Tucker, among the foremost vaudeville artists, has been signed by Warner Bros. to make her screen debut in an all-talking and singing Vitaphone picture. No details with regard to the production are yet forthcoming.

Miss Tucker is internationally popular as a vaudeville star and as the star of many revues. She has won high favor in the United States, London, Paris and Berlin. By her contract with Warners she will appear exclusively on the screen in Vitaphone specials. Other stars exclusively on the Warner roster include Al Jolson, John Barrymore, George Arliss, Fannie Brice, H. B. Warner, Richard Bennett and Ted Lewis.

First National Starts First Sound Stage

First National Studios have started construction work on the first unit of the new sound stage groups to be erected at the big Burbank film plant. According to the building estimates, various sound stage units will be completed in thirty, sixty and ninety days.

A unit consists of four stages and one recording building, and First National will have several units. Half of the first unit, however, will be completed before work starts upon others, so that two companies may then start the production of sound pictures. The building program is estimated to cost a half million dollars.

Pauline Frederick Signs Long Warner Contract

Pauline Frederick has been signed to a two years starring contract by Warner Bros. as a result of her work in an all-talking Vitaphone special, "On Trial." Her voice is said to register perfectly and she is gifted with dramatic ability.

"On Trial" will bring Miss Frederick to the screen for the first time in several seasons.

First National Stars Back in School

THE first "talking school" for sound films has been established at the Burbank film plant of First National Pictures. Teachers, classes, lectures, examinations and all—with stars and leading men and women for students!

On an experimental stage, devoted to scientific research not only in sound pictures but other advances of film technic, the stars are going to school again, figuratively speaking. So are director and scenario writers, but they are attending different classes.

The examinations are "voice tests," and every film player wants one. Speaking "lines" correctly and with pleasing, realistic accents; dialect for character roles; gauging the voice in volume in accordance to the distance of players from each other, not from the audience—these are just a few of the things the stars are learning in their "school."

M-G-M Decides Upon Two to Start Talkies

"The Bellamy Trial," and "The Little Angel," forthcoming starring vehicle for Norma Shearer dealing with a crook's regeneration have been picked as the first two dialogue films on M-G-M's line-up.

Monta Bell directed "The Bellamy Trial," with a cast headed by George Barraud, Leatrice Joy and Kenneth Thomson. Rehearsals are now taking place for talking sequences in the picture, the main setting for which is a courtroom during the dramatic events of a murder trial.

"The Little Angel," recently went into production with Sam Wood directing. Wood recently suffered an attack of appendicitis, which made an operation necessary and it is sure that Robert Z. Leonard will make the picture.

"Haunting Melody" Will Be Dialogue Picture

"The Haunting Melody," an original by John Farrow, soon to be published in novel form by Putnam & Sons, will serve as a co-starring vehicle for Fay Wray and Gary Cooper, and will be made entirely in dialogue and with music.

"The Haunting Melody" will be played by a world-famous figure of the musical concert stage, who will have a role in the picture. The locale of the film is laid in the colorful background of Spain, with Cooper as an English Dragoon officer and Miss Wray as the Spanish girl who inspires his regeneration.

Denny Will Be Heard in Next "U" Feature

Reginald Denny's stage voice is to synchronize with his next picture. An original story by Gladys Lehmann and Earl Snell called "Clear the Deck" has been purchased by Universal as Denny's next starring vehicle and it will be made with sound.

Nick Barrows, formerly with the Harold Lloyd organization, has been retained for the comedy construction, while Joseph Henaberry will handle the direction. Work is to start on production within the next few days.

Schlesinger Interests Will Promote Phonofilm

THE Schlesinger interests of America, England and South Africa are announced as being behind the formation of three companies to be organized for the purpose of providing Phonofilm installations for theatres and the licensing of producing companies to make pictures under the same system. The third company will be a nation-wide organization to distribute the product of the system.

General Talking Pictures Corporation is the title of the licensing and installing company. It was recently chartered in Delaware with an authorized capitalization of 500,000 shares of common stock of no par value. It will start immediately upon the manufacture of theatre projection apparatus and also upon the manufacture of recording apparatus.

The second Schlesinger company formed is American Sound Film Productions, Inc. It is the first company licensed to produce the Phonofilm patents and will immediately become active. The company plans to start production in New York with short subjects and later to go into the feature picture field.

General Talking Pictures Corporation will maintain a studio for the use of licensed producing companies and will synchronize sound and musical effects to pictures of licensed companies.

Dr. Lee De Forest, inventor of the Phonofilm system, has taken a stock interest in the installation and licensing company, and has also accepted a long-term contract with it to act as adviser and chief consultant in the research department. His services will be available for all licensed companies.

Negotiations for the transfer of all the patents and rights of Dr. Lee De Forest, De Forest Phonofilms, Inc., a New York corporation, and De Forest Phonofilms Corporation, a Delaware corporation, to the installing and licensing company, are now pending, and are expected to be consumated immediately.

International Photoplay Distributors, Inc., will immediately be expanded to take care of the distribution of the product of American Sound Film Productions. Exchanges will be established in all of the key cities.

Hollywood Rushes Construction Work on Sound Stages

CONSTRUCTION work is going ahead rapidly at a number of the Hollywood studios and from all indications building activities will occupy much of the attention of motion picture executives for many months to come. It was all brought about in the rush in preparation for sound pictures and every effort is being made to complete the work at the earliest possible moment.

Ground was broken last Tuesday for the immediate construction of four new sound proof stages to augment the present facilities at the Paramount lot, Hollywood. Frank A. Brandow, studio manager, returned from New York Sunday with construction plans. These were originally formulated by Roy J. Pomeroy, director of sound effects at the Paramount-Famous-Lasky studios, in collaboration with engineers of the Western Electric and Bell Telephone Companies, and call for the erection of the most modern type of sound stage made possible by scientific research and development. Each of the four new stages will be 70 feet wide by 100 feet long.

Metropolitan studio's new sound proof stage is about completed and an additional stage is planned by the Christie Brothers on this lot. A novel cooling device has been added to the new stage with immense fans occupying a separate building underground some distance away from the new stage.

Work on the First National sound stage is progressing rapidly. It occupies space back of the dressing rooms formerly used for studio parking and will conform to the other handsome stages on this lot. The new sound stages at Universal cover considerable acreage and will be last word in modern sound stages.

500 Bristolphones Due by Jan. 1, Is Claim

BUDD Rogers, vice-president of Gotham Productions, which handles the distribution of Gotham-Bristolphone, a sound disc device, declares that 500 houses will be equipped with Gotham-Bristolphone by January 1, 1929, and that 2,000 more will be installed by March 1, 1929.

Two sound stages are now being constructed at the Gotham studio on the coast and two at the Bristolphone Studios in Waterbury, Conn. "Times Square," recently completed, will be Gotham's first Bristolphone picture. Harold Shumate, associate producer for Sam Sax, and Alice Day, the star, have arrived in the East to add the sound effects to the picture.

Largest Vitaphone Stage Now in Operation

Swinging into action for the first time, the fourth and latest of the Vitaphone sound-proof stages, was initiated with the synchronization of "Stark Mad," the all-talking Warner Bros. Vitaphone production. Culminating a period of two years of constant research and in the filming of talking moton pictures, this newest Vitaphone stage, erected at a cost of $300,000, embraces the most advanced features of electrical engineering. In this new stage cutting rooms, playback rooms, recording apparatus, projection rooms and other equipment are directly connected in a manner which facilitates the working of each different phase.

Phonofilm Injunction Asked Against Canada Famous

A HIGHLY interesting legal development over sound picture installations has taken place at Montreal, Quebec, in the application by the De Forest Phonofilms of Canada, Limited, before the Superior Court at Montreal on September 15 for an injunction to restrain Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, from proceeding with the use of Movietone equipment in the Palace Theatre, Montreal, the first house in the Dominion to offer sound pictures as a permanent feature.

The hearing of the case has been enlarged to permit Famous Players Canadian Corp. to enter an answer in writing to the application and, in the meantime, the Palace continued to offer sound programs.

In its statement of claim, the DeForest Phonofilm of Canada declared that the DeForest company had been incorporated in Canada in 1906 and subsequently had acquired ownership of certain rights to inventions as described in eight letters patent which, it is stated, were granted by the Dominion Government. These rights, it is claimed, are now being violated by Famous Players Canadian Corp. by the use of the Movietone equipment in the Palace Theatre since September 1. This apparatus embodies the inventions covered by the patents, it is claimed.

The DeForest company has also asked for damages to the amount of $25,000.

Famous Players Canadian Corp. is wiring some ten of its largest theatres for the presentation of Movietone or Vitaphone productions.

The Canadian situation has no bearing on the American suits pending over patent rights in which the Phonofilm Company is involved with the Fox-Case Company, and which suit is now definitely set for decision in the local courts in October. The DeForest Phonofilm Company sold its rights for the Dominon of Canada to the DeForest Phonofilm Company of Canada in 1906 and it is the latter company that is suing Famous Players Canada Corporation to restrain them from the use of Vitaphone equipment.

Sills' Next to Contain Full Dialogue

Milton Sills' new starring drama, hitherto titled "Changeling" and now tentatively known as "Stranded in Paradise," will contain full dialogue sequences, it is now definitely announced by First National Pictures. Dorothy Mackaill is playing opposite Mr. Sills. Under the direction of George Fitzmaurice, the company is shooting exteriors on the South Sea Islands. The dialogue sequences, however, will be synchronized at the First National Studios in Burbank when the company returns about two or three weeks hence.

"Captain Swagger" Will Be Synchronized

Pathe has added "Captain Swagger," a Rod La Rocque starring vehicle, to its list of sound pictures for the season. It will be synchronized by the RCA Photophone process with sound effects and music and will be available for exhibition on October 28. The silent version will be released on October 14. Rudolph Berliner, musical director, worked out the synchronization.

Pathe's list of synchronized pictures for the season, in addition to "Captain Swagger" includes "The King of Kings," "The Godless Girl," "Show Folks," "Annapolis," "The Spieler," "Ned McCobb's Daughter," "Noisy Neighbors," "The Leatherneck," "Square Shoulders" and "Listen Baby." In addition to Pathe News, the short feature sound group includes to date, Aesop's Film Fables, Topics of the Day and the Grantland Rice Sportlights.

Palace, Montreal, First Canada House Wired

Talking picture developments in the Canadian theatre field are progressing as scheduled, following the re-opening of the Palace Theatre, Montreal, on September 1, as the first wired house in the Dominion.

Announcement has been made by J. R. Muir, of Vancouver, representative of Famous Players Canadian Corp., in British Columbia, that the Vancouver Capitol will open October 1 with synchronized programs. Two important Famous Players houses in Winnipeg, the Capitol and Metropolitan, are also being wired and talking features will be heard there very shortly.

Manager Thomas Daley, of the Tivoli Theatre, Toronto, has also announced talking programs there at an early date, this house also being controlled by Famous Players.

Wesco Executives Discuss Sound Film Problems

Anticipating revolutionary changes in the operation and exploitation of "sight and sound films" executives of West Coast Theatres throughout the state convened at the St. Francis Hotel September 6th. Harold B. Franklin, president of West Coast Theatres, was the chief speaker. The sudden popularity of the current wave of "sound" films, Franklin believes, presents a new problem.

Other speakers were A. M. Bowles, local division manager; Jeff Lazarus, publicity chief for the circuit; Howard Sheehan, vice-president in charge of theatre construction; Jack Mansfield, assistant to Franklin; Herman Webber, western representative of Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation, and Charles K. Thall, booker for Northern California.

Talking Sequences for "Leatherneck"

Talking sequences are being considered for "The Leatherneck," to be made by Pathe this autumn.

It will be a William Boyd starring picture with Alan Hale and Robert Armstrong, which Ralph Block will put into production the latter part of September. The story is an original by Elliott Clawson, and will be directed by Howard Higgin.

"Collegians" Series to Be Synchronized

The fourth series of Universal's "The Collegians" will be synchronized with sound effects and dialogue, according to Carl Laemmle, Jr., who has been responsible for all of the "Collegian" series. The pictures are two-reelers confined to college sports and activities and lend themselves readily to synchronization.

Extensive plans are under way for the selection of suitable stories for the synchronized "Collegians," which, however, will be made also in a silent version as a great number of the users of the series are not yet equipped for Movietone.

Obtains Handling Rights for Bristolphone

Jesse Fishman, general manager of the Standard Film Service Company, has acquired the sales and distribution rights to the Gotham-Bristolphone for the Ohio and western Pennsylvania territory. Installations of the sound device will be made within a month in Cleveland, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh. Following these demonstrations in the key points of the territory, a sales campaign will be conducted. Fishman states that immediate installations will be made following orders.

Vitaphone Installations in Cleveland Houses

Vitaphone installations are going merrily on in the Cleveland territory. The Allen theatre will be ready to present talking movies in about two weeks. Variety Amusement Company has closed a contract for installations in all of their Cleveland houses. Their Lorain house, the Palace, is now being equipped and will open with "The Jazz Singer." John Pekras is having Vitaphone installed in his Capitol theatre, Elyria, at the present time, and as soon as completed, he will open with "Tenderloin."

Fotovox to Make Shorts at Paragon Studio

Fotovox Talking Pictures has taken over the Paragon Studios in Fort Lee, N. J., and will start immediate production on 52 short subjects under the Powers Cinephone process of recording. The Fotovox company is headed by Joseph Gransky, a Broadway ticket broker, while on the board of directors are Frank G. Bowers, Inter-Revenue Collector in New York; Eddie Dowling and Frank Lauste, formerly associated with De Forest Phonofilm.

Han-a-Phone Installing Theatre Equipment

Dale Hanshaw, president of Hanshaw Pictures, which controls production rights under the Han-a-Phone system of recording, says that the sound reproducing machines are now being turned out at the rate of fifty a week, and that theatre installations are under way.

Hanshaw is planning to produce twelve pictures under this process and is now making his selections from the nineteen stories he has acquired.

National Radio Tieup to Advertise Warners Vitaphone Pictures

IN addition to the one million dollar advertising campaign to be conducted in big city newspapers by Warner Bros. on their Vitaphone pictures, negotiations have now been completed for a gigantic radio tie-up on the same pictures. The Vitaphone Jubilee Hour is scheduled for each Monday night from 9.30 to 10 o'clock over station WOR in New York and the entire Columbia Broadcasting Chain throughout the country. The chain includes twenty broadcasting stations in America.

Each week some internationally famous entertainer will be brought before the microphone through the courtesy of Vitaphone and Warner Bros. Pictures. The first program was given September 17 with Al Jolson the star of the evening. A short introductory address was delivered by H. M. Warner and then Jolson went on the air with monologue and songs. Among his numbers were, "Rainbow 'Round My Shoulder" and "Sonny Boy," which are heard in his latest Vitaphone picture, "The Singing Fool." The radio programs will continue for twenty-six weeks.

M. P. Arts Academy Technicians Discuss Acoustics

A DISCUSSION of acoustics in motion picture synchronization and a comparison of the various types of sound equipment was had at a meeting of the Technicians' branch of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, at the Hotel Roosevelt, Los Angeles.

The speakers of the evening were Vern O. Pelton, associate professor of physics, University of California at Los Angeles, and consultant of the leading studios of Hollywood, Fred Pelton, a director of the Academy and technical engineer formerly with United Artists, and Delmar Whitson, inventor of the Whitson sound apparatus.

"The Principals of Acoustics in Sound Proof Stages" was the subject of Vern Pelton's address and proved very interesting. Fred Pelton told of his recent tour of sound laboratories in the East and Mr. Whitson compared the various sound equipments on the market and in prospect.

At an open meeting held by the Academy on Monday, Sept. 10, W. B. Pettis, through a letter addressed to the meeting, stated: "American talking pictures rapidly are spreading the use of the English language in foreign countries. Prof. Pettis pointed out that gradually English is becoming the world language and as a result of this progress it will mean less misunderstanding among nations and a consequent decrease in war. Helen Miller Senn, director of public speaking department University of Oregon, declared that talking pictures will develop a new technique in voice transmission and that producers should not look too much to the stage for pointers.

Donald Crisp and William DeMille also addressed the meeting. DeMille said he was convinced the silent drama will remain the principal part of screen entertainment and that talking parts merely will be added.

Dean Kay Immell of the U. S. C. speech department and Prof. W. M. McDonald of the U. S. C. dramatic department told of voice testing and a newly devised method of classifying actors on a basis of voice characteristics as well as physical features. Monte Blue, Alec B. Francis, Francis X. Bushman and Jean Hersholt added their opinions and advice to the Academy's discussion.

Pathe Sound Newsreel Reality With Delivery of First Truck

THE RCA Photophone Company has delivered the first sound news truck to Pathe and as a consequence Pathe Sound News is now a reality. The delivery was made on Saturday morning, September 15 and the outfit was immediately shot into action by Editor Ray Hall.

This new sound truck is an advanced development in portable visual and sound recording equipment, capable of shooting news stories at great distances and thus capturing the most difficult news stories for reproduction on the motion picture screens of the world. The equipment has a visual camera range of 2¼ miles and a total range of 87 meters.

Immediately upon the delivery of this first Pathe Sound News truck to head-quarters photographs of it were telegraphed by A. T. & T. transmission to the Pathe branch offices throughout the country. Sales meetings were held simultaneously and the transmitted photographs were received with the wildest enthusiasm by the Pathe executives and salesmen.

These photographs were telephotoed to the following seven cities having facilities for the receiving of pictures by this method: Boston, Atlanta, Cleveland, Chicago, St. Louis, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

It has not yet been definitely announced by Pathe when the first of these sound news reels would be released for motion picture screens, but the initial release will doubtless be forthcoming in the near future.

Crook Drama Does Very Well

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THEY'RE still shooting at the target of crook melodramas—which happens to be "Underworld," and though this one doesn't hit the bull's-eye, one can safely tell his neighbor that it does very well. Von Sternberg knows what he's shooting at since he directed "Underworld," and his newest essay along the paths of crime once again indicates that he knows his slums and his boys "who take 'em for a ride."

As long as Sternberg is permitted to make these melodramas and George Bancroft to lend his personality in making them colorful, no exhibitor should pass them up.

So we have Bancroft in another fine cameo performance—playing, as he does, the role of a rough, tough, super he-man with fine emotional flair and a most commendable restraint to balance it.

The story is not so new, but it is well treated as to action and suspense. There is something of a hint of Sternberg's "Salvation Hunters" in the backgrounds and atmosphere and realism of the goings-on.

So it shapes up as worth while—a picture which is really stereotyped if you dissect the plot, but which rises above the obvious through its "kick." Baclanova, Betty Compson, and others assist with excellent acting.

Drawing Power: Played up as another "Underworld" should draw them. Also cast. For any house. Exploitation Angles: Play up title, director and George Bancroft. Also Betty Compson and Baclanova.

THEME: Melodrama of heroics against heavy odds.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Length, six reels. Released, September, 1928. Cast: George Bancroft, Baclanova, Betty Compson, Mitchell Lewis, Clyde Cook, Gustav von Seyffertitz. Director, Joseph von Sternberg.

Mother Knows Best

Satisfying Film on a Slender Theme

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

EVERYTHING has been done to make the celluloid version of Edna Ferber's yarn as entertaining as the original. It moves along in tip-top shape, carrying just enough Movietone to provide novel appeal, and showing first class character work by Louise Dresser and Madge Bellamy.

The former gives a remarkable performance of a woman with a terrific mother complex. She makes the figure genuinely real. It is her task to be bobbing up to remind the daughter of any errors in her conduct, even to romance. She even turns up behind the lines in France where the daughter is entertaining the soldiers. And she makes the doughboys register as much fear as the girl. Humor stalks large in this story. The mother is not exactly the mean Moll type. Miss Dresser humanizes her and makes her very likeable, indeed.

The film, punctuated with Movietone effects, permits Madge Bellamy to do imitations of Al Jolson, Anna Held and Harry Lauder. She acquits herself very nicely, even though there isn't much carry in her voice. The dialogue is best attended to by Miss Dresser. It is a neat little picture and if some of its closing scenes were snapped up a little, it wouldn't have a flaw. It should be a great bet with the mothers and their daughters.

Drawing Power: The title and popularity of author's stories. Exploitation Angles. Bill as clever film version of interesting yarn. Feature author, Miss Bellamy and Miss Dresser. Tease the title. Announce that Madge does some fine imitations through Movietone. Suitable for all types of houses, particularly neighborhood houses.

Produced and distributed by Fox Films. Length, six reels. Released, September, 1928. Cast: Madge Bellamy, Louise Dresser, Barry Norton, Albert Gran, Lucien Littlefield. Director, John Blystone.

Good Morning Judge

Good Comedy

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THIS Reginald Denny vehicle hits a fast gait and is well supplied with comedy quirks to make it entertaining. The story contains many opportunities for the comedian's gift for light comedy. It gets quite humorous when Denny sets out to capture the girl, who has the reforming instinct, by telling her that he's a hardened criminal. This little fib gets him in a pile of difficulties and a large batch of laughs result.

Mary Nolan is the heroine, very attractive. Considerable support in the comedy sequences comes from Otis Harlan, in the role of a reformed hobo.

The humor being carefree and infectious and Denny being the competent farceur he is, this vehicle should satisfy the hordes and clean up generally.

Drawing Power: A good attraction. Exploitation Angles: A good title which can be sized up from many different angles. Ballyhoo Denny and the prize fight sequence.

THEME: Comedy. Rich young idler meets a girl, who runs a haven for reformed crooks. By telling her he's a hardened criminal he gets her interest. When some of the inmates of her institution attempt to rob her friends at a party given in the crooks' honor, the young idler throws aside his role of reformed thief and recovers her friends' jewelry and, incidentally, wins the girl.

Produced and Distributed by Universal. Released, April, 1928. Length, 5,645 feet. The Cast: Reginald Denny, Mary Nolan, Otis Harlan, Dorothy Gulliver, William Davidson, William Worthington, Bull Montana, Sailor Sharkey, Charles Coleman. Story, Harry O. Hoyt. Adaptation, Earle Snell. Continuity, Beatrice Van. Cameraman, Arthur Todd. Director, William A. Seiter.

The River Pirate

First Rate Melodrama—Entertaining

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

CARRYING a colorful title which spells an eyeful of action, with characters drawn from realities, and acted with feeling, this picture is sure to please them. It's adapted from Charles Francis Coe's crook story and is treated with sympathy by the director, William K. Howard. The scenes are vivid in a story which is well constructed to bring forth sufficient action and suspense.

It's the type of yarn which makes its crooked characters appealing. Since Victor McLaglen plays the central figure the sympathy for him is not misplaced. This trouper has a way of clicking with his audience because he projects his roles with tremendous personality.

In this picture he enacts the part of an all-around tough egg—a robber and gunman of the swash-buckling type. He meets up with a detective who gives him more than half a chance to prove his mettle. The fight between the two disciples of law and disorder is a humdinger. Donald Crisp is not far behind McLaglen in the force of his acting.

There is a love interest to soften the tougher moments—and it brings the bad man's younger pal into the picture. Nick Stuart plays the youth with creditable colorfulness. And Lois Moran makes the girl appealing.

A surprise is tacked onto the finish which employs the Movietone. A man appears and relates what happened to the central characters in the story. In all it's a moving melodrama that should entertain most any type of fan.

Drawing Power: Title, cast, For all kinds of houses. Exploitation Angles: Play up author and director. Feature principals of cast. Bill as actionful melodrama.

Produced and distributed by Fox Films. Length, seven reels. Released, September, 1928. Cast: Victor McLaglen, Lois Wilson, Donald Crisp, Nick Stuart, Earle Foxe, Robert Perry. Director, William K. Howard.

"Pathe Review No. 39"

(Pathe—One Reel)

AS pointed out in these columns recently by Mr. Reddy, the Pathe review issues are getting real classy under the able editorship of Terry Ramsaye. This new Review further bolsters up that assertion. Golf and girls are on display here and they mix very well.

The girls are from Chester Hale's troupe of dancers, who entertain nightly at Major Edward Bowe's Capitol on Broadway. This sequence shows Johnny Farrell instructing them in the fascinating game.

Other interesting offerings are a study of Mont San Michel in old Normandy charmingly done, and "Flowering Fields and Eternal Winter," portraying the waters of Baffin Bay. —RAYMOND GANLY.

Virgin Lips

Good

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THE languorous Olive Borden is seen to excellent advantage in this Columbia production, really an entertaining release. A Central American locale, a lone American girl whose safety is threatened by a bandit chief, and an American ace who has crashed in the neighborhood of the bandits and been taken captive—with these ingredients, the author, Charles Beahan, has mixed a nice concoction that simmers invitingly. Strengthening the picture further is the capable acting from John Boles as the ace, and Richard Alexander as the bandit chief. Miss Borden works her drooping mouth with good effect and gives a clinging vine portrayal.

When the bandit is about to execute the American flier and threaten all sorts of harm to the girl, help comes in the form of a cavalry squadron and the bandits are scattered. This is a conventional climax, but it is tried and true, and is evidently what the public likes to see.

"Virgin Lips" is a good little feature, and should please 'em.

Drawing Power: Good. Exploitation Angles: Play up the situations in the story, the American about to be shot, the girl in the power of the bandit, etc. Aviation displays, lip stick tie-ups with drug stores, etc.

THEME: Drama of the predicaments of American flier, captured by bandit chief. He falls in love with an American girl and does his best to protect her from the bandit. He gets word to the militia by a ruse and when help has arrived the bandit is captured and he is at liberty to wed the girl.

Produced and Distributed by Columbia Pictures. Released, July 25, 1928. Length, 6,048 feet. The Cast: Olive Borden, John Boles, Marshall Ruth, Alexander Gill, Richard Alexander, Erne Veo, Harry Semels, Arlin Pretty, William Tocker. Story, Charles Beahan. Scenario, Dorothy Howell. Cameraman, Joe Walker. Director, Elmer Clifton.

Sal of Singapore

(Reviewed by Ray Murray)

Well Acted, Well Directed Sea Story

ELLIOTT CLAWSON has given us something different in a sea story. It is a simple little tale concerning an abandoned baby, a rough sea captain and a scarlet woman. It was adapted from "The Sentimentalists" by Dale Collins and there isn't a rumrunner or a hi-jacker in the picture, heaven be praised. The story opens with several interesting shots in a honky-tonk resort in the Orient, where the various characters are introduced. The scene then shifts to the deck of a Pacific freighter where the balance of the action takes place.

"Sal of Singapore" gives Alan Hale a real opportunity to extend himself and as the hard-boiled seaman he delivers with telling effect. It is undoubtedly one of the best roles Hale has had since giving up his directorial megaphone. There are several clever bits of action original with Hale and he is never out of character.

Phyllis Haver in the role of the resort girl, who is shanghaied by the captain and compelled to mother the abandoned baby, gives an outstanding performance. She takes up the character she enacted in "What Price Glory" and follows it through. Other excellent performances were contributed by Henry Kohler, as Hale's rival for Sal's hand, and a comedy bit by Noble Johnson.

This is the third picture Howard Higgins has directed for Pathe and shows adroit direction. The action is closely knit and holds the attention throughout footage. Splendid photography marks the production.

THEME: Sea drama. Ship captain finds baby waif and shanghais cafe girl to mother it during ocean trip. The girl plans revenge on the captain and at the first opportunity leaves his ship to go over to a rival captain. The other captain gives pursuit, subdues his rival and compels him to marry him and the girl.

Produced and distributed by Pathe. Release date, November 4, 1928. The Cast: Phyllis Haver, Alan Hale, Fred Kohler, Noble Johnson, Dan Wolheim, June Cowles, Pat Harmon and Harold William Hill. Director, Howard Higgin. Adapted by Elliott Clawson from story by Dale Collins. Cameraman, John Meseall.

Walking Back

Well Done Jazz Story

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

MODERN youth—its faults and virtues—is the motif of this entertaining picture, well mounted and directed, with convincing acting. A note of sincerity pervades the whole, and the majority of the millions who throng the motion picture houses are generally seeking such entertainment as is to be had in this production.

Sue Carol and Richard Walling are the juveniles, a source of constant worry to their parents. Quite independent, they live at a speedy pace and they do not heed the counsel of their parents until adventure—adventure which almost results in death—comes into their lives and makes them, or rather re-makes them, into something more than a jazz-crazed couple. How this contact with evil re-moulded them is excellently portrayed.

Miss Carol and Walling are youth personified. The feuds of youth, their unreasonableness, their enrage when in the power of a gang of murderers, their response to filial affection—all their qualities good and bad find representation here. The climax is an excellent bit of picture making. Some of the titles, in the scene where the gunmen get them in their clutches, are modeled after Hemmingway.

Drawing Power: Good. For first-runs and other houses. Exploitation Angles: The question of youth's mode of living is always with us. The press sheet is freighted with hints on how to exploit it.

THEME: Drama of modern youth. Young boy neglects his studies, wrecks his father's car and disobeys his parent—all because of a girl. She, in turn, realizes how worthless are their efforts to find happiness in jazz capers. When bandits rob the bank of the boy's father, wound the latter and compel the boy and girl to drive them to safety, the boy speeds up the car to a terrific gait, terrorizes the bandits and ultimately drives them into the police station. His parents forgive him and he and the girl find happiness together.

Produced and Distributed by Pathe. Released, Oct. 10, 1928. Length, 5,035 feet. The Cast: Sue Carol, Richard Walling, Ivan Lebedoff, Robert Edeson, Jane Keckley, Florence Turner, James Bradbury, Arthur Rankin, Billy Sullivan. Adaptor, Monte Katterjohn. Director, Rupert Julian.

Man-Made Women

Entertaining and Well Done

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is an entertaining story, well done by a good cast and should prove an attractive program picture. Described as a society comedy, it is more dramatic than humorous. In fact it is almost void of humor. The story is not altogether new, but it is so capably enacted that it holds the attention throughout.

Leatrice Joy is starred in the picture, with John Boles, H. B. Warner and Seena Owen in the chief supporting roles. That quartet, directed by Paul L. Stein from a screen play by Alice D. G. Miller is almost bound to provide good entertainment, and they do so.

Miss Joy is the young wife who tires of the life laid down for her by her husband, John Boles. The latter would confine her to his clique, whose staid ways are not to her liking. She prefers the gay life of Jules Moret, an artist, and his friends. So when the husband protests too vigorously against her action she decides to leave him and earn her own way in the world. She answers an ad for a companion and upon getting the place learns that the woman is the mistress of her artist friend. The jealousy of the latter is almost immediately aroused. There is a quarrel and the woman leaves the artist, who then professes his love for the young wife. They evolve a plan by which the young husband's love will be put to the test. If the plan succeeds she will go back to him. If it fails she will marry the artist. The plan succeeds and all ends happily. It is a very nicely worked out plot and the direction is splendid.

Drawing Power: A good program with a strong cast, it should do well as a box-office attraction. Exploitation Angles: The theme lends itself admirably to a newspaper controversy as to divorce for mismated couples; the popularity of the leading players.

THEME: Society drama in which a young couple apparently mis-mated decide to separate, but are happily re-united when the gay wife finds the butterfly life is not all that she anticipated.

Produced by Ralph Block for De Mille Pictures Corp. Distributed by Pathe. Length, 5,762 feet. Released, Sept. 9, 1928. The Cast: Leatrice Joy, H. B. Warner, John Boles, Seena Owen, Jay Eaton, Jeanette Loff, Sidney Bracy. Director, Paul L. Stein. Story by Ernest Pascal. Screen play by Alice D. G. Miller.

"High Seas"

(Pathe—One Reel)

WHAT the Pathe publicity department calls "a romance of the waves" is this newest cartoon creation from the studio of Paul Terry and his busy staff of assistants. These gentlemen turn out no less than 52 cartoons a year, which is maintaining a speedy production tempo. This cartoon is quick and devilish from the moment Rita Mouse is kidnapped from the loving arms of Milton and taken aboard the pirate ship.

Heroically, Milton dashes to the rescue, befriended by a sympathetic whale. Ingeniously (and what cartoon character isn't) he bombards the buccaneers with cannon balls, saves his darling mouse and sinks the ship with the help of the hard-working whale. The two then ride back to safety astride their obliging friend.

The action is very fast, and the gags show no reluctance in making their bows.

A good cartoon.—RAYMOND GANLY.

The Whip

Old Timer Bobs Up—Not so Hot

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WELL, well, here's an old-timer as old timers go in plots. Carrying most every known ingredient known to melodrama it shakes some mean strips of celluloid in telling its Berthaclayish story.

The original first saw the light at Drury Lane and it looks awfully old-fashioned, though it is our suspicion that the players didn't take it any too seriously. The characters are nearly mid-Victorian in design. There's the fair lady, his lordship and the despicable villain—to say nothing of the faithful horse who champs at the bit and does his bit to bring reward to virtue. And interwoven through the story is a mixture of everything that goes to make up a harum scarum plot.

It is up to date in its costumes and sets, and the acting by Dorothy Mackaill, Anna Q. Nilsson and Lowell Sherman is as convincing as the story permits. So look upon "The Whip" as something out of the past. Most of the folks will get entertainment out of it at that.

Drawing Power: Popularity of stars and the horsey flavor. For average houses. Exploitation Angles: Play up the horse race, etc. Feature Miss Mackaill.

THEME: Melodrama of virtue triumphant over villainy—with a horse making the good people happy.

Produced and distributed by First National. Length, seven reels. Released, September, 1928. Cast: Dorothy Mackaill, Lowell Sherman, Ralph Forbes, Anna Q. Nilsson, Albert Gran, Marc MacDermott. Director, Charles J. Brabin.

The Circus Kid

A Weak Feature Film

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THERE'S little to recommend this feature, below par as an attractor. This is no fault of Joe E. Brown and little Frankie Darro who are fine in their respective parts. The general circus atmosphere has been caught, too, thus lending the scenes a great deal of conviction. What does fall down—and fall badly—is the story, which is a faint echo of "He Who Gets Slapped," "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," and other tales of grief-torn punchinellos, who behind their greasepaint, suffer terribly. In this case, however, the central character is not a clown but a lion tamer, but even new variations on an old theme will grow tiresome.

A burden of woe rests heavily on the lion tamer, hopelessly in love with another woman, who loves another man. He also has a weakness for strong drink, but through the influence of the girl and his kid friend, he abandons the vice. When he stumbles over the fact that the girl does not love him, he takes recourse to liquor. He then dies saving the girl's lover from an escaped lion.

Drawing Power: The picture is not so strong, but it is a fair bet for the houses that book the regular program line of films. Exploitation Angles: The circus atmosphere, the lion-tamer's sacrifice, the popularity of young Darro, Brown's work.

THEME: Drama of the circus wherein a lion tamer gives his life to save the lover of the woman he idolizes. His passing brings sorrow to all, especially to a homeless boy whom he had nursed along into a circus attraction.

Produced and Distributed by F B O. Length, 6,085 feet. To be released, October 7, 1928. The Cast: Joe E. Brown, Frankie Darro, Helene Costello, Poodles Hanneford, Sam Nelson, Lionel Belmore, Charles Miller, Johnny Gough, Sid Crosley, Charles Gemora, Clarence Moorehouse, Frank Hemphill. Original story by James Ashmore Creelman, Continuity, Melville Baker. Cameraman, Phillip Tannura. Director, George B. Seitz.

The Port of Dreams

Pleasing Romance

(Reviewed by Ray Murray)

THE directors are flocking to the waterfront for comedy-dramas these days. Wesley Ruggles' latest Universal production is based on a story by John B. Clymer. It revolves around a youth on parole from San Quentin prison, who befriends a street waif and eventually marries her to save her from the clutches of a villain. The director has worked up the heart interest to the highest pitch and injected bits of comedy that makes it sure fire box office.

Most of the action centers around three characters—the girl, played in perfect tempo by Mary Philbin; the boy—entrusted to Fred McKay, a new-comer at Universal; the retired sea captain—very ably handled by Otis Harlan. In fact, Harlan came very near stealing the picture. He has dropped his grimacing and plays the role straight with several subtle touches that prove invaluable in a picture of this kind. Walter Anthony's titles were an asset to the production, also.

A very pleasing little and one that will hold audiences.

THEME: Young convict is serving eight years for a crime committed by his father. To shield latter and spare his mother he does not reveal facts. He is paroled in charge of old sea captain and works in a shipyard. A street waif hides away on ship which houses boy and captain and she becomes part of the little family. When discovered boy is threatened with return to jail. Captain takes them out to sea and marries them and they return to face hard-boiled parole chief, who relents and permits them to go on their happy way.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Release date and footage not yet determined. Cast: Mary Philbin, Otis Harlan, Fred Mackay, Edmund Breese, Mary Alden and Francis McDonald. Adapted by Paul Schofield. Photographed by John Stuman. Supervised by Harry Decker. Director, Wesley Ruggles.

"Felix the Cat in Jungle Bungles"

(Educational—One Reel)

AFRICA and its native animals form the background against which the little black cat contributes his latest bit of pantomime. It is a good cartoon, as happy as the cat's name, and except for an old gag (which first appeared in "She's a Shiek) it is up to the standard of these Sullivan cartoons. Like many of his contemporaries in the flesh, Felix enjoys the role of cameraman.

He is provided with material adequate enough for the needs of a cartoon, and comparable in its way with the stories of Bebe Daniels and Nick Stuart and all the other boys and girls who have been appearing in the role of camera reporter. Traveling down to Africa for choice bits of film morsels with which to thrill the public, Felix meets with adventure and thrills. There are more animals than one generally sees in the Felix cartoons.—RAYMOND GANLY.

The Wright Idea

Breezy and Full of Humor

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

JOHNNY HINES gives vent to lots of fun in his newest comedy, his best in a long while. He achieves laughs throughout the story, a good one by the way, well gagged and a splendid vehicle for Hines' funny antics. The star plays one of those nervy chaps who breeze to success solely on their nimble wits. Johnny is not beyond his depth in a role of this sort—rather, he's just in his element.

The picture is so arranged to provide suspense as well as high-grade laughs. The story has fine support from such veterans as Edmund Beese, Fred Kelsey, George Irving and others. Louise Lorraine, his leading lady, is charming in her bit.

Drawing Power: A good laugh attraction. Exploitation Angles: Tell the fans that it is Hines' best and publicize his supporting cast. As ink figures to great extent in story arrange tie-ups with stationery stores. Dress up a man with yachting uniform to attract attention.

THEME: Comedy of young inventor's efforts to land his blotterless ink.

Five and Ten Cent Annie

A Weak Number

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

AN attempt at hilarious fun doesn't make out so well in this vehicle, ultra whoozy when it comes to plot. As the leads are Louise Fazenda and Clive Cook, a good pair of comics. There's slapstick galore, and Louise is quite a sketch.

From street cleaning to riches is the jump enjoyed by Clive. He gets his fortune on the condition only that he be present at the home of his deceased benefactor on a certain evening, his share of the fortune going to his butler if this condition be not observed. So the wily butler has Clive shanghaied, but Louise follows him on board the ship disguised as a seaman and, between the two of them, they foil the kidnappers and get back to safety and the fortune.

Drawing Power: Neighborhood and second-run fare. Just a program attraction.

Exploitation Angles: Play up this Warner Bros. comedy team and the situations on board the ship.

THEME: Comedy of street cleaner and his shop girl sweetheart. The street cleaner inherits a fortune, but his butler seeks to do him out of it by having him shanghaied. With the help of the girl, he escapes from the ship and regains the shore and the money.

Produced and Distributed by Warner Bros. Released, May 26, 1928. Length, 4,975 feet. The Cast: Clyde Cook, Louise Fazenda, William Demarest, Gertrude Astor, Tom Ricketts, Douglas Gerrard, Andre Beranger, Flora Finch, Sunshine Hart, Bill Franey, Eddie Haffner. Scenario, Charles Condon. Director, Roy Del Ruth.

Key City Reports

New York City

BROADWAY theatres again came through in good style the past week with those showing sound pictures making the most consistent showing. A couple of the large houses probably registered some disappointment, one having what was looked upon as an exceptionally strong added attraction and the other easing off considerably from a prosperous previous week's trade.

Jackie Coogan and the elder Coogan were booked along with First National's "Heart to Heart" at the Paramount but all the big Publix house could do was to register just a good week's business—no better than plenty of other weeks at this house without any boy wonders or what have you. This does not mean that the Paramount did not make a nice profit on the week—it always does—but much more was looked for.

The house that took the backward step was the Roxy and the gate here tumbled quite a bit from its previous showing of "Fazil" (Fox). This red hot one made an excellent gross the first week but the second eased off so noticeably that "The River Pirate" was brought in as its successor.

The Capitol had nothing to kick about with a second week's playing of "The Cardboard Lover" (M-G-M), attendance being almost as good as during the first week. Down the street at the Rialto "The Patriot" (Par.) continues to please the large army of Jannings fans and at the Rivoli "The Tempest" (U.A.) is still a paying venture despite its long stay in town. This one is due to go out the current week. The Strand made it another good and last week with a holdover of "State Street Sadie.' "The Whip" came in.

M-G-M's "White Shadows" continues its pleasing pace at the Astor and this pace is a money-making one and the same goes for First National's "Lilac Time" at the Central. Columbia's "Submarine" is making a most excellent showing at the Embassy, attendance at capacity right along. The small Cameo finished the run of Selwyn's "Dawn" to good business for the entire three weeks. The Warner-Vitaphone production, "The Terror," at Warners' continues at a smart pace, as have the previous talkie features at this house.

The Fox Movietone "Air Circus" at the Gaiety, plus a Movietone program, goes along at a fair pace and "Mother Knows Best" has taken the place of "The Red Dancer" at the Globe, current week. More next week about this one.

The premiere of Warners' latest Vitaphone Al Jolson feature, "The Singing Fool," took place on Wednesday night of this week at the Winter Garden, home of the chorines. Much is looked and hoped for on this one. A big ballyhoo, featuring Al Jolson, went on the air on Monday night over station WOR. Jolson did the warbling and he was good as usual.

Los Angeles

MATINEE business everywhere fell off perceptibly last week due to daily events in connection with the National Air Races which attracted thousands of air-minded Southern Californians and scores of visitors to Mines Field. After-dark performances did not seem to enjoy any stimulating effect and the week, on an average, was not a particularly good one.

At two down-town houses pictures which previously ran at road-show prices were the attractions. For instance, "Four Sons" at the Metropolitan. This did only fair despite added features of personal appearances of popular players. "The River Pirate" followed and opened to average attendance. Both Fox pictures.

At the Criterion, the same situation governed the attraction "Wings," which ran also some time ago.

"Two Lovers," which has held forth at United Artists Theatre, is closing after a run of three weeks. Business slight the past ten days.

"The Godless Girl" at the Biltmore did fairly well.

"Lilac Time," on its last two weeks at the Carthay Circle, is holding on. However, plans for the opening of "Mother Knows Best" at this house are already under way.

The Marion Davies picture, "The Cardboard Lover," in which the star was supported by Nils Asther and Jetta Goudal, benefited by the extravagant publicity campaign in its behalf and did well. Another "repeaer" follows—"Fazil," which formerly ran at the Carthay Circle.

"The Terror," Warner Brothers Vitaphone subject, has continued to do good business at their Hollywood Theatre, with matinees slightly off, and while "White Shadows in the South Sea" still continues to draw at Grauman's Chinese, the advent of "Noah's Ark" is already being announced on the screen, which indicates that "White Shadows" will soon give place to the Biblical epic.

Minneapolis

THE State had the big office attraction of the week in Minneapolis — Colleen Moore in "Lilac Time." This picture did a fine business and had to be held over for a second week, one of the very few pictures in the history of the State to warrant two consecutive weeks. The Strand opened up on Thursday after being closed all summer and made a good showing with "Wings," which was road-showed last winter at the Metropolitan. This picture will also be shown all next week. "The Whip" was the film attraction at the Minnesota, and it got good crowds. The program was supplemented by the Publix stage unit show "Flapperettes."

"Dawn," the Edith Cavell picture, was shown at the Metropolitan, but it didn't attract a great many persons. Critics agreed it was a good picture, but it didn't seem to have a great box office appeal. The Metropolitan is a legitimate house, but shows an occasional picture.

The Grand Theatre, a second run loop theatre, has just had Vitaphone equipment installed, and it made a very nice showing in its first sound offering—Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer." Pantages showed Laura La Plante in "Home James," just a fair drawing card, and the Hennepin-Orpheum found "The Perfect Crime" a popular attraction.

Neighborhood houses were showing such pictures as "The Mysterious Lady," "Warming Up," "Skirts," "Easy Come, Easy Go" and "Forbidden Hours" and were rewarded with about the average business.

The chief competition of the theatres is a dance marathon, but as this is the second one in Minneapolis, it is not cutting in to theatre business as did the first one, which affected the theatres badly for almost three weeks.

Cleveland

LAST was an exceptionally big week for the downtown theatres. It has, in fact, been an exceptionally big season for the downtown houses. Cooling plants, early release of the new pictures, and sound equipment combine to create a greater interest in the movies than ever before. And because the neighborhood houses do not have cooling plants or sound equipment or even the new pictures, this has been a particularly disastrous season for them.

"Lilac Time" continued to play to capacity audiences at the Stillman right through to the last performance of its four weeks' run. This picture has rare entertainment qualities, with a universal note that makes it irresistable.

"The Tempest" had a very big week's business at the Allen, where it was presented with sound effects.

"Oh Kay" pleased State Theatre audiences. Business was average.

"Fazil" did big business at Keith's Palace. This picture of burning love in burning sands made a great hit with the young folks especially.

"State Street Sadie" continued to make a good showing during its second week at the Cameo. It was the first talking picture offered at the Cameo and for that reason received a great deal of advertising.

"None but the Brave" and "The Vanishing Pioneer" divided the week at Keith's East 105th Street. "The Vanishing Pioneer" was the better liked of the two pictures, being a vivid presentation of an interesting phase of our national development. "None but the Brave" did just fairly well, although it is breezy and entertaining in spots.

"Cardboard Lover" was well attended the first part of the week at the Park" and "The Night Watch" got its full share of the week's business the last half of the week.

Milwaukee

THE fall season has started with some broken records for big business. Last Sunday marked one of the busiest of the season in all the down town houses, and several houses have broken house records during the week. With such a start managers are looking forward to one of the biggest seasons in history.

"Street Angel" in its second week at the Strand continues to pack them in with such gusto that a long queue forms shortly after lunch at noon waiting for the box office to open. The picture will run for two additional weeks, making a four weeks stay. "The Garden of Eden" at the Majestic is doing exceedingly well. The Wisconsin offered "The River Pirate" and succeeded in keeping the house well filled.

"Tempest" closed its second week at the Garden with a flourish. It was very well attended throughout its entire showing. "The Foreign Legion" did fairly well at the Alhambra. "Forbidden Hours" did moderately well at the Merrill. The Orpheum featured "Happiness Ahead" and packed the house at every performance. The Riverside did fair business with "Hit of the Show" as feature.

Neighborhood houses, too, found business greatly improved during the last week. "The Mysterious Lady" played to very good houses at the Tower and Oriental. "Lion and the Mouse" drew good business to the Garfield, Uptown and Modjeska. "The Cop" was well attended at the Venetian.

Cincinnati

OPTIMISTIC predictions on the part of Cincinnati exhibitors for the past few months are being fulfilled, and how! Business in practically all of the local houses is back to normalcy, and the exhibitors are happy.

The Capitol, with complete synchronization of "The Street Angel," as also Movietone features, did a marvelous business, so much, so in fact, that the picture will be held over an additional seven-day engagement.

"Four Sons," at the Lyric, got unusually good breaks for the week. The picture was well received, and the crowds kept coming regularly. The picture will be held over for another week.

Victor McLaglen in "The River Pirate" at the Albee, together with the vaudeville acts, got off to a flying start which was maintained throughout the week. This house has been steadily gaining in patronage, and attracts quite an appreciable out-of-town clientele from contiguous territory.

"The Water Hole," at Keith's, was well liked, and a big week's business was the result.

The Strand enjoyed a profitable week with Buster Keaton in "Steamboat Bill, Jr.," at which house a novelty film, "Face Value," was also shown.

"The Upland Rider," the first half attraction at the Family, with "The Strange Case of Capt. Ramper" for the second half, both piled up a nice gross at this house.

The Palace, vaudeville and pictures, one of the houses in the K-A-O chain, maintained a steady attendance throughout the week, with a bill that pleased the fans in every particular.

There are now two dramatic stock organizations playing, with the opening of the regular legitimate season just around the corner, but this seems to have had a stimulating rather than a demoralizing effect on the movie houses.

Seattle

ANOTHER fair week at the film houses in this city, with attractions pulling in direct ratio to their quality in most instances.

"The Terror" opened an extended run at Hamrick's Music Box Theatre, following four weeks of "Glorious Betsy," and on the opening two days of the first week all records were smashed, despite the fact that "Betsy" was the attraction that opened the house. Day and night the present film has been standing them out in line, playing to capacity at every performance and requiring extra shows at night to accommodate the crowds.

Directly across the street at Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre "Women They Talk About" was the attraction, and it also played to very large houses with long waiting lines every night. Another week for this film, which is playing to big business at every performance.

At the Seattle Theatre, business dropped off to a noticeable extent. "The Mating Call" was the attraction, and critics and audiences alike proclaimed their dislike, resulting in business below normal.. Fanchon-Marco's "Spangles Idea" on the stage was lavish and entertaining, and Gene Morgan had some clever specialties as master of ceremonies, but the film kept them away.

"Sunrise" at the Fifth Avenue Theatre did not draw according to its worth as a fine production. It is distinctly out of the class of "audience films" and consequently failed to do any tremendous business. The week was probably below average, although those who appreciated fine films were enthusiastic in their praise.

"King of Kings" in its second week at the Columbia Theatre continued to play to the mediocre houses that greeted its initial week, but it is apparently being held over to comply with contracts. Very little interest in the film from any quarters, and business rather quiet.

"Under the Tonto Rim" at the Coliseum Theatre and "The Desert Bride" at the Embassy were average attractions that played to fair houses only. "Half a Bride" was the attraction at the Orpheum, in conjunction with a very poor vaudeville program, and business at this house was off, after showing a nice increase for the last few weeks. At the Pantages, "How to Handle Women" was the screen attraction, but the real headliner was Mae Murray and her Brazilian Band on the stage. She succeeded in doing a very pleasing business for this house, although former appearances in this city at the Fifth Avenue Theatre did not build her up much as a return attraction.

Dallas

"THE PERFECT CRIME" with Clive Brook and Irene Rich, brought the Majestic a big week's business and grosses for the week showed a large increase. This picture was an F.B.O. talkie and was heavily billed . Much criticism was heard concerning the off spots in the talking sequences which was very noticeable. The unusually clever plot made up for these discrepancies. The best Interstate vaudeville of many weeks was included in the program and helped keep business up.

At the Melba "Women They Talk About" with Irene Rich and Audrey Ferris failed to attract and business for the week was not so good. The picture pleased those that saw it and the low business could not all be charged to that source but more than likely was caused by the after effects of the poor offering the week before which was "Sawdust Paradise" and was a flop.

The Palace enjoyed another unusually good week with "Tempest," starring John Barrymore. The name John Barrymore is synonamous with the words "Good Business" in Dallas and receipts for the week again proved this fact. Every evening performance checked off a full house and more than pleased the patrons.

"The Foreign Legion," featuring Norman Kerry and Lewis Stone, and "Tenth Avenue," with Phyllis Haver, Joseph Schildkraut and Victor Varconi, was responsible for good business at the Capitol throughout the week. Business at the Capitol the past few weeks has shown a very marked improvement.

At the Old Mill "Oh Kay," featuring Colleen Moore, and "The Magnificent Flirt," with Florence Vidor, brought average business for the past seven days.

"Half a Bride," with Esther Ralston and Gary Cooper, and "Forbidden Hours," with Ramon Novarro and Marceline Day, accounted for good receipts at the Arcadia.

Oklahoma City

WITH cooler fall weather prevailing, the theatrical business in Oklahoma City has been very good.

The Capitol showed "Women They Talk About," a Warner Bros. production, with Vitaphone, and Irene Rich, Audrey Ferris and Willie Collier were each excellent in their individual parts.

Billie Dove in "The Night Watch," a First National attraction, enjoyed a week's good business at the Empress.

John Barrymore in "Tempest," a United Artists production, supported by Camilla Horn and Louis Wolheim, did splendily at the Criterion for the entire week.

"Lilac Time," First National air epic, starring Colleen Moore, has broken the Empress's attendance record in Oklahoma City. The picture opened August 20 and closed September 7th, and showed to enormous pleased crowds of people every afternoon and at night.

Albany

THE talkies again demonstrated what they could do in the way of drawing the crowds in Albany, for "The Terror," running the entire week at the Mark Strand Theatre, packed them in even though muggy midsummer weather prevailed for at least one half the week. The crowds simply flocked to the theatre each day regardless of weather conditions. The picture proved a money getter.

Another good bet from the standpoint of the box office proved to be Billy Dove in "The Night Watch," running at the Mark Ritz in Albany. While this house is a comparatively small one, the picture drew so well that it could have handled hundreds of persons more each evening. The Leland ran well last week with "The River Pirate" although the torrid weather no doubt kept the crowds down for the first part of the week. The Clinton Square Theatre in Albany running double features, which last week included "Say It With Sables" and "The Escape," demonstrated conclusively once more that the people are looking for their money's worth when it comes to entertainment. This theatre has been doing very well since it went over to first run double features. Harmanus Hall in Albany continues to report good business with its combination of pictures and vaudeville as well as frequent "gift nights." Proctor's Grand used "The Magnificent Flirt" the latter part of the week, along with its vaudeville, and did well.

In the neighborhood city of Troy, "The Patriot" did not go over well, some of the evenings witnessing only a half filled house. People in the collar city did not seem to take to the picture and either remained at home or went to some other theatre. The Lincoln in Troy did a good business; in fact, had the crowds standing for the second show each night in Marion Davies' presentation of "The Cardboard Lover," running for the first four days. Even better business characterized the last three days when "Grain of Dust" became the feature at the Lincoln Theatre. The American, in Troy, is using first run features with a split week and filled the house with "None but the Brave." Proctor's Troy theatre used "Under the Tonto Rim" and this, along with its vaudeville, played to exceptionally good business last week. Troy residential theatres report business as being on the gain.

Pittsburgh

THE Stanley had a good week with "State Street Sadie," along with the sound and talking accompaniment. An average underworld type drama, enhanced in entertainment value by the talking sequences. One of the newspapers in its review, said that the voices sounded as if they were coming from the bottom of a barrel.

The Penn had Buster Keaton in "The Cameraman." This is a great comedy and brought gales of continuous laughter from the audiences. Business was good.

The Aldine in its second week of "The Street Angel," with sound accompaniment, held up well, playing to S.R.O. at many performances.

The second and last week of "Simba" at the Nixon did a good business.

The Regent had "The Lion and the Mouse," with talking accompaniment. The film scored a big hit, and Lionel Barrymore's voice was the talk of all the film fans. Business was very good.

The Grand and Liberty both played "Forgotten Faces." An enthralling underworld drama that was well received. Business was above average at both houses.

"Forbidden Hours" at the Cameraphone was but average entertainment and got but average business.

"Detectives" at the Alhambra, co-starring Dane and Arthur, was an ordinary comedy and business was just average.

Boston

THE period between Labor Day, when the vacation season officially ends in New England, and the opening of the colleges, usually the first week in October, has always been a period of good business for the motion picture theatres. This year is no exception.

Paul Whiteman's appearance in person with his band at the Publix Metropolitan has been the week's big box office attraction and has given the Metropolitan long box office lines every night. On the same bill is "The Mating Call," which title, in itself, has an appeal for college-age youth. The week's business bids fair to establish a mark for mid-season for some time.

"Four Walls" at Loew's State, with a good musical stage number, has kept the seats well filled at that playhouse and has brought business for the month well forward. The film was well received by Boston.

The new plan of day and date showing at the Fenway and Washington Street Olympia Theatres of the Publix chain is still going strong and will probably be continued through the year. "Four Sons" is the film this week and is doing excellent business.

There are strong rumors that within the month the two other first run houses will book day and date and this has also led to the rumor that Publix has secured the two theatres but so far neither rumor has been verified nor denied.

"The Twin Houses, Modern and Beacon, are playing "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and will hold the film over another week. This special takes the place of the usual double feature bill. The fact that it is to be held over tells the story of its success.

Other theatres reporting good business for the week are Loew's Orpheum with "Tempest," Bowdoin Square with a double bill instead of the usual triple bill, with "The Mysterious Lady," and "Chicken a La King;" Exeter with "Loves of an Actress" and "Walking Back;" Keith-Albee Boston with "Home James;" Scollay Square Olympia with "Fazil," and at the Strand a reshowing of "Tenderloin."

Harrisburg, Pa.

THE cream of the week's business undoubtedly was taken by "Simba," which was shown to consistently crowded houses at the Majestic, twice daily, with the top night prices at $1.50. Yet the other picture houses offered particularly strong shows, and the business they did was far from a flop. "Excess Baggage," starring William Haines, Josephine Dunn and Richard Cortez, scored heavily at Loew's Regent and was pronounced an especially clever show by both the newspaper critics and by patrons who on several nights filled the house to capacity.

At the Colonial, Colleen Moore in "Oh Kay" did quite a nice business. Colleen always has been a special favorite of Harrisburg fans and she surpassed herself as a comedian in "Oh Kay" in the opinions of many. "The Water Hole," featuring Jack Holt, had strong pulling power and was described as one of the best of the Zane Grey Western thrillers. The box office benefited accordingly.

The State's picture offering the last half of the week was Rex Bell in "Cowboy Kid," which proved popular. The Grand brought Clara Bow in "Hula," back to Harrisburg for a second run. This play made a box office killing when first shown in a downtown first run house several months ago and the popularity it attained then seemed to have remained with it.

The Broad Street did fair business with "The Skyscraper," starring Sue Carol and Alberta Vaughn, while the National presented a Zane Grey story, "Under the Tonto Rim," with quite gratifying financial results. There was a double bill shown at the Russell Theatre on Friday, consisting of Buddy Roosevelt in "The Painted Trail," and Belle Bennett in "Wild Geese."

The Royal had fair success with Vera Reynolds in a prize ring thriller, "The Main Event." The weather in Harrisburg was hot and muggy the first four days of the week but grew much cooler and this stimulated business on Saturday night.

Ottawa

SEVERAL pictures stand out prominently among those which were presented in Ottawa, Ontario, theatres during the week of September 10. Incidentally, business was all to the merry, wet weather and lack of outdoor sports sending people to the moving picture houses in droves.

The outstanding feature was "Excess Baggage" at the Imperial Theatre. The picture had a punch and aroused real applause.

Another outstanding bit was "The Fight Pest," the comedy at the Regent Theatre, in which Charlie Chase pulled some great gags. The feature was "Fazil," a romance of Araby that rolled like a flat tire in stretches. "Fazil" had some hot advance advertising and plenty went to see it but the story just missed being an eye-opener.

"Man-Made Woman," with Leatrice Joy, was a substantial society drama with lots of wonderful gowns and a domestic problem theme but it had no smashing scene. Big crowds at B. F. Keith's Theatre enjoyed it, calling it a good picture.

Colleen Moore was an excellent draw at the Centre Theatre where she appeared in "Happinss Ahead.". Quite up to Colleen Moore standard.

The neighborhood houses did well with high-class second-run attractions. These included "Seventh Heaven" at the Rex; "Student Prince" at the Fern and "Very Confidential" at the Columbia, during the first half of the week. These were particularly appreciated by adult patrons, but the juveniles revelled in the features during the last half, including Tom Mix in "Silver Valley" at the Columbia; "Silent Avenger" at the Fern Theatre and "Wolf Fangs" at the Rex. Neighborhood managers well-filled cash boxes with these varied programs.

Tampa

SONG writers glorify the "rainy Sunday." If the rain starts at dawn and stops before three in the afternoon, as it did in Tampa last Sunday, then the showmen will heartily endorse the sentiment, for this kind of a rainy Sunday keeps the people from the beaches and every house in Tampa enjoyed a whooping big Sunday business.

"Two Lovers" was the feature of the first half at the Tampa. The picture seemed to be well liked, but somehow it failed to draw the way it was expected and outside of the big Sunday the other three days were hardly better than average. For the last half they had a double bill, with "Out of the Ruins" as the screen feature and Jimmie Rodgers, a Victor recording artist, on the stage. Jimmie seemed to make more of a hit than the picture, but the combination showed up about average at the box office.

"The Loves of an Actress," with sound accompaniment, headed the Victory program. The picture failed as a card and the engagement was cut to four days, with "Four Sons," booked for the following week, rushed in for a mid-week opening and a run of 10 days. The latter picture opened up very good and is receiving a great deal of praise, so it should hold up the Victory average for the run.

The Strand had a good week. "A Blonde for a Night" went over fine for the first two days. Then "The Mating Call" drew excellent business for three days and "The Arizona Wildcat" kept 'em coming the last two.

Second runs continue to draw nice business for the Franklin. This week they had "Two Arabian Knights," "The Yellow Lily" and "Forbidden Hours."

Portland, Ore.

"RETAILERS Revue of Everything New" was the slogan adopted by the leading merchandisers of the city during the week and which brought out not only large numbers of buyers of fall merchandise, but the various theatres cashed in on the idea and it helped materially in increasing the attendance at the down-town houses, who also had a number of super-attractions which supplied many delightful hours to both patrons and satisfaction to the managers.

Manager Norman of the "Blue Mouse" reluctantly took off "The Lights of New York" after a record run of seven weeks and called in "State Street Sadie," who entertained crowded houses, and proved to be equally as full of action. Among the Vitaphone acts on the bill were Beatrice Lillie, musical comedy star, listed as Lady Peel; The Three Brox Sisters, singers, and Harry Delf.

The east versus west idea was brought out in some forcible acting by Charles Farrell, supported by Greta Nissen, in "Fazil," which contained many beautiful scenes and brought fair box office returns. Georgie Stoll and his musical assistants called their musical offering "Brazil," including some exceptionally snappy numbers.

It was annual "Laugh Week" at Pantages with Alexander and Olson, "the two kings of hokum," as the comic headline vaudeville feature, and Laura La Plante in "Home, James," entertaining screen comedy. All acts got their share of laughs and the box office returns were consequently large.

Eddie Peabody headed the Fanchon & Marco stage show at the Portland and crowded them in, due to some effective advertising put out by Manager Maxwell, which included the relaying of some of Eddie's popular records through two monster speakers located at top the marquee. Among the visitors were some 1,500 Shriners from Al Kader Temple. On the screen Billie Dove in "The Night Watch" helped to swell the receipts at the big house.

At the end of the second week of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Manager Tebbetts decided to hold it over for two extra days, but attendance took another jump and it was held for big business the entire third week, changing to a "Grain of Dust" on Friday instead of Saturday as formerly.

"Husband Hunters" and "Kings of the Ring" were the two offerings of the week at the Capitol, where Manager Harry Akin reports a continuous increase in patronage.

Outstanding in the screen offering "The Goodby Kiss" was the comedy acting of Johnny Burke, who was quite as funny as when he went over the Orpheum Circuit, and Manager Johnson reports another block of seats were filled throughout the week.

Atlanta

The Howard led the parade with "Lilac Time," First National's special, featuring Colleen Moore and Gary Cooper, and drew capacity houses throughout the week.

Keith's Georgia came in for a fair week, showing Ruth Taylor in "Just Married."

"The Perfect Crime" failed to prove the heralded box office ringer at the Metropolitan. An average program picture, it drew well, but as a special, fell hard.

The Rialto had a fair week with "Sawdust Paradise."

Three westerns brought an average week to the Tudor, while the New Alamo had about the usual business with five second runs and one first.

Loew's Grand, following its new policy of return engagements of specials, showed "Ben Hur" to fair audiences.

San Francisco

GENERALLY speaking, the past week, box office reports were not as good as they should have been, due to the fact that Labor Day drove many out of the city Saturday, Sunday and Monday. However, many theatrical men were surprised at the business that was done. The balance of the week, good business was reported by the majority.

Loew's Warfield Theatre was crowded all week. Here was shown "Four Walls," the Fanchon & Marco Idea, "Monkeyshines," and Rube Wolf with his pranks. All of which are always popular. Clara Bow in "The Fleet's In," together with the Publix Revue and Frank Jenks with his band, crowded the Granada Theatre every night except during the holiday period.

Emil Jannings in "The Patriot," while considered a remarkable picture by all who saw it, barely filled the California Theatre, except two or three evenings.

"The King of Kings," which is shown at popular prices at the St. Francis Theatre, and which has been greatly changed, did not draw many to that theatre the second week, although it was well advertised. It is considered a failure.

The new El Capitan Theatre did exceptionally well with "Court Martial," together with a big presentation act. The Embassy Theatre, under the management of J. P. Silvey, reported splendid box office returns with "Women They Talk About," that was both seen and heard on the Vitaphone.

Good business was reported by the Union Square Theatre which showed "Wall Flowers" and "Little Yellow House," together with vaudeville acts last week. "That Certain Thing," at the Imperial Theatre, drew well, as did the picture "Tenth Avenue," which was shown at the Golden Gate, together with vaudeville acts.

In the residential districts, the Alexandria Theatre was crowded the entire time the picture "Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" was shown and "The Big Killing," together with Variety Ideas at the Coliseum did fairly well. "Across the Atlantic" at the Irving drew well.

Baltimore

A WHALE of a business was done by the Stanley Theatre here during the week beginning Monday, September 10, with the splendidly natural production "Dancing Daughters," featuring Joan Crawford, Anita Page and the younger set of Hollywood.

Aided by extra large advertising space and publicity in the Hearst newspapers here, the picture caught on with the public and the people simply gobbled it up.

Next in line for large attendance came Loew's Century with "Out of the Ruins," starring Richard Barthelmess, and a fine presentation act, "Teeing Off," headed by Ted Claire and his syncopators, and a number of vaudeville headliners.

While patrons did not seem to think this was Barthelmess at his best, they blamed it on the weakness of the story. But the show generally was considered excellent. Good attendance resulted all through the week.

"Lights of New York," Warner Brothers, co-starring Helene Costello and Cullen Landis, proved a fine drawing card for the second week at the Metropolitan and Rivoli theatres, where it played day and date.

"Four Sons," the sound and musical synchronized production, held on for a second week at the New Theatre and while business fell off somewhat during the first part of the week, it came back during the latter part, being boosted by extra advertising space. This picture has been generally liked by the public even though the love interest was played down and the mother interest played up.

"Secrets of a Soul," the foreign made production starring Werner Kraus, played a return engagement at the Little Theatre, operated by the Motion Picture Guild. During the first part of the week the attendance was only fair but it was boosted during the latter part of he week and had them standing to the ropes on Saturday night, in this 250 seat house.

"The Scarlet Lady," starring Lya De Putti, proved an entertaining melodrama at the Keith-Albee Hippodrome, with five acts of family time vaudeville. This wonderfully made production held the attention of the audience throughout. Business was only fair at first but during the last part of the week went up to very good.

At the Keith-Albee New Garden Theatre, where "Chicken a La King," featuring Nancy Carroll, was the feature picture attraction, with five acts of Keith-Albee high class vaudeville, business during the week was only so-so. Headliners on the vaudeville bill were the Four Camerons and the Marathon dancers.

Business was poor throughout the week at Lowe's Valencia, where "The Sawdust Paradise," the sound and musical synchronized production, starring Esther Ralston, was the film attraction. It was not the fault of the picture, however, but thought rather to be the fault of poor musical accompaniment by the sound mechanism which does not register well in that house.

Kansas City

THERE was a decided increase in virtually all downtown first run houses for the week, which probably was due to the fact that cool weather accompanied a strong line-up of pictures.

At Loew's Midland "The Terror," a sound picture, drew the largest weekly attendance in several months. The picture was widely advertised locally, however. A local "Our Gang" picture also aided in pulling in patrons. At the Mainstreet Colleen Moore in "Oh Kay" drew big all week, as did Reginald Denny in "The Night Bird" at the Uptown.

"The Romance of a Rogue" at the Pantages held up well all week but was not much over the normal attendance at that house, which consistently has been good. At the Globe "Uncle Tom's Cabin" did a fair business. Nothing out of the ordinary was employed in the way of exploitation by any of the houses.

Birmingham

BUSINESS in Birmingham picked up the past week. The Strand, with Zane Grey's "The Water Hole," a Paramount picture with Technicolor sequences and starring Jack Holt with Nancy Carroll, clicked well at the boxoffice, as did Loew's Temple with "Our Dancing Daughters" (M-G-M) with Johnny Mack Brown, Dorothy Sebastian and Joan Crawford. The Alabama did not fare so well with "The Patriot" (Paramount) with Emil Jannings, Lewis Stone, Florence Vidor and Neil Hamilton. The Ritz had a good week with "None But the Brave" (Fox), as did the Trianon with "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" (First National, with Richard Barthelmess and Molly O'Day.

Indianapolis

BUSINESS showed a slight gain at Indianapolis box offices the past week due to seasonal conditions. The entire week's business was satisfactory for the downtown houses.

William Haines in "Excess Baggage" at Loew's Palace and Billie Dove's "The Night Watch" at the Circle led the downtown houses for business. Circle business was boosted by Dick Powell's last stage band program.

Clara Bow in "The Fleet's In" at the Indiana did satisfactory business.

"Street Angel" did fair its second week at Apollo.

Neighborhood houses did fair business.

Salt Lake City

THE Salt Lake first run theatres are enjoying a steady increase in patronage since the closing of the near-by out-of-doors resorts. Last week was cooler, especially noticeable during the past few days, and this fact, together with some high-class picture productions, has done a good deal toward the good theatre attendance reported.

Wallace Beery in "Beggars of Life" has played to very good sized audiences, this feature picture production being offered in conjunction with the Fanchon and Marco stage production "College Capers."

An unusually good week is reported to have been enjoyed at the Pantages Theatre, the feature picture production having been "Our Dancing Daughters," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's first of the season's releases.

The Paramount Empress theatre had a satisfactory record of attendance this week during the presentation of "The River Pirate" with Victor McLaglen, Lois Moran and Nick Stuart.

Hundreds were turned away from the Victory Theatre during the week's offering of the synchronized picture "Four Sons," with Margaret Mann, James Hall, George Meeker and Francis X. Bushman.

The American Theatre is still offering the "Opportunity Night" for local talent, as well as "Fat Saunders Country Store," which attractions have proven to be tremendous drawing cards at this house. The picture shown in this connection during the past week was "After the Storm" and packed houses have been the rule.

Rod LaRocque in "Love Over Night" played to good sized audiences through the week at the Gem, it is reported.

The feature offering at the Rialto, which proved to be a fairly good drawing card as a second run was "Drums of Love." The State theatre's second run production featured this week was "Her Summer Hero" and also Dolores Del Rio in "The Gateway of the Moon."

"Seventh Heaven" did an unusually big business at the State, a second-run house here, this week. The Empire drew fairly good business with "Tarzan the Mighty."

New Orleans

DOWNTOWN first run theatres did the best business in several weeks this past seven-day period and the credit goes to the talking films.

Loew's State led the field with the Vitaphone talking production "The Terror." This house packed them in for a week and they're still raving about the film. The theatre management widely publicized the picture in the local papers as well as through other mediums. Five acts of vaudeville were shown in conjunction with the film but vaudeville or not, "The Terror" was great enough to draw them in.

"State Street Sadie," another talking production, was the New Saenger attraction and business was good. A New York Publix stage show was also featured but the film is credited with whatever business this palatial house did.

"The Jazz Singer," with Al Jolson, entered its sixth week at the Tudor Theatre and crowds continue to patronize the Canal street playhouse. The film has proven one of the most delightful of the present season.

The Orpheum Theatre offered "A Thief in the Dark" as its screen feature and patrons went away highly pleased, though the stage bill was one of the best in weeks.

The coming weeks promise to see a revival of business in the city. Announcement was made recently that Col. Thomas Campbell was to reopen the Tulane Theatre, offering among its presentations several of the outstanding film productions of the year. A new entrance is being built to the Saenger Strand Theatre and the house remodeled throughout. Work is expected to be completed early in November, when the Baronne street playhouse will reopen.

Brown Mapping Out New Pathe Product

Sound-proof Stages Finished and Tested With Satisfactory Results; New Additions to Writing Staff

COLVIN W. BROWN, vice-president of Pathe, arrived in Hollywood last week and has been in daily conference with studio executives regarding the new season's product. A pretentious program has been mapped out for the coming year and with the completion of new sound proof stages the Culver City plant will soon hum with renewed activity. Tests were made of the speaking stages by Benjamin Glazer, who has been placed in charge of all synchronization, and they were pronounced excellent. Horace Jackson and Scott Littleton are assisting Mr. Glazer.

Paul Bern, who recently left M-G-M to become a Pathe producer, has signed Erwin Gelsey to head the story department. Gelsey was assistant to Bern for several years. Helen Klump, Don Gordon and others will assist in the story department. John O. Aalberg, of the R. C. A. Photophone, Inc., department helped install the apparatus at Pathe and will equip a number of theatres on the Coast before returning East.

Renewing Contracts

Doris Anderson, scenarist, has been signed to a new contract by Paramount. Cameraman Edward Cronjager also has been rewarded with a contract.

'Frozen River" New Rinty Film

"Frozen River" is the new name given the story which will be Rin-Tin-Tin's next starring vehicle for Warner Bros. It supersedes the title, "King of the Wilderness," by which it has been known up to this time.

Billie Dove to Do Russian Story

Billie Dove, First National star, will make a European picture, "The Thirtieth Day of October," a story of the Russian Revolution. It was written by Lajos Biro, Hungarian author, and Alexander Korda, First National director. Frank Lloyd will be at the megaphone.

New Screen Team

First National will offer a new screen team in "Ritzy Rosie," which goes into production soon at the Burbank Studios. Alice White is to be teamed with Jack Mulhall.

Explosion at Lasky Studio

A gas explosion that startled Hollywood at 4 A. M. Thursday, destroyed stage No. 8 on the Paramount-Famous-Lasky lot, doing damage estimated at $10,000.

Denny Writes His Own

Reginald Denny has again turned author and is preparing his own story, "15 Below," to serve as his next starring vehicle for Universal.

Charles Rogers' Next

James Kirkwood will play Mary Brian's father in the next Charles Rogers starring production which will be directed by F. Richard Jones.

Edwards "Musical Gag-Man"

Gus Edwards, song writer, vaudeville impresario and musical comedy producer, has arrived in Hollywood and will create the post of the first "musical gag-man" for talking motion pictures, under the auspices of M-G-M.

Veidt's Magical Skill

Conrad Veidt, Universal star, declares that for two years he was a magician on the German stage. His present role of the conjurer, Erik, in the Universal drama of the stage, "Erik, the Great," is his first opportunity since coming to America to display his skill in legerdemain.

Change of Program

"Lilac Time," First National production, will close its run at the Carthay Circle Sept. 30, to make way for Fox' "Mother Knows Best."

Eve Southern in New Picture

James Flood has been signed by Tiffany-Stahl to direct Eve Southern in "The Girl Who Came Back," temporary title.

Titling "Interference"

Julian Johnson has the titling assignment for "Interference." "Moran of the Marines" will be titled by George Marian, Jr.

"Should a Girl Marry?"

Now located at the Mack Sennett studio, Rayart is to start production immediately on "Should a Girl Marry?" under the direction of Scott Pembroke. The cast will include Helen Foster, Donald Keith, William V. Mong, Dot Farley and Andy Clyde. It is from an original by Arthur Hoerl and will be made by Trem Carr.

Airplane Location Party

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer last week tendered the press the first airplane location party ever sponsored by a studio. Twenty correspondents of the Los Angeles and Hollywood papers, press services and fan magazines flew from Los Angeles to San Diego, where a unit is now working on scenes for "Gold Braid." After witnessing sequences in production the visitors then made a tour of the naval base.

Florence Lawrence

Florence Lawrence, screen player of a past generation, is still in pictures, her most recent screen work being in Fox' "Me, Gangster."

In addition to her screen work which is a side issue with her she devotes the major portion of her time to a cosmetic shop where she manufactures her own preparations.

Milne Adapting

Peter Milne, scenarist, has been assigned to do the continuity on "The Head of the Family" for Gotham. Casting has been selected for the feature role.

Tiffany Color Classic

"Gold," a Tiffany Color Classic, is now in the course of production under the direction of Martin Justis.

Circle Pictures, Inc., Formed

Circle Pictures, Inc., new independent producing and distributing company, with offices in Hollywood and an eastern branch soon to be established, will enter the states rights market in October with "About Trial Marriage" and "Scarlet Youth," both featuring Corliss Palmer.

"Shop Worn Angel" in Work

"The Shop Worn Angel" went into production last week at the Paramount West Coast Studios with Gary Cooper, Nancy Carroll and Paul Lukas the only members of the cast chosen thus far. F. Richard Wallace is directing.

85% of FBO Schedule Now Complete

THE F B O studios now have approximately 85% of their schedule of pictures completed at the present time.

Pictures in the course of filming include: "Hardboiled," "Tropic Madness," "The Little Savage" and "The One Man Dog." Stories being prepared for immediate production are "Love in the Desert" and "The Jazz Age."

Hollywood—Continued

Goldwyn Signs Hergesheimer

Joseph Hergesheimer, author, has signed a contract with Samuel Goldwyn to write an original story for Ronald Colman. Immediately after his new play is launched he will expand the theme agreed upon by Mr. Goldwyn and in January will come to Hollywood for three months.

Cherniavsky Arrives

Joseph Cherniavsky, Russian orchestral leader and for some time stationed as musical master of ceremonies at the Colony in New York, has arrived in Universal City to score "Show Boat" and other Universal productions. He assisted Erno Rapee in synchronizing "The Man Who Laughs," "Lonesome," "Man, Woman and Wife," and "Give and Take." It is planned that he will do the scoring of "The Last Warning," "The Girl on the Barge," "The Shake Down," "Red Hot Speed" and other recently finished Universal films.

"Pirates Beware"

Betty Boyd plays opposite Lupino Lane in his first starring vehicle of the new season, "Pirates Beware," which Educational is releasing this month.

Horton Awarded New Contract

Edward Everett Horton has been added to the roster of featured players now under contract to Warner Bros. The contract given him provides for his appearance in Vitaphone productions and will run for a long term.

New Tiffany-Stahl Productions

Paul Perez has been signed by Tiffany-Stahl to title "The Gun Runner," the picturization of the novel of the same name by Arthur Stringer, and "The Floating College."

Start "Queen of Burlesque"

Belle Bennett has started another production for Tiffany-Stahl entitled "The Queen of Burlesque" from an original by H. R. Durant. It is being directed by Albert Ray.

An Extra Climbs

Not since Betty Bronson was chosen for the role of Peter Pan several years ago, has an unknown extra girl received such an important opportunity from Paramount as Gladys Belmont, seventeen-year-old girl from Pueblo, Colorado, who was signed for the principal feminine role in "Redskin." She was the winner over 463 other contestants.

General Exodus for Location

Film stars and directors figured last week in a general exodus from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, when four companies at work on major productions all filmed scenes on "locations" ranging from thirty to eight hundred miles away.

Clarence Brown moved his "A Woman of Affairs" company to the Busch Gardens in Pasadena. John Waters is directing "Humming Wires" at Glacier National Park, Wyoming. George Hill is directing "Gold Braid" at San Diego. Norma Shearer is playing in "The Little Angel" on a beach location some miles from the studios.

Jimmy Murphy Entertains

Jimmy Murphy, creator of the Toots and Casper comic strip, entertained the staff and cast at his Beverly Hills home following the initial preview of the first subject of the F B O series.

"What a Wife" Completed

St. Elmo Boyce has completed his first directorial assignment for Darmour-F B O in "What a Wife!" one of the Toots and Casper series. Bud Duncan plays Casper and Thelma Hill, Toots.

"Mickey's Rivals" in Work

"Mickey's Rivals," second of the new series being produced by Larry Darmour for F B O, has gone into production under the direction of Al Herman. Harry Conett is assistant director of this unit.

"The Devil's Apple Tree"

Dorothy Sebastian is to make "The Devil's Apple Tree" for Tiffany-Stahl under the direction of Elmer Clifton. Work will soon start on this production.

Adapting Tarkington Story

Eve Unsell and Elmer Harris are busily engaged in adapting the Booth Tarkington story "Ramsey Milholland" for Tiffany-Stahl.

Moreno as Leading Man

Antonio Moreno will be Billie Dove's leading man in her forthcoming First National picture. Miss Dove will play a Russian noblewoman, a refugee from the revolution in her own country in this story, as yet untitled.

Louise Fazenda Cast

The addition of Louise Fazenda to the cast of Corinne Griffith's latest First National production, "Outcast," completes the list of supporting players who are to appear in the modernized film version of the play.

Greatest Natural Color Footage for "Redskin"

A CONTRACT calling for the longest footage of natural color film ever made for a single motion picture, according to Paramount's estimate, was signed recently in Hollywood by B. P. Schulberg, general manager of Paramount's West Coast production, and Andrew J. Callahan, general business representative of the Technicolor Corporation. The picture will be "Redskin."

Callahan, speaking for his company, declared that a new improved natural color photographic process will be employed which will give true color value to all shades of red.

"Kid Gloves" Nagel Vehicle

"Kid Gloves" will be the next picture in which Conrad Nagel will be starred. Preliminary work is now being done at the Warner Studio and cameras will be focused shortly on this story by George L. Hartley.

Buzz Barton Injured

Buzz Barton, 13-year-old F B O western star, was incapacitated temporarily as the result of a fractured right wrist and severe bruises sustained when he fell ten feet from a motion picture set at the F B O studio while making "The Little Savage."

Halsey to Do Anderson Play

Forrest Halsey will again be associated with Corinne Griffith on "Saturday's Children," the Maxwell Anderson play, which First National Pictures will produce. Walter Morosco yesterday affixed Halsey's name to a contract and he will start work at once on the adaptation and continuity.

'Avalanche" on Location

More than a hundred players and technical workers, headed by Director Otto Brower, have left Hollywood for Flagstaff, Arizona, which will be their headquarters for two weeks' shooting of exteriors for Paramount's "Avalanche."

Mankiewicz Titling

Herman Mankiewiez is titling Bebe Daniels' "Take Me Home," directed by Marshall Neilan.

Melville Brown Signed

Melville Brown has been signed by Pathe to direct "Geraldine," Carey Wilson's adaptation of Booth Tarkington's story which will be supervised by Paul Bern, being his initial production at the Pathe Studios in Culver City.

Rayart Moves to Sennett Studios

Pending completion of negotiations now under way by the Rayart-Trem Carr units for the building of their own studios, the organization moved August 30th into the recently completed Sennett Studios at Studio City.

Gladys Brockwell Ends Role

Gladys Brockwell has completed work in "Hardboiled Rose," fourth Vitaphone offering in which she has played an important role.

Wolheim Signed

Louis Wolheim is to make a picture for Paramount under the direction of Lewis Milestone. No story has as yet been selected for their use.

At Pathe

In preparation at the Pathe Studios are "The Shady Lady" in which Phyllis Haver will be starred, and "Noisy Neighbors" which will feature Eddie Quillan and the entire Quillan family.

Conducted by An Exhibitor for Exhibitors

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB CLEARING HOUSE FOR BOX OFFICE PROBLEMS and THEATRE OPERATION

By Charles E. Lewis
of the Alfred Gottesman Theatrical Enterprises, New England

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth of a series of short articles by Charles E. Lewis, who recently completed a tour of the Mid-Western states for the MOTION PICTURE NEWS to study exhibitor conditions first-hand.)

Has West Better Theatres Than the East?

Of all the questions asked, this would be the easiest to answer.

YES. And most emphatically so. I believe the theatres are operated in the Middle West far superior to the theatres in the East. The employees are far more alert, more attentive, more polite, and certainly more anxious to please. This became more noticeable to me the further I went into the Mid-West. There is a sort of feeling that everyone is trying to be nice to you, that they would gladly go out of their way to please and further more they do all of those things and more.

In the town of Marion, Indiana, in a theatre of only 550 seats, I found a most welcome smile from the cashier (and she was still smiling even after she knew I had not come to buy a ticket) and most courteous "good evening" from the doorman with a quick removal of his hat when a lady behind stopped to ask the time of the second performance. And ushers that made you feel you would have a nice evening even if the show was not so good. And did I enjoy the show I witnessed? You can bet your last dollar I did, even in spite of certain other handicaps that I will tell about under another heading in the near future. It was inevitable that one must enjoy his visit to such a theatre even though it might be a converted barn or a great big palace. They are more attentive to the small details embodied in the above points as well as in any other. I would say that they look after the little things far more than they do in the East and if this condition of theatre operation improves the further West you go, then I would not know what to expect had I gone further West than I did.

Give a Little More, Is the Motto

Of course I made this trip strictly as an exhibitor and naturally I was more alert to find fault than the ordinary theatre-goers would be. But even in spite of this I was agreeably surprised to find so many theatres, in so many towns, or so many sizes, all striving to actually serve their patrons with more than just a performance for so much an admission, but rather to make them feel more at home and more anxious to stimulate good will and good feeling for their respective theatres.

Eastern managers do well to imitate such methods, because it is more often talked about here than indulged in. Watch those "little" details that go to make a patron just a little more satisfied than with just the show you are selling them.

He Knows His Onions

One of the most gratifying things that we have noticed about the CLUB is that once a man joins his interest increases in the activity of it. Very rarely do we find that after a manager's application has been received he has lost track of us or our doings. Generally we will hear from him in some way or other about some point we have been discussing on the CLUB pages or he comments upon the remarks of a brother member.

This week we reproduce the picture of Harry A. Aumack, who is the "peppy" manager of the Strand Theatre, in Clayton, N. J. Harry has been a member for quite a while and never hesitates to let us know that he is alive, kicking and watching the CLUB pages every week—always alert to grab an idea that might increase the B. O. receipts. From his last letter we quote: "I think the Managers' Round Table Club is ideal for the live-wire exhibitor, and the club will certainly receive my assistance.

Once more we say, "That's the spirit, boys, and keep it up." Just sell yourself completely on the idea that this is a CLUB run by exhibitors for exhibitors. O. K.?

The Value of Good Advertising

That the average theatre manager knows the full value of good advertising matter is a very evident fact from our viewpoint. When you stop to consider that we receive hundreds of letters and advertising material each week from managers and exhibitors all over the world, it should qualify us to judge whether the quality of theatre advertising is improving or getting worse. We can truthfully—and gladly—state that it is getting better, a thousand times better that we recall it only a few years back.

This is a good point, because, unfortunately, for a great many years there were so many real fine theatres turning out circulars, heralds and announcements of some kind or other that were cheap and an absolute reflection upon the theatre responsible for them. "Good" advertising cannot be considered expensive because it will do much more good than "cheap" advertising. So why economize on this angle, and a very important angle, of your business. DON'T ever permit a circular to leave your theatre unless it is printed upon a half-way decent stock and the make-up of it is attractive and dignified. And DON'T permit your advertising to become monotonous by reason of duplicating the same kind of a herald or circular too often. Surely, there are enough different methods of advertising without repeating the same idea more than once in every two or three months. If you don't think so then the CLUB pages should become more important to you. We have to date described many advertising ideas and suggestions. Every one of them were published so you need never fear or hesitate to use them. Get the habit boys: "USE THE NEWS." Whoever said good habits were easy to cultivate knew what he was talking about, and this is the best habit you could fall into.

And They Said He Couldn't Do It

This, brothers, is a tale of how a showman was born, raised and grew up to successful theatre ability by reason of his own "guts" and over the predictions of many experienced men in the business.

Ray Hickman had never before been in the show business and in fact he knew little or nothing at all about it. But that was no bar to what he believed himself capable of doing. Therefore, it was not surprising for me to learn that in the very short space of time that he become one of us, he had made good. I'm less surprised than lots of "old-timers" out his way because they shook their heads and breathed sympathetic sighs when they heard what he was going to do.

Briefly, the tale is just this: In December of last year he had the opportunity of acquiring the Auditorium Theatre in Marietta, Ohio. From all accounts no one had been able to make a go of it until Ray came along. Who can tell, he may never had attempted it had he been an experienced exhibitor, but being an outsider he thought he could get away with it. And he did. Don't think for one minute that his was the only theatre in town. By no means, there were two or three others and all doing a good business. The Auditorium was the "step-child" of Marietta. Ray proceeded to "pep" things up in real showmanlike ways and before long the customers started to take notice. Business was first attracted by the curiosity seekers who heard of this "stranger" and had to see what he was doing. But they came again and again and again—so it was reasonable to suspect that it was something more than Ray's good looks that was bringing them back so often—and regular.

I asked Ray (while we were on that boat trip to Canada last summer) how he managed to put it over. But the best he could say was that he felt it could be made to pay and he just tried everything that he thought would bring 'em. And he did.

Now, if you pass through that progressive town of Marietta, Ohio, and ask which are the leading theatres it won't take you long to find out that the Auditorium is included in that classification. Good luck, Ray.

"Using His Head"

The above caption is the best we can think of in talking about Manager Moore of the Roger Sherman Theatre in New Haven. What prompted this story is the fact that he had a good organ, a "peach" of an organist (this is no pun) and unfortunately his organ was hidden in an inconspicuous part of his music pit. So—he decided both the organ and the organist were too valuable to be lost and proceeded to erect a high platform on the level of his stage, but off to the side of the arch. Now all the "customers" can both see and hear this fine combination and from all reports his patrons like the idea just as much as he. And it just goes to prove once more, that if you keep your eyes and your wits working you can always find some way of improving the theatre and the show and of course the box office always reflects such tactics. Perhaps you have an organ worthy of a better "spot" in your theatre? If so, think of Manager Moore and his idea and look around to see how you can rearrange the location to better advantage.

When Did You Look Over the Lights?

Then, there is your house lighting. Try and think when was the last time you looked into this phase of your theatre? We venture to say that 90 per cent of our readers never change a bulb until it is burnt out. And if you have traveled around as much as I have you will not think this percentage is unduly high. Keep up appearances in your theatres by keeping the lighting angle under constant observation. Better still, visit one of the large and better movie theatres anywhere in the country and you will readily see how important this point is watched. Marquee and front lighting as well should receive your attention. The average movie fan was, and still is, drawn to the theatre by reason of the bright and attractive lighting. Letting your front become "dead" looking because of lighting neglect will soon make your theatre resemble a morgue. We have always advocated the frequent changing of bulbs in the interior of theatres. A change of color combinations in your house lighting and entrances is just one of the ways of letting your patrons know that you are always on the job. Try it for a while and see if it won't stimulate favorable comment.

Put Your House in Good Order

A new season is here and we are all looking forward with great hopes that it will be a mighty successful one from the standpoint of good business. So it should behoove us to take a look around and see if our theatres are in as good a condition as we hope business is going to be. Have you looked at your projection equipment? Perhaps your generator is in need of a little attention, or possibly your machines could stand a much needed overhauling to prevent expensive breakdowns a little later on. Then there is the screen, that poor and generally overlooked part of a theatre. So many of us immediately proceed to forget its very existence as soon as it is put in use. But very often it is the cause of much dissatisfaction on the part of your patrons. Dust accumulates, it gets streaky and is subjected to lots of other ailments; all of them can be remedied or avoided if you keep your eye on these things.

We Hear from Porto Rico Again

We are in receipt of a most interesting letter from Lorenzo Gelabert, one of the CLUB members from Porto Rico and we would like to reproduce it but lack of space in this issue makes this impossible. However, Mr. Gelabert is one of our most interesting and active members and in this letter he tells me that he will soon be in New York on his regular trip and will stop in to see me. And I'll sure be delighted to shake his hand. He has arranged to contribute some advertising suggestions on exploitation and I'm certain that we will all look forward to seeing just how they do it where he comes from. So, Lorenzo, we will await with interest your visit and your contributions. Come on and show us up. We bet you are right on the job every minute.

Notice to Members

MEMBERS who have not already done so are urged to send in photos of themsleves for reproduction on the Club pages. We are anxious to publish your picture and particularly to have it on file for future use in the event that you send us a special story.

The Club pages are also open for the reproduction of pictures and photos pertaining to exploitation stunts, etc. Do not hesitate to take advantage of this great medium if you want to let everyone in the business know what you are doing and who you are.

APPLICATION FOR MEMBERSHIP IN "MANAGER'S ROUND TABLE CLUB"

"Mysterious Lady" Appears at Local Stores

Manager Robert Talbert, of the Imperial theatre, in Columbia, N. C., went to the offices of the Columbia Record and told the circulation manager how he could increase his sales and at the same time help the Imperial to do the same thing by a cooperative stunt centering about "The Mysterious Lady."

As a result of Talbert's sales talk, the newspaper started filling its columns with the antics of a mysterious lady, where she had appeared and when and where she was scheduled to appear on succeeding days. The advertised scenes of the lady's appearance mainly centered on local shops.

It all made excellent reading for the subscribers and started a lot of talk about this lady of mystery. In addition to this, there was a suitable prize to be given to the person who identified her.

Skouras Bros. Sign Ed Lowry for Three Years

Ed Lowry, master of ceremonies at the Skouras Brothers Ambassador Theatre, has signed a new three-year contract under the terms of which he will serve as chief entertainer at the Ambassador, and at other Skouras houses in St. Louis and elsewhere, the Skouras organization to control his services for Vitaphone short subjects or other feature productions. It is said Lowry will be paid $250,000 over the three-year period, a new record for St. Louis.

Indiana Only Indianapolis House Continuing Acts

Heavy Advance Drive Prepares Cleveland for "Lilac Time"

A TEASER billing campaign two weeks in advance of the opening of "Lilac Time" at the Stillman Theatre, in Cleveland, was one of the big features of the campaign put across by M. E. Melaney, head of the publicity department of the Loew houses in Cleveland, assisted by Bert E. Perkins, of First National's exploitation staff.

Four hundred one-sheets reading "Believe it or not 'Lilac Time' is in August" were posted in advantageous positions two weeks in advance. The regular billing was unusually heavy, including seventy-five 24-sheet stands.

Heavy newspaper advertising was taken and the papers devoted much space to pictures and news stories. The Cleveland Plaindealer handled a query box on talking pictures, ostensibly conducted by George Fitzmaurice, who directed "Lilac Time."

Extensive Billing a Feature

Fifty mounted 11 x 14 stills were displayed in exclusive stores. Three hundred street car cards were put out. Thirty-two window displays of the book cover, posters and stills were obtained in the best book stores of the city.

An exploitation feature that appealed to the sense of smell was the seenting of the theatre with lilac perfume, five gallons of which was donated by the Abner Royce Company of Cleveland. The perfume was sprayed into the cooling system of the Stillman Theatre so that the scent of lilacs not only permeated the auditorium but drifted out into the street. The theatre gave the Abner Royce Company credit for donating the perfume in the theatre program.

A special banner, 12 x 42 feet, was hung on the building adjacent to the Stillman Theatre.

Through the co-operation of Fred Dempsey, the Cleveland representative of the Feist Company, numerous window displays were obtained for the theme song, "Jeannine I Dream of Lilac Time." The Wurlitzer store broke an ironclad rule against outside displays and devoted an entire window to the song and the records. The basis of this window display was a large "Lilac Time" airplane.

In co-operation with the Cleveland News, all the entrants in a recent airplane model contest were invited to a special screening of the picture, and hundreds of their models were placed on display in an empty store adjacent to the theatre.

Station WTAN broadcast the theme song on numerous occasions by vocalists, organists and stage orchestras.

Queries About "Tak-A-Chance" Show Keep Manager Busy

THAT a theatre manager must be prepared to answer all kinds of questions when he stages a "Tak-a-chance week" was indicated when Ernie Moule, manager of the Temple Theatre, Brantford, Ontario, conducted such a feature, this being the first occasion for the presentation of "Chance" week in that city.

These were only a few of the questions hurled at him by prospective patrons:

"Do you play games of chance?"

"Are there any pictures or vaudeville?"

"Can I get my money back if I have seen the show before?"

"What do you mean by 'take a chance'?"

"What in hell kind of advertising do you call that?"

"What do we have to take a chance on?"

"Is it a good show?"

One would-be patron said: "I am going to wait until there is a picture."

Manager Moule points out that the week started slowly despite special advertising and a unique front but business during the last half more than made up for the poor start. The special front consisted of a turning roulette wheel in the usual colors and huge dice which were placed on the sidewalk and on top of the marquee.

Week's Publicity for Show In Omaha News Tie-up

Manager John Howard, of the Rialto theatre, Omaha, negotiated a tie-up with the Omaha Bee-News, which resulted in a steady newspaper campaign of publicity for "Women Men Talk About" during the entire run of one week.

Howard sold the newspaper the idea of sponsoring a contest to show pictures of famous feminine personalities and offer awards of theatre tickets for the correct identification of the characters shown. Cuts from the newspaper morgue were used in the contest. Such well-known personages as Amelia Earhart and Texas Guinan were used.

In addition to running a news story daily with the illustration, the paper published large display ads on another page, varying in size from 20 to 50 inches, explaining the contest. Those that could not identify "the women they talk about" could turn to the Want-Ad page where among the various classified advertisements was hidden the name of a woman whose picture appeared in the paper that day.

MANAGER ROY L. SMART, of the Florida Theatre, St. Petersburg, Fla., assigned his doorman and an usher some extra duty to help him in exploiting "Just Married." The staff men played principal roles in a ballyhoo stunt to feature the title in St. Petersburg. The doorman was bedecked in a cutaway coat, checkered vest and old brown derby, while his companion, the usher, impersonated a blushing bride, in white dress, veil and blonde wig. The "bridal" couple toured about town in an old car, bannered with signs advertising the picture at the Florida. The fact that the motor of the car was subject to frequent stalling, making it necessary for the groom to get out and crank helped the stunt along as an attention-getter.

MACON, GA., picturegoers had had a taste of talking sequences in Vitaphone and Movietone productions, but they had not heard and seen an "all talker" before the presentation of "Lights of New York" at the Rialto theatre. Consequently, Manager W. H. Hemphill, of the Rialto, stressed the all-dialogue angle in his advance campaign, the main feature of which were tie-ups with six merchants, all of whom made special window displays, all of them emphasizing the line "See and Hear 'The Lights of New York'—All Talking—at the Rialto."

WHEN "Chicago" opened in one of San Juan's most important theatres, effective exploitation use was made of the tie-up arranged with the manufacturers of Woolastik sweaters and bathing suits. The Porto Rican distributor of the picture succeded in obtaining a window in the Gonzalez Pedin store, largest department store in the country, and displayed there stills, lobby cards and window cards, tieing up the Woolastik products with the showing of "Chicago" at the local theatres. This, it is said, marked the first time that such a stunt has been worked out in Porto Rico.

SKOURAS BROTHERS of St. Louis made excellent use of an actual airplane as an exploitation feature for "Lilac Time." It was mounted on the marquee of the Grand Central Theatre, where the picture was shown, in advance of the opening, and kept there after the opening. The motor of the airplane was kept running during the busy hours to attract attention to the theatre and the "Lilac Time" signs and decorations. J. Reeves Espey, advertising director of the Skouras Bros. Circuit, had charge of the campaign.

AFTER many years of presenting film programs for one week, Manager J. M. Robertson, of the Dominion Theatre, Victoria, B. C., has turned to the policy of changing programs twice weekly as a step toward more business.

THE "Guest Night" feature has been found to be an excellent means for boosting permanent patronage at the Broadway Theatre, Vancouver, B. C., according to Manager H. G. Copley. On such occasions, two ladies are admitted for the price of one ticket. One "Guest Night" is held each week.

Reserved Seats Only at Pinanski Theatre to Be Built in Boston

IN connection with the start of construction on the new Egyptian Theatre in Brighton district of Boston, by the New England Theatres Operating Co. (Netoco) chain, announcement is made of the plan to sell tickets for the show over the counter as well as at the box office.

Seats at this motion picture theatre will all be reserved. People may sit in a spacious lounge or lobby to await friends. At one side of this lobby will be a counter where seats may be purchased without standing in line or waiting outside the theatre. With the cold New England winters, the innovation appears to have the making of success behind it.

The new theatre will seat 2500 when completed. President Samuel Pinanski of Netoco will personally have charge of the decorations which are to be among the most beautiful of any theatre in the East. They are to be patterned after the Temple of Karnak on the Upper Nile at Thebes.

Plan Comprehensive Campaigns for Short Subject Series

THE "Russ Farrell, Aviator" pictures will be introduced to the public through several exploitation tie-ups arranged by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., which is releasing this series of two-reel thrillers. A feature press sheet on "The Sky Ranger," first in the series, is now in the mail. It contains, in addition to the usual accessories, special ad cuts, publicity cuts and mats, feature stories, special articles, illustrations of lobby cards and special stills, thumbnail cuts and mats, details of a book tie-up, airplane toys and novelties, as well as numerous other exploitation stunts.

The press sheet also makes available to exhibitors extensive story material on model plane building. These stories are strictly on model building but may be tied-up with the series by the exhibitor in each community.

Doubleday, Doran and Company, publishers of four volumes of "Russ Farrell" stories by Thomson Burtis, are to have a special motion picture edition of all four books. The cover and frontispiece are to be made up from stills from "Russ Farrell, Aviator" pictures and so credited. Preparatory work on this edition is almost completed and it will be on the press shortly. Educational is planning an extensive tie-up drive with the publishers and their dealers for the benefit of exhibitors, which will include exploiting with window display layouts.

The October issue of The American Boy Magazine, which published the "Russ Farrell" stories, devotes considerable space to calling attention to Educational's new series of aviation pictures based on them.

In this connection, it also is of interest to exhibitors to know that The American Boy Magazine started the Airplane Model League of America, of which Thomson Burtis is a vice-president. The league's activities are aided and given publicity by means of a tie-up with sixty-three newspapers. An intensive fall and winter campaign through these newspapers is now being started by the league.

"The Sky Ranger" has Reed Howes in the star role which he will also take in the five other pictures of the group. Marjorie Daw is the leading lady, with Tom Santschi, Roy Stewart and Henry Barrows in principal supporting roles.

Gives Special Show for Kin of Kit Carson at Denver Theatre

MANAGER JEROME ZIGMOND of the Victory Theatre in Denver seized upon a fortunate circumstance to create widespread local interest in his presentation of "Kit Carson."

Shortly after booking the film Zigmond discovered that a grand-daughter of Kit Carson was a resident of the town. He immediately extended to her an invitation to witness a special screening of the picture, which she accepted. This led to the Denver News publishing an interview and a special story about the incident.

Zigmond also secured the services of a local cameraman who has a Capitol automatic projector, and between the two they worked out a trailer on the picture, using stills for scenes and backgrounds for titles. The sales copy was animated flashing on and off to give the whole thing plenty of action. This machine was planted in a down-town window one week in advance, and remained there during the showing of picture. The film was continuous, requiring practically no care whatsoever. The advertising value for the picture derived from this stunt was many-fold.

A cut-out puzzle contest was planted in the News with passes for the prize winners. This contest was for the kids only, and they surely did their darndest in trying to cop one of the prizes.

Postcards carrying selling copy about the picture, theatre and play dates were sent to all members of the Pioneer Societies.

Tab Shows With Films New Policy for Salt Lake

With arrangements made for a complete change in policy at the Paramount Empress theatre, Salt Lake City, commencing Saturday, September 22nd, Louis Marcus, of the Marcus Enterprises, has announced that six road shows will be booked at once, and a company of actors will present dramas in connection with the motion pictures.

Among the road shows to be booked by Marcus are "The Trial of Mary Dugan"; George Arliss in "The Merchant of Venice," "Rose-Marie," "In Gay Paree," Frank Craven in "The Nineteenth Hole" and "The Shanghai Gesture" productions from Klaw & Erlanger and the Shuberts.

Ralph Cloninger left Salt Lake City on September 10th for Los Angeles, where he will assemble a company of actors recruited from the motion picture studios. Marcus announces that the Cloninger players have been booked for a limited engagement, and that in his opinion, Salt Lake City is ripe for this departure in entertainment.

The present plan is to present fifty minute dramas in connection with high class motion pictures, which the Paramount is noted for, with one de luxe matinee and two shows every evening, it is stated.

Cloninger's proposition is to present tabloid drama with a company of artists, adequate stage settings, and embellishments and lighting effects.

It is planned that while the big road shows are occupying the boards at the Paramount-Empress, the Cloninger players will appear at one of the three other theatres of the Marcus Enterprises, located in Salt Lake City.

Theme Song of "First Kiss" Feature of Exploitation

Manager W. F. Brock had practically no trouble in getting co-operative window displays with music stores and other stores that sold popular sheet music in connection with the exploiting of "The First Kiss," playing at the Rialto theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Many of these music stores were along the main business thoroughfare of the city and in excellent locations. Almost without exception, the music stores fitted up their windows with generous quantities of sheet music on "The First Kiss." Such as lining them up two-deep on the window floor, pasting them on the inside of the window and suspending six to nine columns (one attached to the other) of the sheet music from the window ceiling.

In addition to the generous display of the sheet music, the windows also showed stills from the picture, window cards announcing the title of picture, theatre and play dates as well as neatly lettered cards.

Another non-expensive tie-up was with a local candy manufacturer who furnished a generous quantity of candy kisses that were slipped inside small envelopes. These envelopes carried copy reading, "The First Kiss usually calls for more! Accept the enclosed kiss with compliments of the Rialto. We believe you will find complete satisfaction in seeing The First Kiss with Gary Cooper and Fay Wray—Rialto Theatre—August 27-28-29." The candy manufacturer paid the entire cost of envelopes, the imprinting and shared in the distribution.

Kansas City

WHEN the Orpheum theatre, Kansas City, requested the Chamber of Commerce and other civic organizations to make a survey to determine the logic of the theatre, which played first run pictures and vaudeville last season, reopening this season, the move was made in all seriousness, despite the fact that it looked like a purely exploitation stunt. Following the survey and a protest against the closing of the theatre by the public and civic organizations, the management decided that the soundest business policy would be to allow the theatre to remain closed and change the policy of the Mainstreet theatre, a junior Orpheum house, to a senior Orpheum house, due to its seating capacity of 3,500, which is much larger than the Orpheum. The Mainstreet is being wired for sound pictures. The future of the Orpheum is uncertain, Fred Spear, manager, said.

More than 15,000 miles of film has passed through the hands of the Kansas State Board of Motion Picture Review in a 4-year period ending July 1, this year, according to a check-up just completed by Miss Emma Viets, chairman of the board, which has its headquarters in Kansas City, Kans.

Strand Theatre, Lexington Ky., Opened With Elaborate Display

PHOENIX AMUSEMENT COMPANY reopened the doors of its Strand Theatre, Lexington, Ky., Sunday afternoon, September 2, at one o'clock, offering to Lexington theatregoers a beautiful house remodeled and redecorated at a cost of $100,000. From Main Street to the back doors, the Strand is a new theatre, only the four walls and ceiling being old and they are artistically decorated.

More than $150,000 has been spent by the Phoenix Amusement Company on the Strand and Ben Ali Theatres here during the past three months to convert them into handsome theatres and the Strand takes its place as one of the most modern and beautiful theatres in the State.

Included in the extensive plan of improvement for the Strand are Vitaphone, Movietone and R C A Photophone equipment, mechanical devices for synchronization of feature pictures and short subjects, which will soon be installed.

The first new features of the house to draw admiration are two sets of magnificent bronze doors, installed at a cost of $6,000. with a bronze ticket office to match.

A foyer of real beauty greets one entering the theatre. The walls bear panels of heavy rose silk with gray background, while the ceiling predominates with its artistic designs, hand painted in colors of olive green, French gray, rose, blue and gold, with a crystal beaded chandelier hanging from the center. Two massive torcheires, reproductions of those at the Keith-Albee Theatre in Cincinnati, catch the eye. Overstuffed couches in emerald green and rose, two chairs of same material and a hand-carved walnut console table with black and gold marble top and four lovely hand painted oil jars, compose the furnishings of the foyer.

Stairs leading from the foyer to the balcony are done in two tones of French gray. Two square-cut crystal chandeliers hang over each landing on the stairway and a couch in green mohair, two overstuffed chairs and a large mirror complete the furnishings. Directly off the balcony promenade, which is a distinctive feature, roomy and spacious, is the ladies' rest room, finished in tan and green. Silk cushions striped in rose, green and tan, large wall mirrors, dressing table, two roomy chairs with couch make this an attractive and cozy lounge. The lavatory is tiled in blue and white check with white fixtures.

The entire theatre has been reseated with a deluxe theatre chair of all-steel construction with a 12-spring box seat covered in red, gray and blue water colored leather composition and a gray and blue-striped velour two and one-half inch cushion back. These chairs are not only beautiful but exceedingly comfortable and cost $18,000. The Strand has the second largest seating capacity of any theatre in Lexington, with 1,391 seats, the Ben Ali having the most with 1,500.

Walls of the theatre have been decorated by Long, noted mural artist, at an expenditure of $15,000. A handsome red velour and gold curtain especially designed and made for the Strand has been installed on the stage. A three-manual Wurlitzer organ is another outstanding feature.

September Opening for New Wesco House

The new West Coast house which has been under construction at El Centro, in Imperial Valley, will be ready the latter part of September for its formal opening. It represents a cost of approximately $100,000 and will have a seating capacity of about 1500. It is constructed of granite and steel and has the latest type of cooling and heating equipment. The house has a stage 40 by 25 feet. A 210-pipe Wurlitzer organ has been installed.

New Keswick Now Being Built in Philadelphia

A new theatre to be known as the Keswick, which will seat 1600 on the ground floor, is being built for Edward N. Johnson, Glenside real estate man. The theatre will have the most up-to-date equipment and both Movietone and Vitaphone will be installed. Horace Trumbauer, of Philadelphia, is the architect and the Turner Construction Company is erecting the building, which it is expected will be ready for opening on January 1st. Harry Katzes will manage the new theatre.

Sheldon, Iowa, to Have New $75,000 Theatre

F. O. Kehrberg, of Sheldon, Iowa, plans to construct there a $75,000 house, which will be operated by Mr. Kehrberg's two sons who now have the Lyric and Gem theatre at Sheldon and the Princess Theatre at Sanborn, Iowa. The new house is to occupy the 72 by 103 lot now used for the Houlihan Furniture store. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 800, and will be equipped so that it can show sound pictures.

$50,000 Theatre in Albany Suburb Being Built

A $50,000 motion picture theatre is to be erected at once in the village of Delmar, a suburb of Albany, with plans to open the house on November 1. The owners will be Samuel F. Jarvis and Felix R. Wright, both of Albany. The house will have 500 seats. The exterior will be of tapestry brick with Indiana limestone trimmings.

Bunk—or the Box Office!

¶ There are two ways of judging pictures and companies: (1) Believe unsupported superlatives and empty boasts. Base your buying on rumor, any of the current hysterias, and bunk. Or, (2), sit down calmly and analyze which company's pictures are doing the real business at the box office today. Then, remembering that you expect to continue to operate, consider which company is equipped with brains, resources and reputation to best meet the future demands of these changing times. ¶Certainly (2) is the method of sane showmen. And, even more certainly, PARAMOUNT is the one company that meets the test. ¶Check up current product. "Wings," silent and sound, has broken more records than there is room to list. "The Patriot," in its sixth capacity week at the Rialto, New York, and a howling success everywhere, is conceded by competent critics to be the best picture made this year. ¶"Docks of New York," a silent picture, topped by more than $7,000 the high at the Paramount Theatre, a figure hitherto thought to be beyond reach. "The Fleet's In!," also silent, yanked the Granada, San Francisco, out of a slump and made it the most popular house in town. It smashed all previous grosses, and repeated in Los Angeles. ¶"Beggars of Life," with Wallace Beery talking and singing in a dramatic role, is off to a flying start. "Varsity," offering the popular Charles Rogers as a star, cashes in on the present vogue with its principal scenes in dialog. ¶Paramount's Hollywood and Long Island studios, the latter with the cream of nearby Broadway talent already within its walls, are fully equipped for sound and are working day and night. Von Stroheim's "The Wedding March" and Anne Nichols' "Abie's Irish Rose" show what can be done with quality sound product. Both fine silent pictures also. Paramount's first 100% talking picture, "Interference," on the way, is a big advance on any previous attraction of this type. "The Four Feathers," from the producers of "Chang," is a guaranteed sensation. Richard Dix coming in "Redskin" on "Vanishing American" scale, and in Technicolor. Harold Lloyd is starting his first sound picture. Paramount News can be heard as well as seen very soon. ¶ That's just a hint of Paramount's plans for the coming months. A steady stream of outstanding quality product for the 19,000 unwired houses as well as those equipped for sound. ¶ Never before has the Paramount trade mark meant so much to exhibitors who are business men. It is the one definite assurance of quality combined with up-to-dateness in these changing times. ✢ ✢ ✢ ✢ ✢

A New Feature Film Supply

"Photoplays made where the story's laid"

We propose to import notable novelty features from all over the world and distribute them throughout the United States and Canada.

Our Company will be a Clearing House through which unusual photoplays from overseas countries will reach American theatres.

You'll be surprised and delighted at our pictures. Europe is making amazing strides in production. A selection Committee of practical men familiar with American tastes will select the productions we will proffer.

We will sell one or more at a time; that is, exhibitors may select such pictures as they feel will be suitable for their needs.

Because a new source of supply of unusual and profitable pictures will add to the security and independence of exhibitors and because we will open and stabilize American distribution for Overseas producers we feel that we are rendering the Motion Picture Industry of the world a much needed service which deserves the consideration and support of all its branches.

Our Pictures will speak for themselves.

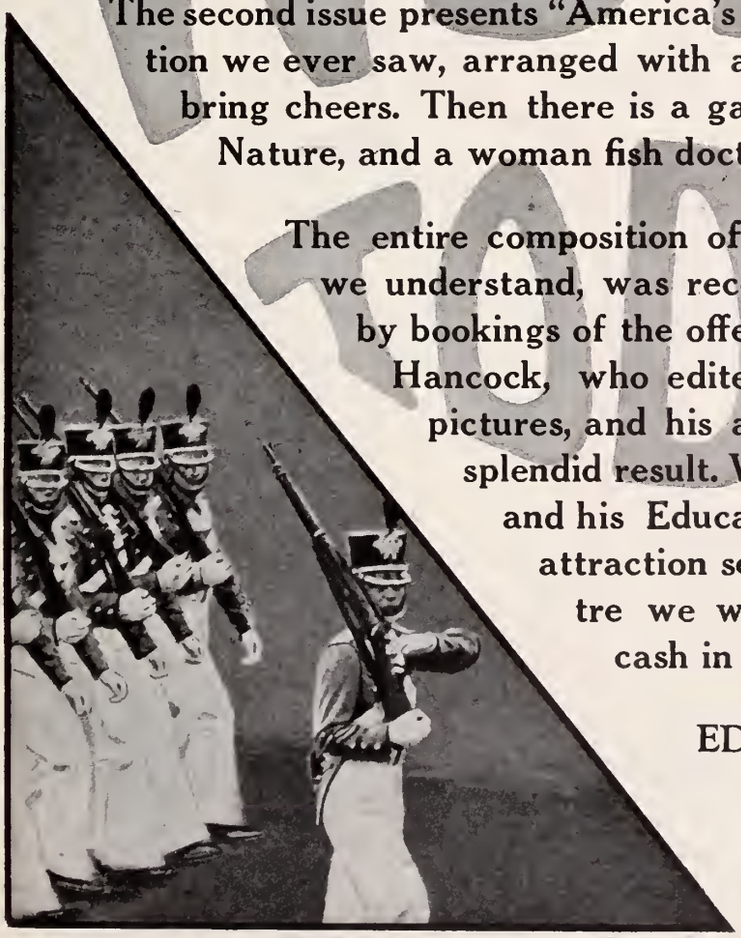
A Showman's Treat



By ARTHUR JAMES
in Motion Pictures Today

A brand new and a refreshing series has come to our eye in Educational's new magazine reel "Our World Today." We have been privileged to see the first two of the issues, and in thrill, human appeal and fine handling they surpass anything of the sort we have seen attempted in a dozen years. The issues have the class quality which will make them especially acceptable to the larger theatres and the mass quality which is essential for all theatres.

Number One—serially numbered 1868—includes a stirring sequence "Thrills of the Sea" which is titled in rhyme. It has dignity, power and movement that is fascinating. In the same reel Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney's sculptures in a "Women of the Hour" feature of the reel and a corking cowboy sequence give variety contrast and wide appeal.

The second issue presents "America's Pride," the best West Point presentation we ever saw, arranged with a certain dramatic sense that should bring cheers. Then there is a gasoline station contrived by Mother Nature, and a woman fish doctor in interesting activities.

The entire composition of each is good showmanship which, we understand, was recognized by the Paramount Theatre by bookings of the offerings. We felicitate Herbert Ernest Hancock, who edited these initial "Our World Today" pictures, and his associate, Allyn Butterfield, on their splendid result. We congratulate Earle W. Hammons and his Educational customers on this very vital attraction series in short form. If we ran a theatre we would smartly advertise the lot and cash in on the pleased patronage.

THUNDEROUS HIT AT TOLEDO WORLD PREMIERE

Famous JUDGE LINDSEY wrote it — and will help you sell it —

JOHN F. KUMLER
Pantheon Theatre, Toledo, Ohio.

"Congratulations upon your securing first and only picture ever produced on Companionate Marriage. This widely discussed subject concerning the most vital problems of life, such as love, marriage and divorce, home and the family has been done into a marvelous photoplay with First National Pictures as distributors. This picture with Betty Bronson and a magnificent cast offers splendid entertainment as well as real education. Everyone will find thrills aplenty in this great epic production of which I am especially proud because it tells the truth for the first time about companionate marriage as it really is."—Judge Ben B. Lindsey

Judge Lindsey, originator of the Companionate Marriage plan, sent this wire to the world premiere exhibitor of "Companionate Marriage," but his sentiments hold good for any showman who books it. You have permission to use this wire in your local ads.

LILAC TIME RIOT GROWS

Clamoring Mobs Force A.M. Shows, Extended Runs

So sensational was "Lilac Time's" business in Detroit that the Madison was forced to hold it for six weeks.

The $2 road-show run on Broadway at the Central has completed its eighth week without a sign of a let-down from the capacity pace.

COLLEEN MOORE, STAR

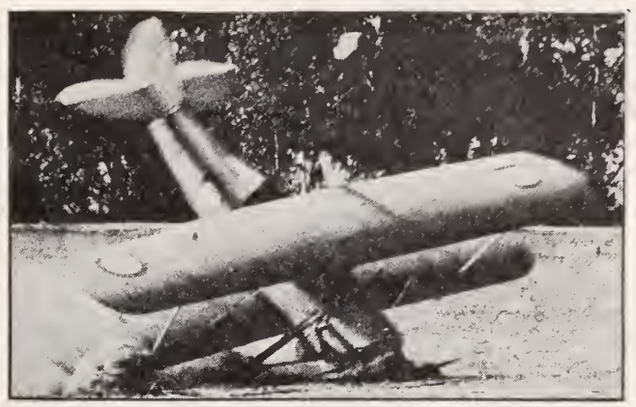
In Los Angeles the Carthay Circle was forced to hold it ten weeks at $2.00 top.

Cleveland kept it four weeks at the Stillman; and the Roosevelt, Chicago, held it for five.

More than a dozen houses have resorted to midnight shows and earlier opening hours to accommodate the crowds.

Two First Runs for F. N. Hit in Same Key Stand

First National Accomplishes Unusual Booking Feat in Two Big Cities



"Lilac Time" is to have two first runs in Buffalo. It played the Buffalo Theatre to such tremendous business that it has now been booked at one of the Buffalo's competing theatres, The Lafayette.

In Baltimore the same remarkable situation occurred. "Lilac Time" went into the Parkway, first-run house, after smashing all records at the Stanley.

"Lilac Time" has just opened to the biggest business ever experienced at the Strand Theatre, Hartford, The Strand, New Britain, and the Capitol, Ansonia, Connecticut.

"LILAC TIME" WILL GET YOU, SAYS "LIBERTY"

One item in the marvelous nation-wide publicity "Lilac Time" is getting was a full-page review in famous Liberty Magazine, September 8th issue. This popular weekly recommended the picture to its five million readers as "a sentimental tale that will get you."

GREATEST AIR PICTURE!—Best aviation scenes ever made help make "Lilac Time" "the finest picture First National ever made," according to the New York Telegram. John McCormick presents it. Carey Wilson wrote the scenario and Willis Goldbeck adapted it from the play by Jane Cowl and Jane Murfin. George Marion, Jr. wrote the titles.

Showman Wires Paint Riotous Scenes as Millions Raid Key Theatres

They're wild about it!

Never has such a flood of rabidly raving exhibitor endorsements hit any producing office.

Here are some of the most recent wires from box-office authorities, not previously made public:

J. J. Payette

"We opened at the Earle, Washington, last night with a special midnight performance and had capacity, turning away several hundred people. I fully expect to see the show break records, and the general comment from pay customers seems to indicate that 'Lilac Time' is going to have a phenomenal run."

In Philadelphia

"Nothing but praise from patrons, management, critics, 'Lilac Time' at the Aldine. Opening bigger than any this season.
—W. J. Heenan.

"Some Picture!"

"'Lilac Time' is some picture. It should prove the greatest money maker of the season for all exhibitors. 'LILAC TIME' receipts were far greater than corresponding receipts on 'PATENT LEATHER KID' although 'LILAC TIME' played in hot weather and under worse conditions generally."—A. E. Sams, Jr., Auditorium Theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Others Take Overflow

"'Lilac Time' opened State here Friday to remarkable business with Minnesota State Fair as opposition. Saturday and Sunday all other theatres in town prospered on the overflow. At Capitol, St. Paul, same opening date, same story. Everybody in both towns talking about the picture and nothing but length of picture can possibly prevent an all-time record for both houses in Minneapolis."—Thomas A. Burke.

Ask the Man Who's Played It

"'Lilac Time' is one of the greatest films we have ever played. Music and effects marvelous. Built faster than any crap game I ever saw. Made a big mistake in not playing longer as closing night we simply couldn't hold them. Ask any exhibitor to wire or call me if in doubt of the draw and pleasing qualities of this picture."—George Hunt, Rialto Theatre, Medford, Oregon.

GEORGE FITZMAURICE, DIRECTOR

4 Records in One Engagement

"Aztec Theatre, San Antonio, with 'Lilac Time' playing eight days did the biggest eight days' business in history of theatre and broke all other records during run, setting new single day record, a new matinee record, and new evening record."—Wm. Epstein, Manager.

Beat Them All

"This picture broke all house records in the history of movies in our town, and this applies to all big pictures released in the past two years. General consensus of opinion from our patrons was 'LILAC TIME' is the finest picture we have ever shown. We have, as you know, contracted for your entire President Group, and in doing so feel that there are many good business days in store for us during the coming season."—Burt's Theatre, Luzerne, N. Y.; G. A. Woodward, Manager.

Builds Unheard-Of Total of 30 Records in First 10 Weeks

Now it's "Lilac Time" everywhere!

Overwhelming evidence of the all-time supremacy of this astounding First National special continues to pile up at an ever-increasing pace.

The stupendous total of 24 records were reported in first 7 weeks—an average of about 3½ per week; but in the past two weeks the average has exactly doubled with 14 new high marks set in 14 days!

Here is the list of "Lilac Time's" latest achievements, not previously reported:

House record at the Palace Dallas.

JOHN McCORMICK, PRODUCER

Almost doubled gross of any previous attraction at Empress Oklahoma City.

Biggest business in history a Strand, Waterbury.

Biggest business in city's history at the Strand, Lowell, Mass.

Single-day record at the Aztec San Antonio.

Matinee record at the Aztec.

Evening record at the Aztec.

Eight-day record at the Aztec.

Biggest day's receipts and attendance in twelve years' history of the theatre at Grand Junction Colo.

Biggest gross in history at the Palm Theatre, Pueblo.

Biggest business in city's history at Burt's Theatre, Luzerne, N. Y.

Biggest week the Riviera, Omaha has had since theatre's opening week.

Broke its own record in fifth week at the Central, New York, a $2 top.

Second Pittsburgh run at the Regent Theatre broke house record.

PREVIOUS RECORD ALMOST DOUBLED!

Tom H. Boland, Oklahoma City exhibitor, is authority for the statement that "'Lilac Time' at Empress Theatre not only has broken the house record but has almost doubled in receipts any picture that ever played this house. Phenomenal is a weak word to use in describing the business done on this engagement."

2,500 of Town's 8,500 Population Flock to "Lilac Time" on Opening Day

More than one-quarter of the town's total population turned out for the opening of "Lilac Time" in Grand Junction, Colorado.

Here's the way H. T. Nolan describes the stampede:

GARY COOPER, HERO

"What I wrote you reeently about 'Lilac Time' was just an opinion, but today's attendance figures are facts. Box-office statement shows over 2,500 customers in a town of 8,500 population attended opening day's performance at 40 per cent increased admission prices. Turned hundreds away.

"Old man house record took an awful wallop on the chin and house established new record that looks impossible to beat. Largest day's receipts and attendance in twelve years' history of house."

"LILAC TIME" THEME SONG BEST-SELLER

"Jeannine, I Dream of Lilac Time," lilting theme song, is spreading "Lilac Time's" fame to every corner of the country. Official sales reports show it is the second most popular song in America today.

*The Third Era

Analysis of the Position of the Industry After The Revolution

By William A. Johnston

AS I see it, there have been three distinct eras in our industrial growth.

First, there was the novelty era of short subjects. The appeal was one of novelty. The industry's leaders thought that all you had to do was to control the patents on the necessary equipment and you could control the business.

But the motion picture was capable of expressing much more and the public grew to want more. So we passed out of the mechanical novelty era into a so called era of art. The patents passed away and the striving was successively for directors, players, stories, writers, studio technicians. Year in and out, through an amazing period of enterprise and the reckless but brave expenditure of untold millions, we have developed the photoplay to the point that the American product encompassed the earth. A most remarkable and most creditable achievement it has been. But in all this era—and it has lasted for fifteen years, there has not been, until now, any great, basic mechanical change in the motion picture. I am not speaking now from a scientific standpoint, nor am I overlooking the technical advances in picture making or projection or presentation. I am speaking only from a public viewpoint. The public has waited patiently these years, somewhat impatiently the last few years, for another mystery; and now they have it. And the public, just as in the early days of the movies, is flocking to it, complaining that it distresses the ears just as the early flickers distressed the eyes but revelling nevertheless in the new attraction.

Enter—The Third Era

So we are in a new era, a third one, and another era of novelty.

And the novelty, in the public eye, will gradually pass just as the novelty of animation passed. But the talkies won't pass. We will go right ahead into another era of improving the new attraction, perfecting the devices, and developing a new art form in the studios, the picture that not only moves but also expresses itself with sound.

Pantomine has its limitations, and, as with all human progress, we are struggling to overcome them. The plain fact that silent pictures have subtitles shows that pantomine at its best cannot fully express itself. The talking picture is a great step forward.

The silent picture hasn't been doing well of late. I refer again and only to the public. We have given it palatial theatres, so gorgeous that they draw people in through their own amazing magnificence. We have added ten-thousand dollar a week bands, jazz impresarios, organs and name organists, vaudeville and vaudeville headliners, a new and extravagant form of picture theatre vaudeville—till the presentation tail wagged the motion picture dog. The public responded to the big shows but the expense was terrific and first run theatres began to show red. At any rate, the point is that it has been increasingly difficult of late to sell silent pictures to the American public.

And I believe that we haven't sold our wares to the public as we should have done. An industry that spends so much of its dollar on its goods and their distribution that little is left, or felt to be left, for spirited advertising, is in a sad way these days.

Opening the Public Purse

But over and above these two deterrents is the big fact that the public has expected something basically new, something more vital, some radically new appeal in the motion picture.

That's what the talkie is and that is why it opens the public purse.

The talking picture is not new: but its opportunity is new, new and great.

I recall the Gramaphone—about fifteen years ago. State Rights were quickly sold. It created quite a trade furore, and then quickly died out. Looking back, it appears quite clearly that the public didn't want this novelty—at that time. The brand new novelty of animation was enough. Just to see photographed figures in motion was an all absorbing mystery. And the new illusion held forth so many and such appealing developments. New tricks were born right along. We all remember the positive hysteria that greeted Griffith's close-up and the genuine drama and scope of his "Birth of A Nation." There was so much to be done. Today with the silent picture, we seem to have done it. The public is asking: "What's new?"

When the Vitaphone was in its laboratory stage, a man had to beg me, fairly kidnap me to get me down to hear it. We had ourselves completely sold on the theory that the picture was all in all, had no limitations. I was greatly impressed with the device but questioned its show value.

Warner Brothers—their efforts tolerated then but envied now—answered that question boldly, bravely, successfully. They plunged, staking everything, stopping at nothing. They put the show into the Vitaphone and the Vitaphone into the show business.

Even so, nothing revolutionary happened until "The Jazz Singer" came along. That is the picture that turned the industry talkie. Al Jolson and a song did the trick.

Let us stop here and try to analyze this epoch making attraction.

Al Jolson, singing his song over the radio, heard but not seen, is just good entertainment.

But Al Jolson, both seen and heard, in a picture, breaks box-office records and makes a new picture industry.

It isn't quite enough to see Al Jolson silent, nor to hear him unseen. He makes himself fully appealing, fully dramatic, only when he is seen and heard at the same time.

Sound—The Exclamation Point

Again, the song came along in the picture at an emotional climax.

In other words, sound—whether talk, singing, instrumental music, sound effect—when telling and artfully used, adds drama to the silent picture, gives it a new vitality, a broader, more satisfying expression.

We don't want too much sound, just as we don't want too much silence. And in making talkies we must not lose the rythm of the picture. Action on the stage, animation in the picture, give the body of the narrative. Sound supplies the exclamation points. There should be talk only when there has to be, or singing, or sound of any kind.

There is chaos, as I have said, within the industry today. But bad as it is, it is a good sign. It means progress. It is when the show business gets orderly that you may look for danger signs. The business may be satisfied with itself but the public may not. And the public rules. There was chaos when the industry went from short subject program service into feature photoplays. The studios and the channels of distribution, trade practices, policies, prices—all had to be revised. That is the same big problem to tackle today.

Interchangeability Will Come

Two main problems face the exhibitor today. One is the matter of interchangeability of films and records over the various types of installations. The exhibitor, of course, is not merely interested in the kind of sound machine he can get. He wants to know what entertainment service he can get for the machine.

To all inquiring exhibitors, we give the answer: Yes, there will be interchangeability because there must be. If the silent picture had started with several types of projection machines running varying widths of film there would not have been the great development of the picture we have seen. It is inconceivable that there should not be interchangeability. On the other hand, it is not surprising that one machine with ample service of its own to offer should hesitate to announce from the housetops that its service is available to competing machines.

The other problem is that facing the theatre chain, which in any one city and its suburbs has first run and later run theatres. Realizing that the public call today is for the sound picture and furthermore that sound pictures are as good in the small neighborhood house as in the palatial first run, the question arises as to whether one or the other or both should go in for sound movies. Will one house rob the other? How is each type of house to be protected?

Because of the present great interest in the new kind of movies, the large first runs cannot do otherwise than book them. In the long run, however, the sound picture would seem to be the logical attraction of the smaller house, especially the small town house, and at the same time its salvation.

Animation, Sound, Color, Depth

To this the studio people reply: Yes, but silent pictures, the better ones, are now cut in length to fit the small theatre program; and how can you cut talking pictures?

To which there is the ready reply that there will be no talking pictures as long as our so called special silent pictures. The introduction of talk in pictures is bound to shorten them—and greatly, not only from the standpoint of story construction but also of audience wants.

I believe that other important physical developments will follow now that the screen can talk. One is color and another is the third dimension effect, both designed to lend further realism to the formerly flat and silent figures of the screen.

I had lunch the other day with a well known physicist, a man of vision but also of practice. The picture of the future, said he, will have animation, sound, color and depth, and there will be such perfection among all those lines that one entering a picture theatre and seeing for the first time such an exhibition, will get the impression that he is actually seeing and hearing living people in action.

Warner Acquisition of First Nat'l Reported Set

Purchase of 19,000 Shares of Stock Basis of Deal; Spyros Skouras Slated to Head Theatre Operations

CONTROL of First National is to pass to Warner Brothers through the purchase of 19,000 shares of stock by the latter's bankers from stockholders represented on the board of control of First National. Completion of the negotiations, which have been under way for some time, and which have been reported as developing during the past several weeks, was expected to be announced momentarily, as this issue went to press.

Full agreement upon the terms of the purchase which greatly expands the production and distribution resources of Warner Brothers was reported reached by attorneys for both organizations several days ago, but formal announcement awaited the completion of examination of papers.

Warners became a large factor in First National automatically with the acquisition of control of the Stanley Company of America. Almost one-third of the First National stock outstanding passed to Warner Brothers with the Stanley purchase. The total of the First National stock outstanding is 75,000, of which 23,000 shares were held by the Stanley Company.

Reports current for several days that the Warner expansion activities would not rest with the acquisition of Stanley and First National, but would quickly materialize in another direction by the purchase of the Skouras circuit of theatres in St. Louis, gained new impetus this week. It is reported that the Skouras deal has been agreed upon and, like the First National purchase, awaits only official announcement to bring this circuit officially under the Warner banner.

According to the reports Spyros Skouras is to become chief of the Warner theatre operations, which in size and scope with the control of Stanley and the projected taking over of the Skouras houses take rank among the largest theatre enterprises in the country.

The purchase price of the First National stock which gives Warner Brothers three of the total of six votes on the controlling board of that company is said to be about $2,380,000. Under a pooling of interests effected when Fox obtained a block of 21,000 shares through the purchase of the West Coast Theatres, the control of First National is vested in six trustees.

It is understood that three of these six votes will go to Warner Brothers through the deal now said to be completed in all but final details. The reported purchase price of the control is at the rate of $200 a share for the additional 19,000, which gives Warner Brothers a total of 42,000 of the 75,000 outstanding shares. Based on these figures the value of First National is $15,000,000.

According to the reports the set up of First National upon completion of the deal with Warner Brothers will have the latter holding 42,000, Fox 21,000, and 12,000 shares distributed. Harry Schwalbe, Clifford B. Hawley and Richard A. Rowland among others are said to be holders of large blocks of the scattered 12,000 shares.

If the Skouras deal goes through as reported, the Warner theatre holdings will be increased considerably in both quantity and quality. Skouras Bros. Enterprises control the Ambassador, Missouri and Grand Central, downtown St. Louis houses, and the St. Louis Amusement Co., controlled by Skouras, has 25 neighborhood theatres in St. Louis County. Skouras also is interested in theatres in Indiana with Publix.

Fox Charges Attempted "Raids" on Employees by Other Studios

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, September 25.—Charges against executives of four major studios to the effect that deliberate attempts have been made to secure important contract employees of Fox Films may be filed by Fox officials with the Association of Motion Picture Producers.

Fox executives are reported indignant over alleged tactics used by representatives of four other studios to secure for their respective firms the services of sound experts and dialogue writers now under contract to Fox. It appears very likely that these charges, naming executives and their studios, will be brought before a committee of the producers' association with the demand that no producer member shall attempt to secure employees under contract to any other producer member without the knowledge and sanction of the employing producer.

If some guarantee of protection is not given, it is reported Fox will consider resigning from the association. Motion Picture News is reliably informed that Fox is in possession of specific evidence of several cases, with names, dates, telegrams and methods used by other studio officials to secure these sound experts and writers. Among the evidence is a telegram from one Hollywood producer to a Fox dialogue writer in New York, making an attractive offer to join his firm. Also another case is reported where a dialogue director contracted to Fox was invited to a party presumably of four people and, after refusing several invitations, accepted, only to find when he arrived at the party two executives of one firm who cornered him with an offer to leave Fox, which he refused.

It will be recalled that similar upheavals threatened the producers' association in recent years when complaints were made by Warner Brothers and Universal regarding attempts to secure certain of their contracted directors and stars.

Sapiro Combine Through

THE end of the Sapiro organization, a group of independent exhibitors in New York City who, under the leadership of Aaron Sapiro, sought to effect a pretentious booking combine, appears to be in sight. At a recent meeting called by Sapiro, members were freed from their film purchase contracts and other obligations until Dec. 1 when it is thought that the movement will be definitely abandoned.

Sapiro still stands ready to carry on with the scheme, according to a recent statement he is reported to have made. He claims that as far as his own personal gain in the matter is concerned, it is written entirely in red figures and that the way matters are at present, will receive nothing for his services, but will proceed with organization work if members so desire and recommends that the body continue its legal existence.

At the outset, Sapiro hoped to enroll at least 75 per cent of the independently controlled houses in the Metropolitan district, but differences of opinion arose between factions in the independent ranks, and at the high mark less than 50 per cent membership was obtained. Sapiro claims that leading film producers threw the monkey wrenches which brought about the failure of the organization, the stampede starting when the Mayer & Schneider theatre operating firm withdrew and independent of Sapiro booked M-G-M product, Sapiro sought an injunction, which was denied.

Florida Hard Hit By Storm

Hurricane Leaves Widespread Damage in Its Wake; M.P.T.O. A. Issues Appeal for Help Through Red Cross

MOTION picture interests in the area swept by tropical hurricane are practically paralyzed, according to reports received in New York City this week. Widespread damage has been done to theatres in the devastated regions of Porto Rico, Florida and the Virgin Islands, many cancellations of film service have been received by Jacksonville, Florida exchanges.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, through this organization's president, R. F. Woodhull, this week issued the following appeal for aid through the American Red Cross:

"Theatre Owners everywhere are earnestly urged to do everything in their power to aid the unfortunate victims of the hurricane in Porto Rico, Virgin Islands, Florida and elsewhere in our country and its possessions.

"This can be done effectively in different ways. Direct contributions can be given to your local Red Cross Chapter. But, the use of the Screen as a Medium of Expression and Appeal in this relation is most fruitful of quick results. News Reel pictures of the devastated areas are now available and are being shown in many theatres. Do not allow these to pass just as the pictorial representation of the catastrophe. Make a special showing of this part of the News Reel and then follow with a specially made Appeal Reel or Slide asking your patrons to do all they can to alleviate the suffering of the many thousands afflicted through these hurricane ravages.

"To do this best you can cooperate with the officers of your home branch of the Red Cross. If they have not been to see you already, go to them yourself and offer your services. The results of this wonderfully effective method will amaze you and make you happy in the fact that once more you have heeded the call of the afflicted and added to the industry's fine record of relieving distress."

In a telegram to Secretary M. J. O'Toole, of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, President John Barton Payne of the National Red Cross praises the work of our organization on the Mississippi flood crisis and asked further cooperation.

Cancellation of film service was ordered by houses as follows: Jacksonville exchanges stated: Lyric at Pahokee, the town in the Lake Okeechobee area probably hardest hit in loss of life; Lincoln (colored) at Miami; Palace (colored), Fort Lauderdale; all houses in the Palm Beaches; Lyric at Daytona Beach; Delray at Delray; Glades at Moorehaven; Capitol at Pompano; Park at Okeechobee; Grand at Winterhaven; Oakley at Lake Worth.

Scattered reports began to arrive at film exchanges last Wednesday, in several instances to instruct that film service be held up until further notice. One of the first came from Publix advising that the Stanley Theatre, West Palm Beach; the Oakley at Lake Worth; and the Grand at Winterhaven were closed.

A telegram reported that the roof had been blown off the Franklyn Theatre at Bushnell and the house is closed. The Delray Theatre, Delray, is badly damaged and closed; the Lyric at Daytona Beach was damaged and first reported closed, but later telegram asked that film service continue. Meanwhile repairs were being rushed.

Throughout Monday and Monday night E. T. Brown, head of the E. J. Sparks enterprises Atlanta headquarters, made unsuccessful efforts to get telegrams through to some of the Sparks houses in the path of the storm.

It was not until Wednesday that Mr. Brown received a report from M. C. Talley, of the Sparks Lakeland office, saying that the desolation at Palm Beach and West Palm Beach was appalling. All theatres in West Palm Beach are out of commission, and the Arcade, the beautiful new Sparks house, was standing a foot deep in water. It was impossible, Mr. Talley said, to desig-

Schenck's Attitude on Talkies

United Artists Head Admits Present Commercial Demand, But Wants to Be Shown That Talking Pictures Are Permanent

By EDWIN SCHALLERT

(Editor of The Los Angeles Times Preview and Special Correspondent of Motion Picture News)

LOS ANGELES, September 25.—If talking pictures spell advancement for the motion picture business; if they permit the same latitude for expression as the silent film, then they will be of benefit and will last.

So far they have not proven their quality, nor their claims to permanence. They are mechanical and restrictive.

America is in danger of losing her prestige in the foreign market because of talking pictures. The foreign countries have a new opportunity for self-expression in films with dialogue because of language differences. In silent pictures, the position of America has been unique.

Commercially, at the present time, no one can ignore talking pictures. It would be ridiculous, but it remains to be seen whether they can qualify as art, or even as a business enterprise with a far-reaching future. The odds are against them as yet.

Joseph M. Schenck, President of United Artists, thus defined his stand to me on the subject of talking pictures today. It has already been heard that he was opposed to them. Basically, perhaps he is, but at the same time, he is fully aware of their potentialities. In his talk with me he made this clearly understood. Mr. Schenck flung a bombshell into the sound field on his return from Europe by the opposition that he expressed. The impression has possibly gone out that he was not aware of the latest developments of this stripling youth in entertainment that has commanded so much attention. However, this is not the case.

"My position is this, and I have not altered it—namely, that the present success of sound films does not prove they are more than a novelty," he said. "I am fully aware of their commercial possibilities, and fully appreciate these. For certain types of stories they have proved themselves extremely effective. For instance, 'The Terror.'

"Definite proof of our interest in sound pictures is afforded by the stages we are building at the United Artists studios. We are going to be as active as anybody and as constructively active as any other company in the sound field. Our pictures will be made definitely for the new medium. As has already been announced, Mary Pickford is to make an all-talking version of 'Coquette' and a silent version as well. We entertain the same plan for 'Nightstick' and for 'Lummox,' which will be among our first talkies.

"I personally am not in the motion picture business for my health, and I would be foolish to fly in the face of public acceptance of sound pictures. We are setting about to supply this demand as rapidly and legitimately as possible.

"However, this does not mean that I am a convert to talking pictures. Quite the contrary, I want to be shown. And I believe no mistake could be more serious than to neglect silent pictures, and the huge market at home and particularly abroad for this type of picture. Fundamentally, the talking picture is mechanical. The silent screen is not mechanical in the same sense. The camera photographs with power, reality and penetration that are unsurpassed. A Sarah Bernhardt might fool the public with her make-up on the stage, but she could not fool the camera. The talkies do not achieve this reality, this truthfulness, which the camera possesses. So far, the results have been quite opposite. Voices on the screen do not sound like voices in real life. They do not bring personality to the listener as the silent picture brings the personality of the player before the eye of the spectator, and it remains to be proven whether this mechanical artificiality can ever be overcome. A phonograph record is still a phonograph record. A good phonograph record may be better than a bad concert actually heard, but it cannot be the equal of a good concert actually heard.

"The motion picture, on the other hand, has given a reality to the public that is not possessed ever by the stage.

Hollywood Flashes

(Hollywood Bureau, Motion Picture News)

HOLLYWOOD, September 26. (By Wire)—Pathe will release ten 100 per cent talkies in addition to synchronizing all product with sound effects for the new program, Colvin Brown told a Motion Picture News representative in an exclusive interview prior to leaving for New York. Seven will be "The Spieler," "Office Scandal," "The Shady Lady," "The Leathernecks," "The Flying Fool," "The Elevator Girl," "High Voltage." The three other titles have not been set.

Brown stated that Pathe is now fully equipped on the West Coast ready to go ahead full blast on all productions. Photophone will be used for synchronization.

Reports that upheaval will take place in present staff at the Pathe studio, December 31 when several contracts expire, were denied by Brown, who said everyone would remain.

Carl Laemmle left Tuesday night for New York ostensibly to prepare for the opening of "Lonesome" at the Colony Theatre, but the report is that Laemmle just saw a working print of a sensational South Seas picture made in the Maori Islands and directed by Lew Collins, with the temporary title of "Taranga."

The opinion is that Laemmle considers the picture so valuable that it merits his personal attention on sales and releasing plans and a record breaking advance advertising and publicity campaign.

Gotham is entering the field of one reel synchronized shorts with Bristolphone. Sam Sax is leaving here next week to sign vaudeville, musical comedy and night club artists for these specialties.

William Counselman who supervised and wrote many Fox features the past year, and resigned two weeks ago, stating he intended sticking to newspaper cartoons, has signed with Pathe, supervising and writing. His first will be "Listen, Baby," an original story by Elsie Janis and Gene Markey. The only one cast so far is Eddie Quillan.

India Okays U. S. Films

Commission's Report Absolves Pictures; Trade Rivalry Seen As Cause of Enquiry

ASKED to report on a charge that films from the western hemisphere were undermining Indian culture and having a harmful effect on moral concepts, a reply in book-length form by the Indian Cinemetograph Commission, a government body, reveals that motion pictures, and partieularly Ameriean-made pictures are completely absolved of any deleterions effect. 78 per cent of film footage shown in India and Burma is American-made. A copy of the report has just reached this country, complete satisfaction is expressed and trade rivalry bluntly suggested as the real basis of the criticisms made.

The question was first raised at the Imperial Conference in England in 1926, a commission created and an elaborate course of inquiry mapped and executed. Every province in India and Burma was visited by the members and 4,325 questionnaires issued. A detailed refutation of an adverse report given by the Social Hygiene Council, an unofficial body, follows:

"The council has been given every opportunity of supporting its allegations before us," say the commissioners, "but has in effect declined to do so. Frankly we cannot accept such excathedra statements which are unsupported by evidence. . . . not only can we not accept them but it appears obvious to us that they were made without attempt at serious enquiry and partly, at least as the result of pre-existing obsession. . . .

"We do not suggest that trade propaganda is illegitimate in itself," the commissioners report, "but obviously a man with wares to sell is not likely to lose any opportunity of criticising the wares of his rival. The British industry very naturally wishes to recover the position it held prior to the war. . . . a careful study of facts has satisfied us that much of this critieism had its origin outside India. . . . we are without exception satisfied that the majority of films certified for publie exhibition in no way tend to demoralise or bring Western eivilization into contempt. . . ."

Ames Council Dismisses Case Against Exhibitor

The Sunday elosing interests of Ames, Iowa, received a setback at a meeting of the City Couneil last week, the couneil voting to dismiss the city's suit against Joe Gerbracht, Ames theatre manager, for alleged violation of a Sunday elosing ordinance. The Couneil also instructed City Attorney R. E. Niehol to defend Councilman C. J. O'Neill in the ouster suit brought by the anti-theatre faction. This move culminates a series between the movie and anti-movie groups which had their impetus in last Spring's election.

Pinanski Projecting $1,750,000 Development

A DEVELOPMENT of the property at High and Congress street in Portland, Maine, is being planned by Samuel Pinanski, president of the New England Theatres Operating Corporation. $1,750,000 is said to be invested in the project.

The new Netoco State Theatre, now under construction, will be housed in this building, one of the largest in the city, noted far and wide for its beauty. The enormous floor space of the projected structure will house not only the Netoco State, but twenty-two stores and 170 offices. The building is opposite the Eastland Hotel in the heart of the shipping district.

Dillon with Springer Chain as General Manager

George M. Dillon, formerly district manager for Pathe, has become general manager of the Springer circuit, controlling eight theatres in the New York section and presided over by Jack Springer as president. Mr. Dillon is the most recent man of prominence in the trade to transfer his abilities from the distribution to the exhibition field. Altogether he has had nine years experience in the film industry. The eight Springer houses whose affairs he will handle are the Adelphia, Symphony, 77th St., Stoddard, Essex and Keystone, all on Broadway, and the Dyckman and the Ward, in the Bronx. At the present time the Symphony, where Mr. Dillon will have his headquarters, is being redecorated.

Sterns Schedule 5 New Comedies for October

Five two-reel comedies have been scheduled for October release by the Stern Bros., producers of comedies for Universal.

The group includes "The Newlyweds' Unwelcome," one of the Newlyweds comedies directed by Francis Corby, with Jack Egan and Derelys Perdue, October 3rd; "Look Pleasant," a Let George Do It comedy, featuring Sid Saylor, directed by Gus Meins, October 10; "Buster Trims Up," a Buster Brown comedy directed by Sam Newfield, October 17; "Shooting the Bull," a Mike and Ike comedy co-starring Joe Young and Ned La Salle, directed by Gus Meins, October 24, and "The Newlyweds' Court Trouble," also directed by Corby, October 31.

Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger Returning to U. S. in Fall

It is announced on good authority that Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger, whose interests are closely allied with the Stanley Company of America, and who has been abroad for the past five years, will return to the United States this fall. Important contracts to which he is a party with the Stanley Company will expire at that time and his presence will be necessary in formulating terms with the new interests which have taken over control of the Stanley Company. So far as is now known, the purchase of the controlling interest in the Stanley Company by Warner Brothers will not affect the present personnel of the Stanley organization.

Gathering Discusses Technical Advance in Industry; the Talkie Chief Topic

THE Society of Motion Picture Engineers held their fall meeting at Whiteface Inn, Lake Placid, New York, this week. The gathering is said to be the first representing all of the different motion picture sound systems. Other technical departments of the motion picture industry were discussed, but in the main the meeting devoted itself chiefly to methods of recording and reproducing sound. The program of the society was wide and the list of papers large.

The various papers reporting the progress of motion pictures and the parties delivering them were as follows:

"Report of Progress in Motion Picture Industry"—Research Laboratory, General Electric Company; "Public Reaction to Sound Movies"—F. Mordaunt Hall, Motion Picture Editor, New York Times; "Quality of Speech and Music"—J. C. Steinberg; "General Principles of Sound Recording"—E. C. Wente; "Sound Reproduction in Theatres"—E. O. Scriven; "Methods of Synchronizing"—H. M. Stoller, of Bell Telephone Laboratories; "The Public and Sound Pictures"—William A. Johnston, publisher of Motion Picture News; "The Three Electrode Vacuum Tube and Its Relation to Sound Recording"—General Electric Company and H. B. Santee, Electrical Research Products, collaborating with E. O. Scriven; "Sound Reproduction in Theatres."

New developments in motion pictures were demonstrated at the meeting, and a banquet was held Wednesday night, golf and other social features occupying part of the members' time.

While information is still lacking from many theatres in the storm area the fact that power and light lines were down is sufficient evidence that those theatres could not operate, even if they escaped actual property damage.

Temporarily, at least, some exchange managers plan to recall their Florida salesmen.

Rescued by a squadron of three planes from a stalled railroad train, James Buchanan, a Paramount News cameraman, managed to reach New York last Thursday night with the first moving pictures of the devastated Florida regions. Many narrow escapes marked his efforts to secure the difficult shots during the storm.

Fox Buys Brandt Circuit in Brooklyn; Moving to Form New York Chain

WILLIAM FOX has purchased outright the Brandt Theatrical Enterprises operating 11 houses in various sections of Brooklyn. It is also rumored that a deal for the Rachmil and Rinzeler chain, perhaps the most important in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn, is likewise set. Other deals, it is said, scattered throughout Greater New York, are to follow in short order.

The acquisition of the Brandt chain is said to be a move on Fox' part to build a large theatre circuit in the New York area. If he achieves the large number of houses he is after, Fox, it is regarded by many, will offer Loew the most formidable opposition the latter circuit has ever been called upon to face.

Besides Fox and Loew, another competitor in the New York area seems to be Warners. This firm is as intensely in the race as its rivals.

The Brandt deal brings into the Fox camp these houses: Empress, Atlantic, National, Bunny, Carlton, Cumberland, Duffield, Parkside, Biltmore, Stratford and Terminal.

It is thought that all of them will be wired for Movietone at once.

"Dynamite" De Mille's First for M-G-M

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 26.—(By Wire)—Cecil B. DeMille's first M-G-M story will be "Dynamite," by Jeanie Macpherson. The cast is not selected yet, but it will be headed by two male leads and one female lead. In this, De Mille returns to the style of picture like "Manslaughter," "Why Change Your Wife?," etc. While denial is made that divorce is the theme, it will enter into the plot.

The picture will be ultra-modern, glorifying clothes, designs and furniture, instead of being a costume play.

Paramount Radio Has Exclusive Wave Length

The Paramount Pictures-Los Angeles Evening Express radio station, KNX, will be one of the four super-power broadcast stations on the Pacific Coast with clear wave channels as allotted under the new ruling of the Federal Radio Commission, according to dispatches from Washington, D. C.

The new government radio regulations will be into effect November 11, at which time KNX will change from its present wave-length to its new, exclusive wave channel. This station, which will soon be in operation as a 5,000-watt plant at the studios of Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation in Hollywood, is one of the forty in the United States with an exclusive wave-length.

First "Smitty" Comedy Set For October 7

Among the Pathe short subjects set for release on October 7 is the first of the new "Smitty" comedies, produced by Amedee J. Van Beuren Enterprises and including Jack Dempsey as one of its cast. "No Picnic" is the title of the comedies which has Donald Haines in the role of "Smitty," and Jackie Coombs, Joseph Belmont and Maude Truax in other roles.

"Chick" Meehan Makes Football Pictures

"Chick" Meehan, New York University football coach, has made a series of one-reel "demonstration" pictures, which depict shifts, forward passes and line plunges. The coach has made arrangements with Columbia for the distribution of his novelty reels. Meehan himself appears in the introductory footage, explaining by title the plays his N. Y. U. men will illustrate. There is a slight story in each of the pictures.

Delight Evans Editor of Screenland

SCREENLAND MAGAZINE, beginning with the issue of January, 1929, will be issued under the editorial guidance of Delight Evans, screen reviewer for the publication. She began her career at the age of 15 as a staff writer with Photoplay and was with that magazine until she joined the editorial staff of Screenland. She will continue to review important pictures as well as assume charge of the publication's policies.

Will Bring Suit Against Iowa Councilman

The embattled forces in the Sunday theatre struggle at Ames, Iowa, maneuvered for position again when five Ames' citizens were granted in district court at Nevada the right to bring suit against C. J. O'Neil, councilman at large, for alleged wrongful holding of office.

The five complainants are E. O. Slater, W. R. Hardeastle, J. V. McKelvey, W. E. Bartow and Harvey N. Taylor. Slater and McKelvey are members of the Iowa State college faculty. The five will replace R. I. Downey as petitioner. Downey today withdrew his name from the case.

Action in this case is brought on the grounds that a council of a city of the second class is not granted the right by the statute to fill vacancies on the council by appointment.

The case will be heard during the September term of court which opens Sept. 17, with Judge O. J. Henderson of Webster City on the bench.

Another case, the appeal of Joe Gerbracht, theatre manager, from fines of $75 assessed in Mayor F. H. Schleiter's court for alleged violation of the former closing ordinance will also be heard during the September term.

Famous Players Canadian Shows Earning Increase

Earnings of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, for the year just closed will, according to reliable information, be shown substantially higher than for the preceding period. It is intimated that earnings will be of sufficient proportion to enable the company to place its junior issue on a regular dividend basis. Last March the corporation made a $3,000,000 issue which was quickly oversubscribed.

Theatre conditions throughout the Dominion during the past twelve months have been prosperous, with employment at new high record levels. Theatre attendance has been increasing all through the country, and Famous Players, with its 130 houses, has secured a large share of patronage. The aggregate seating capacity of Famous Players houses in Canada is 42,241.

Pathe Places 73rd Serial Into Production

Pathe's claims to heavy serial activity gain further credence in the announcement recently that their production forces on the coast had begun initial work on "The Tiger's Shadow," a new Pathe serial and this company's 73rd chapter photoplay.

Spencer Bennett is directing Gladys McConnell and Hugh Allan, who are playing the leads in the George Arthur Gray original story.

There are five serials in all on the current Pathe program. "The Terrible People" is now being released and the other three to be filmed are "Eagle of the Night," "The Fire Detective" and "Queen of the North Woods."

Producton on Tiffany-Stahl Lot Speeded

Six productions are either being filmed or are about to enter production at the Tiffany-Stahl studio in Hollywood at the present time. These inclued "The Man in Hobbles," "The Queen of Burlesque," "Applause," "The Girl Who Came Back" (tentative title), "The Devil's Apple Tree" and "The Spirit of Youth," suggested by a Tarkington story.

First National Shows Substantial Gain for 6-Months' Period

AGAIN in earnings of $103,140 is realized by First National Pictures, Inc., according to the figures given out by President Irving D. Rossheim in his announcement of the financial progress of First National for the six months ending last June 30. The net profit for the period was $709,032, which compares with $605,892 for the corresponding period of last year, an increase in profit of $103,140.

During the six months the company retired $760,000 of 6 per cent Purchase Money notes, $100,000 of First Mortgage 6½ per cent Gold Bonds and 760 shares of First Preferred and 1,000 shares of Second Preferred Class A stock, according to the report of Warren C. Boothby, First National treasurer. The company's surplus for the six-months' period indicated an increase of $666,719, bringing the total to $7,188,155, Mr. Boothby further stated.

Mr. Rossheim's financial statement follows in detail:

Total operating income (for period ending June 30, 1928) $12,427,135—$11,786,820 (same period of 1927); expenses (for period ending June 30, 1928) $669,512—$497,690 (for same period of 1927); other income (for period ending June 30, 1928) $160,853—$185,994 (same period of 1927); profit after interest, Federal and State taxes, etc., $709,032 (for period ending June 30, 1928)—$605,892 (for same period of 1927).

Hosts to Film Industry

THE Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce gave a complimentary dinner to representatives of the motion picture industry, Monday evening, Sept. 24, at the Hotel Waldorf, New York City. The event was in recognition of what the camera has done to promote the cause of aeronautics. About 600 attended and applauded the screening of a seven reel picture of Lindbergh's flights to Europe, Central and South America and through the United States. The picture was later presented to the U. S. Government by Will Hays.

Major Gardner, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, pointed out in his speech that aeronautics were in a bad way after the war, with scores of manufacturing and transport companies cutting each other's throats to get business.

Will Hays, he said, was called upon to lend his aid toward the solution of the problem, and as a result the industry was put on a sound basis for success. Since then he said further, motion pictures have been of great help toward making the United States "air-minded."

In addition to Mr. Gardner's speech, the only other was that of Mr. Hays', who briefly thanked the aeronautical head and made the presentation of the Lindbergh picture.

Among the representatives of the motion pictures were Adolph Zukor of Paramount-Famous Players-Lasky, H. M. Warner of Warner Brothers and Nicholas Schenck of United Artists.

Clement M. Keys, President of the National Air Transport, A. H. G. Fokker, head of the Fokker Aircraft Corporation, and Earl Rowland, winner of Class A in the recent trans-continental air derby.

The Government was represented by Assistant Secretary of State William R. Castle Jr., Assistant Secretary of War F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Edward P. Warner, and Assistant Secretary of Commerce William P. MacCracken Jr.

Great Britain had J. D. Scott of the British Embassy, France had M. Aubert of the French Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, and Belgium, Jean Cattier of the Belgian Embassy.

Pomeroy Is Directing "Interference"

ROY J. POMEROY, director of sound pictures for Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, is directing the spoken dialogue scenes of "Interference," at the Lasky studio this week. Clive Brook, Doris Kenyon, William Powell and Evelyn Brent enact the leading roles. Pomeroy declares that this popular stage play lends itself very well to "talkies," and that it has not been necessary to change any of the spoken lines of the original script.

Gaumont Branches Being Opened in 6 Cities

Gaumont branch offices are being opened in the six key cities of Canada, it has been announced by Edward Auger, managing director of Gaumont British Corporation of Canada, Limited, the head office of which has been established at 277 Victoria Street, Toronto. The branches will be at Toronto, Montreal, St. John, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver.

Mr. Auger has also announced that Canadian Universal will take care of the physical distribution of Gaumont features. Immediate arrangements have been made for the release of 24 features in the Dominion for the current year.

Four Seattle Houses Now Equipped With Sound Devices

FACTS and figures compiled last week in Seattle, Washington, indicate that that city is already established as one of the Pacific Coast's foremost "sound picture" cities.

Among the seven downtown key first run houses, four are already equipped with sound apparatus. These include the Fifth Avenue, Music Box, Blue Mouse and Seattle Theatres. With the exception of the latter house, all are using either Vitaphone, Movietone, or both for their programs each week. The Seattle Theatre is equipped with complete sound apparatus, but uses it for special preview purposes only at the present time.

In the neighborhood houses, the Egyptian Theatre is a constant user of Vitaphone and Movietone subjects and features. Two more downtown houses will be sound-equipped by this winter. These are Universal's Winter Garden Theatre, and Joe Danz's Embassy Theatre.

Rumors also persist to the effect that Pantages will install sound equipment to use with films in conjunction with vaudeville, although this is the only one of the installations that has not been announced as a definite fact.

George Harvey Creates New Committee at Last Week's A. M. P. A. Meeting

AT last Thursday's meeting of the A. M. P. A., George Harvey, newly elected president of the association, announced the institution of a Service Committee the object of which will be to promote A. M. P. A. membership, bringing together the right man for the right job and to unfold many other ramifications which will make it a force for coordination of service work. Don Hancock was chosen to promote the forthcoming T. N. T. dinner.

J. P. McEvoy, well known author was speaker of the day and Nellie Revell, an associate A. M. P. A. member also greeted the body. Ernest Shipman, lately returned from South America and Harold Shumate, Gotham director, were also present. Shipman spoke glowingly of film possibilities south of the Rio Grande.

Harvey explained that while the Service Committee will primarily function as an employment clearing department, the goal which it sets for itself is of far wider scope. It will also be the object of this committee to maintain complete files of records of the complete membership, to promote contacts with other trades and to establish a definite place for the supplying of high grade intelligence in the fields of advertising, exploitation, publicity and commercial art.

The complete array of officers and committees of the new year follows: George W. Harvey, President; Paul Benjamin, Vice President; Dave Bader, Secretary; Charles W. Barrell, Treasurer. Board of Directors: Bruce Gallup, Walter Eberhardt, A. L. Selig, Edward McNamee and Alex Moss; Advisory Council: P. A. Parsons, Paul Gulick and Frank Wilstack; Membership: Nopp Hadley, Chairman; Joe Fine, Julian Solomon, also the Treasurer and Secretary; Finance: President, Secretary, Treasurer and A. L. Selig; Auditing: A. P. Waxman, Hopp Hadley, Leon Bamberger; T. N. T. Dinner Committee: Don Hancock, Chairman, Jack Harrower, Leon Bamberger, Edward Klein, Lou Rydell, Tom Wiley and Hopp Hadley; Art: Theodore Jaedicker, Director, Karoly Gross and Morris Meyer; AMPA Bulletin: J. D. Trop, Editor and Joe Fine, Business Manager; National Counsellor of U. S. Chamber of Commerce: Al. Fineman; Service Committee (or Board): Walter Eberhardt, Chairman, Bruce Gallup, Jim Milligan, Lou Rydell; Publicity: Rutgers Neilson, chairman, J. D. Trop and John Level; Trustee: C. L. Yearsley; Affiliated With: The Wampas, Hollywood and The Bumpers, London.

Lasky Discusses New Paramount Product

RECENTLY arriving in New York from the Coast, Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Paramount in charge of production activities, gave voice to an enthusiastic expression of his outlook for new Paramount films. He particularly lauded "Interference," the first Paramount all-talkie, which is to follow "Wings" into the New York Criterion for an extended run.

Mention was also made by Mr. Lasky of his company's plans for production at the Astoria studio, of the pending arrival of Maurice Chevalier to star in Paramount talkies, and of new films now in work. Preparations are almost complete, he said, for the filming of "Burlesque" and "Drums of Oud," both talkies.

Jean de Limur, writer and director who will be connected with Astoria production, accompanied the Paramount executive East.

Florence Vidor Co-star With Wallace Beery

Florence Vidor will play the feature feminine part in "Tong War" opposite Wallace Beery. This will be her first screen work since her recent marriage to Jascha Heifetz. Work will commence in about three weeks under William Wellman's direction.

Indianapolis Firms File Papers of Incorporation

Articles of incorporation were filed recently with the secretary of state in Indianapolis, Indiana, by three new companies.

Harbor Amusement Company of Indiana Harbor and East Chicago, Ind., has an initial capital stock of $1,000 and is formed "for purchasing, booking and exhibiting motion pictures"; incorporators are Michael E. Kozacik, Jr., Alexander Manta, James Piwarenas, Edward Friedman.

Anderson Theatre and Hotel Company of Muncie, Ind., filed papers showing the name to have been changed to the Charles-Vern Theatre Company.

The Anderson Theatre Realty Company of Anderson, Ind., has an initial capital stock of $150,000 common and $300,000 preferred stock and is formed to acquire a 9-year lease in Anderson, Ind., and erect a theatre building there; incorporators are George S. Challis, Leslie E. Colvin, Alvin M. Strauss.

Latta, Famed for "Honest Ad," Quits Show Business

Youngelass and Latta, associated as partners in the Foxy and Grand theatres at Perry and a theatre at Woodward, Iowa, have dispose of their theatre holdings to enter the stereoscopic advertising business with headquarters at Omaha.

Latta was hailed from coast to coast as the "honest showman" as a result of an advertisement he used to warn patrons to keep away from his current show, because it was a "poor one" and save their money for some future presentation that would be more worth their time and the cost of admission.

"U" Adding 3 Episodes to "Tarzan" Serial

A genuine innovation in the serial field is embodied in an announcement from Fred J. McConnell, short subjects sales manager for Universal, that "Tarzan the Mighty," the Universal 12-chaptered serial, will be lengthened to 15 chapters. Released August 13, the serial with its additional episodes will run to include November 18. Exhibitor demands are responsible for the new chapters, Universal says.

First National Releasing 4 In October

Four feature productions are listed on the First National books as October releases. They include two dramas, a comedy and a western and are as follows: "The Crash," with Milton Sills, October 7; "Do Your Duty," starring Charlie Murray, October 14; "Companionate Marriage," featuring Betty Bronson and Alec B. Francis, October 21; "The Glorious Trail," a Ken Maynard vehicle, October 28.

Organ Recitals Okay in Blue Sunday Town

The exhibitors of Martins Ferry, Ohio, have so far been unsuccessful in forcing the closing of rival lines of business on Sundays, but that there has been let up on the blue law enforcement is noticeable in the fact that the theatres in that city can give organ recitals for which admission can be charged, at least thus far. Movies cannot be given during the day, although performances after midnight on Sunday have been staged and liberally patronized.

Lois Wilson Signed to New W. B. Contract

Lois Wilson has been signed by Warner Bros. to appear in four of their forthcoming productions.

The Voice of the Screen

News and Comment on All Phases of "Sound" Pictures

Survey Shows Stage Training Vital

90 Per Cent of Done to Date in Hands of Former Stage Players

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 23.—"Future screen stars and players will be recruited largely from the stage, and there will shortly be no place of importance for picture personalities before the camera unless they have had stage training.

This statement was made by a prominent west coast executive of the industry after he had checked up on the number of players engaged for speaking parts in dialogue pictures produced by Warner Brothers during the past year.

The facts brought out in the survey of the players cast in twenty-one "talkies" so far produced are decidedly important, not only to players and producers in the coast colony, but to all branches of the business.

If talking pictures comprise only fifty per cent of the releases made during the next five years, a large percentage of present-day stars and featured players of established box-office draw, who have not had stage experience, will find themselves facing difficult competition in the casting offices. This would mean an entire rearrangement of the structure of screen names, with the bringing forward of other screen favorites with stage experience behind them to replace many of the present players who may be unable to adapt themselves to the new vogue of talking films.

In tabulating the list of players in twenty-one dialogue pictures so far completed, it was found that there were a total of one hundred and twenty-five talking parts in this group of productions. Other characters in these pictures who had no dialogue before the camera, were disregarded in the computation. About ninety-five individual players held the one hundred and twenty-five talking parts and of this number only about nine had not had previous stage training.

Taking the Warner "talkies" as a basis, picture players will find about ninety per cent of the roles in dialogue productions going to only those players who have been before footlights, which will eliminate, in time, those who cannot, for various reasons, adjust themselves to the new condition of sight and sound production.

One of the most signal successes among players in talking pictures has been scored by Conrad Nagel, whose popularity has tremendously increased since the advent of Vitaphone. Nagel was featured by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for several years but it was not until he appeared in a number of Vitaphone productions that he became an outstanding box office name. Nagel was before the footlights for several years before jumping into pictures.

Talking pictures have changed the complexion of Hollywood. Producers have already turned to the stage for possible future screen favorites. Players who came directly to pictures without stage training are standing in line at dramatic schools to obtain instructions on the art of speaking drama. Others are seeking engagement in local stage companies on the coast for the experience and training they will be able to obtain through that medium.

Various groups of former stage players are meeting regularly two or three times a week to brush up on the technique of dialogue. Many of these have been in pictures so long they feel it will take them a little time to get back into harness. Many film favorites who are not familiar with the art of stage craft are also present at these gatherings to learn as much as they can for future talking picture use.

3,000 Theatre Installations by End of '29, Says Otterson

SIX hundred theatres have been wired by Western Electric for sound pictures: 1,000 will be wired by the end of 1928, and a total of at least 3,000 installations will have been made by the end of 1929, J. E. Otterson, President of Electrical Research Products, announced at a luncheon of the New York Electrical League, Sept. 26, at the Hotel Astor.

In studios, there are more than 60 recording equipments installed or ordered and 30 stages in process of construction. Orders for portable recording equipments total 100, with some thirty in operation here and abroad.

A number of leaders of the industry attended the luncheon, including Albert Warner, William Fox, R. H. Cochrane, Charles Christie, David Bernstein, Courtland Smith and R. F. Woodhull. A group of high officials of Western Electric and the Bell Telephone Laboratories were in attendance. After Mr. Otterson's speech, several Movietone short subjects were shown to the guests.

Lloyd Casting Players with Stage Experience

HAROLD LLOYD, in selecting his supporting cast for his new picture, is surounding himself with players of stage experience, who will be "at home" in the talkies. Charles Middleton and Noah Young have been selected as the first of the supporting cast in the latest Lloyd opus.

Nine Vitaphone Features Under Way on Warner Lot

THE success attending "The Terror" and Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool" has stimulated production at the Warner studios in Hollywood. The popularity of these pictures has made the demand for Vitaphone features heavier than ever, and Warners are rushing to completion as many talkies as possible. Studio executives and members of casts are working overtime to speed the product to exhibitors.

The Warner coast staff is now engaged on nine additional Vitaphone productions that are in various stages of work. Three of them are already in the editing rooms, among them the so-called super-special, "Noah's Ark," starring Dolores Costello. The others are "On Trial" and "Stark Mad," both 100 per cent talking pictures.

Three others are now before the cameras and microphones. Texas Guinan is working in "Queen of the Night Clubs," which is being directed by Bryant Foy. Betty Bronson and William Collier, Jr., are co-starred in "One Stolen Night," directed by Scott R. Dunlap, and Monte Blue is playing the lead in "The Greyhound Limited."

Production work is due to get under way this week on Dolores Costello's next Vitaphone feature, "Madonna of Avenue A," under the direction of Michael Curtiz, and on "Kid Gloves," in which the leads are filled by Conrad Nagel and Lois Wilson, with Archie Mayo directing.

Scheduled for production in the immediate future is "The Desert Song," Schwab and Mandel's popular operetta which has been meeting with success throughout the country. John Boles has been selected for the lead in this feature.

Fotovox to Start Production in Jersey October 1st

FOTOVOX, INC., organized some months ago to produce and distribute screen entertainment, will start active production work at their own studios in Fort Lee, New Jersey, on October 1st. For the present at least the company will produce only one and two-reel subjects. According to officials of the company these subjects will be made for reproduction by both the disc and sound-on-film methods. Fotovox will supply only the screen entertainment and will not handle any reproducing device or theatre equipment. It is planned to make fifty-two subjects a year for release one a week.

Fotovox, Inc., is backed by a group of representative business and theatrical men and has already signed quite an imposing array of talent to provide screen entertainment. Prominent among the officers and directors of the company are, Frank K. Bowers, U. S. Collector of Internal Revenue, New York City, who is vice-president of the corporation; Eddie Dowling, well known author and stage producer; Isidor P. Heller, president of Heller Bros., produce merchants; Joseph Grainsky, theatrical broker, and Louis J. Schwartz, who is general counsel and secretary-treasurer of the new company. On the directorate also are, Joseph Hannon, Deputy Fire Commissioner, and William E. Kavanaugh, Deputy Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, both of New York City. Eugene A. Lauste heads the sound engineering staff.

Among the Broadway stage and musical stars and acts already under contract according to the company announcement, are: George Jessel, Jimmy Hussey, William Sisters, Henry Santrey and his orchestra, Lola and Leota Lane, Harry and Anna Seymour, Babe Egan and her Redheads, Keller Sisters and Frank Lynch, James Carl ("Hamtree") Harrington, Helen Lynd, Four Rajahs, Baby Edna Keir, Fred Ardath and Frances Sebel.

For its sound-on-film productions Fotovox will use a new photographic recording system, and on discs it will use its own disc recording device. The first of the product of the company will be released November 15. By November 1 fifteen distributing offices will have been established in as many key cities, it is stated. These offices will be in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Chicago, St. Louis, San Francisco, Atlanta, Dallas, Los Angeles, Seattle, Minneapolis, Detroit, Milwaukee and Buffalo.

"Drums of Oude" Will Be All-Talkie

"Drums of Oude," stage hit of a dozen years ago, written by Austin Strong, author of "Seventh Heaven," has been purchased by Paramount and will be produced in Hollywood as an all-talking film. The play centers about the tribal life of India. The cast will be chosen and announced within a few days.

Metropolitan Personnel to Have Sound School

Anticipating an extremely active season in production of talking pictures with both of Western Electric's methods of sound reproduction, the disc and film, Metropolitan Studios are starting this week a school for the personnel in all departments, a plan just inaugurated by Phil H. Ryan, vice-president and manager of Metropolitan for the Christie brothers.

The school at Metropolitan will familiarize members of various departments of operation at the studios with the many phases of the making of sound and talking pictures and will be of great value, it is thought, to all employees whether they are definitely attached to any of the talking picture units or not. Executives of Western Electric and the Telephone Company will co-operate with the Metropolitan management in conducting three classes a day for the Metropolitan people in electrical and recording subjects.

Transmit Movies By Radio 500 Miles

TRANSMISSION of movies by radio from Washington, D. C., to Malden, Mass., a distance of 500 miles, has been accomplished. The pictures, shown on an inch and a half frame, were rather crude, without shading and were merely black and white shadowgraphs.

They were transmitted from the Jenkins laboratories, 1519 Connecticut avenue, to James Millen, chief engineer of the National Company at 28 Edgemere road, Malden. The experiment is said to have marked the longest distance which films have as yet been transmitted by radio. They showed a girl bouncing a ball.

John Boles Given Lead in "Desert Song"

John Boles has been selected by J. L. Warner for the lead in the first Vitaphone operetta, "The Desert Song," scheduled to go into production shortly. Boles, who has an excellent singing as well as speaking voice, won out in competitive Vitaphone tests to find a player to head the cast.

"The Desert Song" is based on Schwab and Mandel's musical romance which had a long run last season on Broadway. Its film version will be directed by Roy Del Ruth, who will work from a script by Harvey Gates. Louise Fazenda, John Miljan, Johnny Arthur and Edward Martindel have been selected for supporting roles.

3 New Features on FBO Studio Schedule

Three new features are in preparation for production at the F B O Studios, with camera work scheduled to begin at early dates. Lynn Shores is making preparations for the direction of "The Jazz Age," the cast of which will be selected immediately. George Melford is at work on the continuity of "Love in the Desert," which he will also direct. Ralph Ince will start shortly the direction of "Hardboiled," in which he will appear in a starring role. "The One Man Dog" is announced as the next production of "Ranger," F B O's dog star. Leon d'Usseau will direct.

Tiffany-Stahl to Issue "Tomorrow" as Roadshow

Tiffany-Stahl will road-show their special, "Tomorrow," with a synchronized score by Dr. Reisenfeld. A special exploitation campaign is now in the course of preparation.

"Sound Effect Cue Sheets" Development from Coast Preview

By A Staff Correspondent

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 23.—Sound effect cue sheets for the use of exhibitors who have been unable to secure sound equipment, is the latest in the way of service to the exhibitors who have been clamoring ineffectively for the immediate installation of sound reproducing devices. And this process is proving highly satisfactory, particularly as the sound effects cost only a matter of a few cents.

As the result of an experiment here, several studios, among them Universal and First National are making these sound effect cue sheets. The cue sheet is drawn up by experts in similar fashion to musical cue scoring of motion pictures, and will be sent to all theatre operators desiring it.

The Westlake Theatre in Los Angeles proved last week that sound pictures were possible in theatres not equipped or installed with any sound device. The results not only completely fooled a picture-wise audience, but held the producers in amazement. The producers had planned a silent preview and the "synchronization" effect was given as a surprise, by the theatre management.

The stunt was pulled in conjunction with the showing of "The Haunted House," a First National production. Jed Buell, manager of the Westlake, and Herbert Burland, house organist, assisted by a studio film cutter, cued the picture in a projection room prior to its public preview. The "sound effects" cost under fifty cents, requiring merely the use of a ten cent wind whistle, a board to banged on the floor for slamming door effects, and a pail of broken glass to be shaken. Other effects were secured by use of the organ, from which emanated the human shrieks and other noises required.

All of the effects were manipulated by the studio cutter and the organist. The producers were delighted with the reaction on the audience and also completely bewildered, knowing as they did, that the Westlake had not been wired.

At the conclusion of the preview both the sophisticated audience and the producers were convinced that sound effect synchronization was possible for theatres equipped with either just an organ or an orchestra. What few props are required can be manipulated by anyone at a very low cost.

Another instance of non-mechanical synchronization in Los Angeles is in "The Godless Girl," now in its fifth week at the Biltmore Theatre. Since the opening performance all effects have been secured by use of a property man back stage and the house organ.

Addison's Trailer Presentation for "Singing Fool" Wins Big Hand

COMBINING Vitaphone, organ and screen, the Great Lakes Theatre at Buffalo this week is putting on an exploitation of Al Jolson's newest talking picture, "The Singing Fool," which has the whole town talking.

The stunt starts off with an organ specialty which Carl Coleman, organist, has dubbed "Jolson-ania," featuring choruses of Jolson hits, with slides carrying the titles and a picture of Jolson accompanying each separate song. The songs run from his earliest successes through the seasons up to date, leading up to "Sonny Boy," theme song for "The Singing Fool," next week's atraction at the Great Lakes Theatre.

Flashing on to the screen comes a slide carrying the words of "Sonny Boy," with pictures of Jolson and David Lee, the youngster who plays the part in the picture. The organ stops and then comes the voice of Jolson himself, singing the song. Slides change with the music and the stunt winds up with the closing of the song.

The stunt is so good that the audiences on Sunday applauded the song—when you can get an audience to applaud exploitation of a coming picture, the ultimate has been reached. The whole presentation was devised, arranged and supervised by Managing Director H. M. Addison, to whom stunts of this sort are no new thing.

Labor Troubles Rapidly Being Adjusted

Labor difficulties are rapidly being adjusted in the few remaining parts of the country where there was a flareup a few weeks ago. Adjustments have finally been made at Harrisburg, Pa., while in Indianapolis the musicians seem to have been the principal losers.

In Loew's Regent in Harrisburg, where Vitaphone and Movietone have been in use for about a month the number of projectionists have been doubled so that there are now four. The four operators each receive $9 a week more salary than the Regent previously paid. This brings their pay to $60 a week. The musicians contract has another year to run.

In Indianapolis the contract of the musicians has another year to run. There is but one first run motion picture house in the city combining the use of presentation acts and a stage band. With synchronized pictures prevailing dozens of musicians have been let out and there is no immediate prospect of them being put back to work.

First Sound Film for Capitol, Oct. 6

THE Capitol Theatre in New York will present its first sound picture on Oct. 6. Movietone facilities are being installed and the first presentation will be "Our Dancing Daughters," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, featuring Joan Crawford.

In addition to the feature film, Van and Schenck will be seen and heard in a Metro-Movietone act. There will also be an Our Gang two-reel comedy, "The Ol' Gray Hoss," in Metro-Movietone, and a Fox Movietone News. A Chester Hale Girls ballet, as part of the stage feature, will complete the program.

Kane Names Sound Studios, Inc. Staff to Produce in East

ROBERT KANE, president of Sound Studios, Inc., has completed the organization of his staff which will produce talking pictures in the East under the RCA Photophone process. The company was recently organized by the Joseph P. Kennedy interests. In addition to the organization of the production staff, Mr. Kane also announced the appointment of Josiah Zuro, famous musical impresario, as general musical director for FBO and Pathe Sound productions.

S. E. Fitzgibbon, formerly sales promotion director at F B O, has been made studio manager. Ben Burke has been appointed production manager; George Wilson, head electrician; Joseph Clement, art director; and Jack Stricker, head carpenter. J. E. W. Seymour is assistant to Mr. Kane on stories and material for short subjects.

Mr. Kane is president of Sound Studios, Inc., with J. I. Schnitzer, senior vice-president of F B O, vice-president, and Colvin W. Brown, executive vice-president of Pathe, also vice-president. Sound Studios, Inc., are located at 134th Street and Park Avenue in New York City.

General musical director Zuro and his orchestra of 35 pieces will provide the musical synchronization for all F B O and Pathe sound productions made either at Sound Studios, Inc., in the East or in the F B O and Pathe plants in Hollywood. He has already completed musical synchronization for "King of Kings" for Pathe, and "The Perfect Crime," "Hit of the Show" and "Gang War," for F B O.

Complete equipment of RCA Photophone has been installed at Sound Studios, Inc. Sound Proofing and electrical installation has been completed and work on F B O's first all-talking production is scheduled to get under way within three weeks. Mr. Kane is now negotiating for a well known melodrama, and announcements of its purchase will be made as soon as certain clearances have been effected.

Sound Picture Reviews

By Chester J. Smith

Hollywood Montmartre Orchestra

VINCENT ROSE and Jackie Taylor, with one "B.B.B." are featured in this jazz aggregation on the Vitaphone. They are quite the rage in Hollywood, but they perform in much the same way as have all other jazz orchestras in the sound pictures. Neither Rose nor Taylor does anything more than the balance of the orchestra. "B.B.B." attempts to inject a lot of pep but it is less convincing in the picture than in a personal appearance. There are three well played numbers on their program, including "Blue River," "Monte Carlo" and "San." The act is no better nor worse than those that have gone before.

The Creole Fashion Plate

Karyl Norman, well known as a female impersonator, has a splendid Vitaphone act which should click wherever it is shown. It is nicely arranged and gives Norman every opportunity for the display of his exceptional talents. He has personality and puts his numbers over in great shape. He also displays a gown or two that adds to the effectiveness of the act. The numbers rendered are "When You're With Somebody Else," "Chloe" and "Daddy Come Home." Norman is equally good in his female impersonations and when he is using his natural voice.

Rigoletto

One of the most attraetive arguments advaneed with the advent of the sound picture was that it would bring before all of the people the opportunity to see and hear the greatest of artists at prices within reach of all. Here we have a quartet composed of Beniamino Gigli, Marion Talley, Guiseppe De Luca and Jeanne Gordon doing the quartet number from the third act of Verdi's Opera, "Rigoletto." It is splendidly recorded and reproduced with all four heard to equal advantage. It has been said of Miss Talley in the past that her voice did not reproduce well on the screen, but in this number, at least, there could be no fault found in that direction. This is a Vitaphone number that should be an attraction anywhere.

M-G-M Fixes First Releases for Movietone Acts

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER have completed a schedule of releases for the first of their Movietone acts, which will bring to the talking screen a number of prominent artists in a varied program of short subjects. There are twenty-six acts on this original talking schedule and all but three are specified as to release dates and subjects. They cover a period from the week of September 29 to November 17, inclusive.

The schedule follows:

Week of September 29; Van and Schenck, (a) "Is She the Girl Friend, (b) "Whatsa Gonna Be Next"; Johnny Marvin, (a) "You Lied I Cried," (b) "Thinking of Me Thinking of You"; Marion Harris, (a) "Afraid of You," (b) "We Love It."

Week of October 6; Walt Roesner and Capitolians, (a) "Angela Mia," (b) "More Than Satisfied"; Locust Sisters, (a) "Get Out and Get Under the Moon," (b) "My Pet"; Leo Beers, (a) "Arabella," (b) "The Travelling Man," (c) "In the Usual Way."

Week of October 13; Miller and Lyle, "The Mayor of Jimtown"; Joseph Regan, (a) "Mary Ann," (b) "Beloved"; M-G-M Movietone Review.

Week of October 20; The Ponce Sisters, (a) "Too Busy," (b) "When Katinka Shakes Her Tambourine," (c) "Mazurka"; Marion Harris, (a) "I Wonder," (b) "I'm More Than Satisfied."

Week of October 27; Van and Schenck, (a) "Cohen Is Living the Life of Reilly," (b) "I Must Have An Italian Girl"; Fuzzy Knight, (a) "Mississippi Choo Choo Train," (b) "Minnie Ha Ha"; George Dewey Washington, (a) "Chloe," (b) "Just Like a Melody Out of the Sky."

Week of November 3; Johnny Marvin, (a) "Old Man Sunshine," (b) "Heartbroken and Lonely"; Joseph Regan, (a) "I Wonder," (b) "I'll Take You Home Kathleen"; M-G-M Movietone Review.

Week of November 10; Vincent Lopez at the piano; The Ponce Sisters, (a) "Easy Going," (b) "Ukulele Daly"; Miller and Lyle, "Jimtown Cabaret" (Two Reels).

Week of November 17; Marion Harris, (a) "Rain," (b) "Down By the Old Front Gate"; George Dewey Washington, (a) "The Road to Mandalay," (b) "Lonely Little Bluebird."

Compliment to Cherry on "Sound" Broadcast

JAMES O. CHERRY, of the Melba Theatre, Dallas, has received many compliments for his novel stunt in broadcasting talking sequences of "Lights of New York" from Station WFAA during the week that picture showed at the Melba.

The Publix office has prepared letters, showing all of the clippings from the Dallas papers concerning the event and have forwarded these to all managers of the Publix theatres. This stunt brought over capacity business and is recommend by the home office as being worthy of every manager's attention. This was the first time in history that this idea had ever been attempted.

Pathe Players Given First Voice Tests

Initial voice recordings of prominent Pathe players were made on RCA Photophone on the West Coast last week on arrival from the East of Colvin W. Brown, executive vice-president. Benjamin Glazer, sound executive, conducted the tests, assisted by Horace Jackson and Scott Littleton.

Glazer directed Carol Lombard, Junior Coghlan and Robert St. Angelo in a 100 per cent talking test scene from a juvenile play, and they are reported to have registered perfectly. Later the principals of "The Leathernecks," William Boyd's next starring vehicle, were also given tests with satisfactory results.

South Sea Natives for "Changeling" Cast

Natives of the South Seas will be members of the cast of "Changeling," First National's sound picture, and the sounds of the tropics will be brought to the ears of civilization when this feature film is synchronized.

Director George Fitzmaurice, Dorothy Mackaill, the featured player, and other members of the cast will sail from San Francisco for the Hawaiian Islands and later go to the more distant islands of the Pacific, to make scenes for this story.

"Changeling" was adapted to the screen by Carey Wilson from an original story by Donn Byrne.

"Cohen and Kelly" Unit Ends Eastern Work

"The Cohens and Kellys in Atlantic City" company, making a new Universal comedy under the direction of William J. Craft at the eastern resort, having ended their work there, returned recently to Universal City, where interior and talking sequences will be made. They spent ten days at Atlantic City, held a beauty contest there, and took back with them to the coast the winner of the pulchritude show, a 16-year-old Miss named Elsie Herman.

Riesenfeld Writes "My Cavalier" Song

A theme song for Tiffany-Stahl's "The Cavalier" has been composed by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld. He has entitled it "My Cavalier" and it will be broadcast over the radio, orchestrated for dancing and also will be put out in the form of records and piano rolls. Kalmus Music Publishing Co. is handling the song. Dr. Riesenfeld has also completed the score for "The Toilers," the Tiffany-Stahl special.

Eastern Production Shows Increase

Shorts Dominate But Many Features Also Are In Preparation

WHILE the number of feature productions being made in Hollywood will not be reduced for the present at least, because of the furore over sound pictures, at the same time, a quite extensive production program is already under way in the east, with indications that every available studio will be in use in the near future. The east will probably see more production activity than at any time for the past several years, but it will be largely confined to short subjects.

With the advent of the talkies it was thought that many feature productions would be made here where the big Broadway stars were more easily available, but developments have not taken a trend in that direction yet. Those big stars who are being employed by the producing companies are either being sent to Hollywood or they are working in the shorts that are being made in and around New York.

It is likely, however, that in the near future quite a number of feature productions will be under way here. Sound Studios, Inc., a Joseph P. Kennedy project with Robert Kane at the helm has taken over the Pathe Studios with the intention of producing sound pictures of feature length from Broadway stage successes and such stories as are available.

Paramount has started production activities at the Long Island studios of the company, with Monta Bell as the production head, and while no information is available, it is said that some features with sound will be produced there as well as a large number of short subjects to be made with Broadway stars and leaders in the vaudeville field.

Universal, according to an official of the company, is still undecided as to production activities in the east, but it is said that in the comparatively near future a few features and a number of shorts will be made in an eastern studio.

M-G-M has launched an extensive production program of shorts under the direction of John W. Noble. The Fox studios are being used at present but it is expected that the company's activities will be transferred to the Cosmopolitan Studios within the next three weeks or a month. In most of the M-G-M short subjects to be made here stage celebrities are being used.

American Sound Film Productions, Inc., is the first company licensed to produce under the Phonofilm patents. They will carry on their production activities in New York, for the present confining their activities to short subjects. They expect later to go into the production of features.

Warners are preparing to carry on a very busy Vitaphone production schedule at the Vitagraph studios in Brooklyn. It is scheduled to get under way in about two weeks, though the staff, up to the present time has not been organized. Whether feature pictures will be made has not yet been determined, but many acts from Broadway will be made over in Brooklyn by Warners.

Gotham-Bristolphone has established production headquarters in Waterbury, Conn., where a full program of shorts will be produced and feature pictures synchronized. Factory, laboratory and two sound stages have been installed. Short subjects, novelties and acts will be made with sound.

Fotovox, Inc., is another sound production organization that will swell the eastern ranks with headquarters at Fort Lee, New Jersey. The company has planned a program of fifty-two sound releases a year, one a week, and according to their announcement they will produce by both the sound-on-film and disc methods.

Jack Warner Says 80 Per Cent of Silent Stars Will Succeed in Talkies

JACK L. WARNER, production chief of Warner Bros. is of the opinion that eighty per cent of the picture stars who rose to stardom with the silent movies will survive when they are heard as well as seen.

Discussing this phase of Vitaphone production, Mr. Warner says:

"It has been our observation that practically all of our players who signed contracts before we undertook the production of Vitaphone pictures acquitted themselves satisfactorily when they were assigned their first speaking parts. I do not consider that stage training is at all an essential for an actor or actress to succeed before the Vitaphone. The only obstacle to be surmounted is to gain ease in front of the Microphone and most players do not find this difficult after a short time.

"Most of the parts in Vitaphone pictures have been filled, and will continue to be filled, by artists who have received their principal training in the studio rather than in the theatre."

Colony Re-opening Sunday, Sept. 30

THE Colony, Universal Broadway house, which has been closed for some time, reopens on Sunday, September 30th, with the first Universal talkie, "Lonesome." This picture has a musical synchronization, sound effects and dialogue. Carl Laemmle, Jr., considers the premiere of "Lonesome" so important that he has traveled from the coast in order to attend the showing on Sunday. Dr. Fejos, who directed it, will also be present at the showing, which marks the beginning of the Universal sound program.

Harry Reichenbach will handle the publicity for the Colony premiere. There will be an invited gathering at the premiere, but the bulk of the audience will be drawn from the average movie goer. Ben Bernie and his orchestra have been engaged for the "Lonesome"' run and succeeding pictures.

George Jessel in Tiffany-Stahl Sound Picture

George Jessel, star of Tiffany-Stahl's "The Ghetto," will be heard in several songs which are dramatic incidents in the production. The score is now being arranged by Dr. Hugo Reisenfeld.

Kaufman Sound Producer for Paramount

Albert A. Kaufman has been appointed associate producer of sound pictures at the Paramount Hollywood studio. This is in addition to his duties as assistant to Jesse L. Lasky.

Kaufman has had wide experience in the film field, having served in executive positions in virtually all branches of picture-making and distribution since the pioneer days of the business.

Increased facilities for the production of sound pictures will be available upon the completion of the four new sound stages now under construction at the Hollywood studios. The present sound stage, where Roy J. Pomeroy is directing Paramount's first all-talking picture, "Interference," is now in operation day and night.

No Cutting of "Extras", Says Schulberg

Refuting circulated reports that sound pictures would materially lessen the call for motion picture extras, B. P. Schulberg, general manager of west coast production for Paramount, declares there will be plenty of employment at the studios for the extra. He says their employment is dependent on the type of picture being made regardless of whether it is silent or in sound.

"Insofar as the Paramount organization is concerned," said Mr. Schulberg, "there will be no curtailment of extra employment at our studio because of synchronization.

"Four Feathers" Will Be Sound Picture

"THE FOUR FEATHERS" will be a sound picture! The production which took Ernest Schoedsack and Merian Cooper on a year's filming expedition in the heart of the British Soudan and on which studio work has just started, will utilize the complete facilities of the sound stages and equipment at the Paramount plant in Hollywood, according to an announcement by B. P. Schulberg.

The natural sounds of jungle life, the cries of savages on the warpath, and the roars of wild beasts in the African wilderness will be among the audible features of this screen drama being made by the producers of "Grass" and "Chang." Included in the cast are Richard Arlen, Clive Brook, Fay Wray, Noah Beery, Noble Johnson and Arnold Kent.

Opinions on Pictures

The Singing Fool

A Great Box-Office Film—Sure Fire

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE'S nothing to it but counting up the profits for the exhibitor who has Al Jolson's picture, "The Singing Fool," scheduled for appearance. It sure is a box-office attraction—one starring the most popular stage personality of the day. Al showed what he could do with "The Jazz Singer." The present film is cut from a similar design in that it gives the star a goodly supply of songs to sing in his own inimitable manner and also affords him an opportunity to demonstrate a convincing emotional talent.

As a singing waiter in a cafe—who writes songs and is ambitious to succeed he starts off on the right foot in a colorful role. The story may be a trifle thin, but no one will complain since it projects Jolson all of the way. Al falls in love and marries a fair songbird in the place, but she gets ambitious and leaves him. So seeking solace he turns back to the cafe after leaving it for bigger and better things. He discovers a cheek girl and they develop an understanding for each other. In the meanwhile Jolson is having a heavy emotional time with his little boy—and when the youngster dies Al goes the limit and has the audience crying. He puts over his songs with fine spirit and rhythm—the recording being well-nigh perfect. And the song theme, "Sonny Boy," is a gem of a number for stimulating the tear ducts.

Altogether "The Singing Fool" is a wow of a picture, certain in its appeal and a genuine money-maker. It will draw the crowds. Jolson is the best singing bet on the stage. He is the best singing bet in the pictures. And what he is doing to help Vitaphone along is nobody's business. The cast is efficient, Josephine Dunn, Betty Bronson and little Davey Lee contributing worth-while performances.

Drawing Power: Jolson's name. The Vitaphone song numbers. The human appeal. Good for any type of house anywhere. Exploitation Angles: Play up Jolson to the limit. Feature the songs. Feature the human angle. Bill as story of comedian's broken heart.

THEME: Story of mismated marriage with comedian who laughs while his heart is breaking.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers. Length, 9,552 feet. Cast: Al Jolson, Josephine Dunn, Betty Bronson, Edward Martindel, Arthur Housman, David Lee, Robert O'Connor, Reed Howes. Director, Lloyd Bacon.

Beggars of Life

Morbid But Robust—Good Entertainment

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT took a robust, morbid story to bring Wallace Beery back into his glory after floundering around for a season or two in half-baked comedy. Here is one of the screen's best character actors and good comedian that he is, still no one will deny that the "heavier-than-humor" stuff is his meat.

Jim Tully's story has an earthy odor about it—and swings along with he-mannish strides. It spins its yarn with good gusto, telling about a girl who protects her honor with a shotgun and who is befriended by a hobo. The action shows the tramp guiding the girl through all sorts of adventures, some of which are embroidered with skeins of comedy. The freight-car incident is a humdinger.

The picture has depth of plot, well defined characterization and is interesting despite its heavy tread. Wallace Beery is great as the hobo and the others fit their roles satisfactorily.

Drawing Power: Popularity of story and fame of anthor. Featuring Beery will bring them. Suitable for all types of houses. Exploitation Angles: Play up title and tell that it is adaptation of successful author's story. Feature Wallace Beery who is back in serious drama again—where he belongs.

THEME: Adventures of hobo who befriends girl.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Length, six reels. Released, September 15, 1928. Cast: Wallace Beery, Louise Brooks, Richard Arlen, Mike Donlin, Roscoe Karns, Robert Perry, George Kotsonaros, Robert Brower, Frank Brownlee, Edgar Blue Washington. Director, William Wellman.

"Motor Boat Mamas"

(Pathe-Sennett—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

BILLY BEVAN and Vernon Dent, both capable funsters, have a glorious time in this merry two-reeler, which has to do with "mamas," motorboats, a mother-in-law and a family fracas. It is not first rate comedy, but ever so often it bobs up with something genuinely funny—spontaneous humor very deftly directed and portrayed. As is always the case with a Sennett production there are pretty feminine attractions, this time Carmelita Geraghty and Alma Bennett. When Vernon Dent sees these two, he forgets his marital troubles and proceeds to cut up with Bevan on board the latter's yacht bound for Catalina. Their joyousness is rudely interrupted when his mother-in-law and wife arrive unexpectedly on another ship and are rowed over to Bevan's.

Dent is forced to blacken his features and impersonate a colored cook, but the suspicious mother-in-law discovers the ruse and catastrophe follows in the wake of the in-law's tirades.

Yes, it is a good piece of laugh material and a lot of chuckles are incorporated into its scenes.

Pathe Review No. 41

(Pathe—One Reel)

PATHE REVIEW is a nicely balanced entertainment this week, being made up of scenes of Reno, Colorado, the haven of unhappily married couples; "Fiji Trousseaux," which views Fiji women preparing a trousseau for a bride-to-be; and "Imported Art," setting forth the rhythms of Myria, Desha and Barte interpreting "The Rhapsody in Blue" with a dance venture.

Enjoyable and diversified. — RAYMOND GANLY.

Plastered in Paris

Hodge-Podge of Comedy—Not So Funny

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

COMEDIES of doughboys (ex-service or out) are not so humorous nowadays for the simple reason they have been ground in celluloid for a long time. And everyone will admit the idea is not so hot. This particular comedy exploits Sammy Cohen, who made such a good impression as a funmaker in "What Price Glory." In that opus his high jinks were more spontaneous, more lively—and more in harmony with the goings-on. In this particular manufactured piece the comedy is labored. And it misses fire when it should be clicking.

This one tells the tale of two doughboys (veterans) who return to France and get into complications with the Foreign Legion. Their adventures take them to the desert where they cut up a series of didoes and get into one jam after another.

The scenes have all been recorded in celluloid before. So it doesn't ring up much suspense. It takes seven reels for Cohen to do his stuff—some of which carries a laugh. For the most part the comedy carries the burden of being of ancient vintage—and Cohen is not the comedian who can hold one in a tight embrace for so long a period. He is what you might call a "bit" comedian, ushering in laughs to break up romantic and dramatic interludes. Out on his own he is not so funny.

Drawing Power: O. K. for average houses. Title may draw in certain localities. Exploitation Angles: Go after the Legion posts, etc. Play up Cohen who flashed his fun in "What Price Glory." Bill as the adventures of doughboys in Paris.

THEME: The adventures of a couple of war veterans who return to Paris for the American Legion Convention and get involved with the Foreign Legion.

Produced and distributed by Fox. Length, six reels. Released, September 23, 1928. Cast: Sammy Cohen, Jack Pennick, Ivan Linow, Hugh Allen, Marcia Byron, Michael Visaroff, Albert Conti.

"Our World Today"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is the second issue of Educational's new screen magazine, similar in style to other screen magazines. There is an individual tone and although the subjects are not new, they are interesting and are presented with a nicety of caption. In the case of the first subject of this issue, entitled "Thrills of the Sea," a poem describing the moods of the sea, its power and fury and ever-changing nuances fit nicely into the spirit of the pictures. The second subject deals intimately with Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, famous society figure and sculptor, who is shown working in her studio. The third and final offering of the Educational magazine deals with the wild horse ranch of Eddie McCarthy. The wild stallions are shown roaming the ranch and bucking fiercely cowboys who dare to mount them. An interesting novelty in connection with this sequence is had in a camera record of the bouncings a rider receives atop a wild horse.—RAYMOND GANLY.

Excess Baggage

Shapes Up Fairly Well

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE film verson of a vaudevillian's ups and downs is tolerably entertaining. It was much better as stage entertainment for the simple reason that its gaps were filled with better "business." Here William Haines is allowed too much liberty. He ad libs all over the place. He indulges in too much slapstick before the plot settles down and permits him to be a real character.

But there is good stuff in this story of a tightrope walker who effaces himself from "big time" opportunities that his wife may bask in the light of the Kliegs. So you have the triangle situation confronting you—and displayed in its simplest form. A male vamp is the other man who does the luring and leering. Eventually he oversteps the boundary of good manners and is quickly checked out by the wife who returns to her husband when his confidence is restored.

The picture's climax is before you at the start. But it holds your interest, once the slapstick of the early scenes is over. Haines is not wistful enough for the role of the outraged husband. It takes more of a laughing-crying clown for such a story. It carries first rate atmosphere, the high spot being the slide for life in the vaudeville act. Ricardo Cortez is the other man and his work calls for little else than to roam on and off the sets and make eyes. Josephine Dunn is the girl.

Drawing Power: Haines' popularity should attract them. Also fact that it was a Broadway hit. Exploitation Angles: Feature title with teasers. Bill as scenes in life of vaudeville trouper. Suitable for all types of houses.

THEME: Triangle of film star who lures vaudeville trouper's wife away from him. She returns to husband and helps him make good.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Length, seven reels. Released, September 8, 1928. Cast: William Haines, Josephine Dunn, Ricardo Cortez, Neely Edwards, Cyril Chadwick, Kathleen Clifford, Greta Granstedt. Director, James Cruze.

Son of the Golden West

A Typical Mixian Sizzler

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

IF there is anyone in the western field who knows how to play the part of the dashing cowboy hero, it's Tom Mix, seen here in a whooping, whirlwind western, which gallops along at a hot pace, has all the necessary embellishments and is a good picture of its kind.

Tom doesn't have to act. All he has to do is ride a horse, effect a thrilling rescue, pulverize the villains. You can bet he does all this, accomplishing it in typical Mixian fashion. This cowboy veteran knows how to go through his paces with gusto and to carry any weak moments that may come along. There are a few of the latter that stand out in this production, but they are few and the good points are far in the majority. Yes, you can say that this western comes home with a bang. A custom of Mr. Mix for a long, long time.

Drawing Power: Good box office fare, with a blazing name that means a lot to the fans. Exploitation Angles: The star, Tony and Mix' great fame; the story which deals with Pony Express riders, the action; the militia, who also figure in the story.

THEME: Western drama telling of Pony Express rider's successful fight against lawless element, who are anxious to hold up the establishment of the telegraph. The Pony Express rider obtains the help of the militia, invades the stronghold of the villains, rescues his girl and lives happily ever afterwards with her.

Produced and distributed by F B O. To be released, October 1, 1928. Length, 6037 feet. The Cast: Tom Mix, Sharon Lynn, Tom Lingham, Duke R. Lee, Lee Shumway, Fritzi Ridgeway, Joie Ray, Mark Hamilton, Wynn Mace. Story and continuity, George W. Byper. Cameraman, Norman Devol. Assistant Director, Charles Kerr. Director, Eugene Forde. Titles, Randolph Bartlett. Film Editor, Henry Weber.

The Sunset Legion

High Grade Western

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THIS Fred Thomson western is a good one. Much better acting than the average cowboy opera boasts and much faster action, too. Also a well knit story, a "lazybones" characterization by Fred, a peach of a fight for the climax and, of course, the tenuous thread of romance woven into the whole. Enough good points to demand the rating of good.

Fred gives his idea of how a captain of the rangers would go about getting evidence to discover the depredations of outlaws who are terrorizing the peaceful townsfolk. In his search for clues, he meets pretty Edna Murphy but as he has adopted the part of a shiftless character while investigating, she regards him with near contempt. This attitude is completely reversed when Fred drops his disguise and becomes a whirlwind of action, saving her father from the desperate crew and capturing the chief evil doer.

Harry Woods is excellent as the villain and the others are good types.

Drawing Power: A good number for the western crowd. Exploitation Angles: Exploit the star, his horse, Miss Murphy and the good story. Several situations in the picture lend themselves to the ballyhoo.

THEME: Cowboy drama. Captain of the rangers assumes the disguise of a loafer to "get the goods" on a gang of outlaws. While maneuvering with the enemy, he meets and falls for a girl. She, however, thinks he's a ne'er-do-well. When he annihilates the bandit gang and saves her father's life and reveals himself in his true light she does a right about face and weds him.

Produced and Distributed by Paramount. Released, ———, 1928. Length, —— feet. The Cast: Fred Thomson, Edna Murphy, Harry Woods, William Courtright. Story, Frank F. Clifton. Directors, Lloyd Ingraham and Alfred L. Werker.

"Bull-oney"

(Universal—One Reel)

THIS cartoon presents Oswald, the capering rabbit, in another of his adventures—this time as a bull fighter. The action is fast, there are plenty of laughable incidents and the cartoon work is capably accomplished.

The highlight is Oswald's unique method of massaging the bull in order to rid him of his superfluous flesh and get him in readiness for the bull ring show.

A snappy cartoon. Lantz and Palmer are credited with the cartoon work. They did a good job.—RAYMOND GANLY.

The Vanishing Pioneer

Good Western

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A HANDSOMELY produced western which is satisfying in every way except for a weak story. It starts off grandly and for the first reel or so is impressive, but then the structure of the story begins to crumble and interest lags when old situations, seen time and time again in westerns, pop up and work into a very ordinary climax. On the other hand, there are Jack Holt, William Powell and Fred Kohler to entertain with some realistic acting. They balance the story shortcomings and make of the picture appropriate western provender.

The trials and struggles of the early pioneers in their search for lands made rich and fertile by water are portrayed in the first few scenes. The time then changes to the present when their descendants continue the battle for water. Jack Holt appears as an inflamed townsman, urging his fellow citizens to retain their water supply. There are villains from a neighboring town after the water. The villains lose out and the picturing of the struggle makes a suitable entertainment. The titles are only fair.

Drawing Power: Okay as western fare. Exploitation Angles: Publicize Holt and Zane Grey, author of the story.

THEME: Western drama. Western town is threatened with the loss of their water supply through the encroachments of nearby city-folk. They are led to defend their rights by leading townsman and rout the trouble makers.

Produced and Distributed by Paramount. The Cast: Jack Holt, Sally Blane, Fred Kohler, William Powell, Guy Oliver, Roscoe Karns, Tim Holt, Marcia Manon. Story, Zane Grey. Adaptors, John Goodrich and Ray Harris. Scenario, J. Walter Ruben. Cameraman, C. Edgar Schoenbaum. Director, John Waters.

"Horsefeathers"

(F B O—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

BARNEY GOOGLE'S in the movies now keeping company with Spark Plug, Sunshine and Rudy. Their funny sheet antics are not so hot when perused in celluloid, magnified as they are and projected on a screen. Crude humor, gag repetition, flat titles and forced comedy are some of the handicaps that trip them up in this, their first screen vehicle. The comedy is juvenile fare, but should benefit from the cartoon's popularity.

Barney and his menagerie have a few capers to cut when they board a Pullman and Barney conceals them in his berth. The conductor has his suspicions and Barney ultimately seeks refuge on the rails underneath the car. The comedy is quite spiritless and is not smoothly put together.

"Mickey's Movies"

(F B O—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

MICKEY McGUIRE and his gang chase a motion picture producing unit and take possession of their cameras to screen a picture of their own. The comedy is very childish and at a children's matinee should go over great. It will not give the adults any great laughs but they will view the efforts of the kid performers with amusement and leniency for any shortcomings.

Mickey and his kids, after driving out the film troupe, begin the filming of one of Mickey's own stories, Mickey presiding over the megaphone, flying into rages over the acting and carrying on like a temperamental director.

Tillie's Punctured Romance

Nothing Marvelous, But Funny

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THE old dame still has a lot of life in her. With the capable staff of Christie comedy constructors, a new cast of frolic adepts, and general goofiness everywhere—this new Tillie is an attractor for laughs. Louise Fazenda, Chester Conklin, Mack Swain and W. C. Fields form a quartet who are always cutting up. They have a lot of gags to play around with.

The story doesn't obey any of the rules of logic. It is merrily crazy and has an ending which can be met with any time in the one-reel "quickie" comedies turned out by the various studios. But, it is obvious, that everything is in good fun and seriousness would seem out of place in the burlesque of events.

So, don't look for logic. Some will undoubtedly regard it as silly. Undoubtedly it is. But it is funny, nevertheless.

Drawing Power: Perhaps this one is a trifle too goofy for the first runs, but it should result in gales of merriment at the neighborhoods. Exploitation Angles: Play up the cast, particularly Miss Fazenda. Let the public know that it is a revamped version of the old Tillie. Some excellent ideas are to be had in the press book.

THEME: Comedy burlesque of Tillie and her adventures in the circus and at the front.

Produced by the Christie Studio. Distributed by Paramount. The Cast: W. C. Fields, Chester Conklin, Louise Fazenda, Mack Swain, Doris Hill, Grant Withers, Tom Kennedy, Babe London, Kalla Pasha, Billy Platt, Mickey Bennett, Mike Rafetto, Baron von Dobeneck. Cameramen, Charles Boyle and Wm. Wheeler. Scenarists, Monte Brice and Keene Thompson. Director, Edward Sutherland.

"Felix the Cat in the Last Life"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is the last Felix on the Educational program and appropriately it is called "The Last Life." As it ends happily for Felix, the writer hopes that so, too, will the cat's present difficulties come to a pleasing end and that he will soon again find a place among the current releases. While "The Last Life" is not up to the high level of other Felix cartoons, it is a good example of ingenuity in this form, nevertheless. It tells of Felix' love for a female, who spurns him because he does not woo her with an airplane. Felix buys a plane, gets his nine lives insured, and then commences to lose all of them but one in various accidents. The tale winds up with Felix collecting on the eight lost lives and prevailing on his sweetie to spend the remainder of their existence together.

The cat makes his exit, perhaps but temporarily. At least, the writer hopes that "The Last Life" is not his swan song.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"School Begins"

(M-G-M-Roach—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THIS is one that'll please 'em all.

"Our Gang," vacation time over, returns to school and everyone will sympathize with the lack of zeal they show, how reluctant they are to pass up the ole swimming hole, the circus, the fishing and the other myriad temptations with which they are beset.

The kids are assembled finally in school, after an unpleasant experience for Joe Cobb, who tried to get leave of absence by forging a note from his mother. Class becomes a rough house when some seals escape from the circus and visit the school house. This sequence, and as a matter of fact, all that precedes it, is good.

"No Picnic"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

SIT up and take notice, exhibitors, for this "Smitty" comedy, the first of the series, is what the trade technically designates as a "wow." Anyone parading the rounds of the various distributors of short subjects does not come across comedies of the calibre of this one every day in the week. It is "extra good" and, if a consensus were in order on the ten best comedies released within the last six or ten months. "No Picnic" would easily be one of the leaders. It is exceptionally lively and "gaggy." The gags, be it known, are dispensed with amazing freedom and, although they are not all new, they are so numerous that they pep up the story and keep it humming. The story, by the way, is also nicely constructed and doesn't lag once.

Donald Haines has the title role in the "Smitty" series, but he has a gifted little rival for first honors in the person of little Jackie Combs, a kid who was tremendously effective in "Square Crooks." Smitty's mother and dad are played by Joseph Belmont and Maude Truex and other support in minor roles comes from Roy Saeger as Smitty's boss and Robert Perry as a tough. And all of these players do good work.

But there is another personality in this comedy, whose presence strengthens the comedy to a marvelous extent. He is none other than fistiana's "gold mine," Jack Dempsey, looking very pleasant in his role of Smitty's friend. Ask Tex Rickard as to this boy's strength at the box-office.

Again we repeat this laugh two-reeler is considerably above the average short vehicle. Amedee J. Van Beuren, Harry Weber, George Marshall, James J. Lyman, and everyone else ought to be congratulated because of its quality.

"Hot Luck"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

"BIG BOY," Educational's youngest and most popular star, has a good vehicle, well decorated with laughs, in this new Juvenile offering. Again little Lorraine Rivero is cast as his little leading lady and again Charles Lamont has directed the boy in such a way as to bring out his strong and winsome appeal.

The scenes are laid in a fire house, into which "Big Boy" is smuggled. Billy Sullivan, one of the firemen and his father, tries to keep his presence in the station unknown to the fire chief. The knowledge that the boy is at large in his station and defying the edict that no children are to tread on his sacred precincts arouses the captain to corner him, but all the firemen do their best to hide him.

There are many opportunities for laughter in the presence of a dog, an adept in varied expressions. The dog unwittingly catches fleas and brings them with him to the station house. Situations embarrassing for the firemen and their chief develop with the visit of the fire commissioner and his wife to the flea-ridden station house.

There are other comical tid-bits in which "Big Boy" figures. The comedy, on the whole, is a good piece of work.

"Curiosities No. 1"

(F B O—One Reel)

YOU can take this one as a satisfactory tid-bit as it is just crammed with novel little items. Interesting, to say the least.

The subjects are not old and the way they have been presented with good captions, a snappy layout, and a general aura of pep make it attractive. This is the first of the Walter Futter Curiosities F B O is releasing. If all of them shape up as well as this does, then everything will be jake for all hands.

The job of editing and titling was taken care of by Merritt Crawford. Presented in conjunction with a quartet of comedies in the F B O projection room, this Curiosities was the best thing on the program.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Call Your Shots"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

AL ST. JOHN, veteran funmaker, is the star of this Mermaid comedy which was directed by Stephen Roberts, photographed by Dwight Warren, and played by Glen Cavender, Estelle Bradley, Otto Fries and Eva Thatcher.

It is not an extremely funny piece of work. St. John has had better material with which to work before and again the sutiations and gags employed could certainly be improved upon. Most of them are old and this circumstance accounts to no little extent for the tepidity of the laughs.

Like Charlie Chaplin's "Easy Street," this comedy shows the neighborhood of the roughnecks where a man must be rough and tough to retain a vertical posture. Al, an author in disguise on the lookout for story material, becomes the center of interest for a gang of crooks who regard him as a new recruit. Unwittingly kidnapping Estelle Bradley, he discovers his error and escapes with her from the gang's lair.

At this point the comedy is chiefly centered on the antics of a freak auto, which holds up traffic and jumps crazily all over the place. Then the comedy switches to the old, old gag of having the different actors hang perilously on the edge of a tall building. It seems that whenever gagmen are at a loss as to what to do in a comedy, they introduce these high building scenes. Their novelty has worn off with their constant repetition.

"The Newlyweds' Court Trouble"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THEY'VE put about everything into this one in an attempt to cull the laughs, but the gags are stale and unbelievably old. They are poor imitations of material from other and better comedies. Lots of repetition, punk humor from everyone in the cast except the kid. "Snookums," and a lot of flips and falls, pie-throwing and other twaddle that get the comedy nowhere. This Newlywed is an unappealing mixture of ancient celluloid puns. There is little in it to recommend.

Snookums and a monkey cause so much trouble to their neighbors that the Newlyweds are haled to court. But in court, the kid touches the judge's heart and the family gets off scot-free. If "Snookums" were not talented, this comedy would not have a bright spot in it.

"The Defensive Halfback"

(Pathe—One Reel)

"CHICK" MEEHAN inaugurates his second series of "Football Sense" with a very interesting and educational lesson in film form of the intricacies of the backs' maneuverings in the great game of football. Slow motion scenes enable you to see their skilful work in detail, the discourse being all the more simple to follow because of Meehan's plan of garbing the backs in white. This "Football Sense" is a dandy series for autumn bookings, when football is in the air and is the topic of conversation for thousands in the home, in the office, in the street and everywhere.

A good short for any program—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Fooling Casper"

(F B O—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

F B O's first of the "Toots and Casper" comedies, "Fooling Casper," co-starring Bud Duncan and Thelma Hill, offers some rough and ready humor and scores a batch of laughs by dint of having a burden of trouble fall on the shoulders of poor Casper. They are going on their second honeymoon when their wealthy uncle arrives and is invited by Casper to join them on the trip. Every sort of trouble imaginable makes the journey miserable for the party, the climax breaking when they are drenched by a downpour.

Key City Reports

New York City

EVERYTHING was O. K. along New York's Main street last week, no manager having enough of a fall in receipts to howl about. One evening during the middle of the week, the tail of the tropical hurricane wound itself around the town's skyscrapers and that together with a heavy downfall of rain may have kept some of the folk in doors, but taking all into consideration, things were not at all bad. Of course, the highlight of the week was the premiere of Warner's "Singing Fool" at the Winter Garden. Trade Press and the local newspaper reviewers of pictures gave this latest Jolson talkie the breaks it deserved. The boys really had an opportunity to give all their treasured adjectives an airing. The picture is reported to have plenty of advance sales and what could be a sweeter radiogram for Mr. Jolson to receive while en route to Europe with his bride, the former Ruby Keeler, than this good news.

The Paramount climbed back in strong money with Bancroft in "Docks of New York" (Par) doing one of its best weeks. "Underworld" gave Bancroft a heavy draw in this town but in addition to his pulling power, the picture is rated as a good one. Up at the Roxy another picture of New York's water front held forth, "The River Pirate" (Fox) from Charlie Coe's story, which ran in the Satevepost. Another good picture and another good week for Mr. Rothafel. No doubt about this big house paying its way during recent weeks.

The Strand also chalked up a week's returns entirely consistent with the showing this house has been making of late. First National's "The Whip" was the feature. Next week looks like a good one here, too, when Warner's "Lion and Mouse" arrives for a week—or so. Jannings' "Patriot" (Par) at the Rialto continues to make money while up at the Rivoli "Tempest" (U.A.) concluded a prosperous run. "Two Lovers" (U.A.) followed. Most every one attending the Capitol, where Buster Keaton's "Cameraman" was showing, was pleased and a strong gate testified to word of mouth advertising. Sound wiring will soon be completed at this house. The Cameo had a stranger called "Q Ships" and it did the usual business at this small house.

Sound pictures predominate at the higher priced theatres and they continue to gather in the coin. There are only two of the specials at the present time which can be classed as "silents." One, Columbia's "Submarine" at the Embassy, is demonstrating that a good silent can also be in the important money. This picture has been doing exceedingly well. "Wings," the other one in this classification, can scarcely be called a silent any more since the Pomeroy sound effects were introduced some time ago. Paramount's aviation special shows no real signs of weakening. A little up, a little down each week and all the time striking a good average. No doubt this one can be kept at this small house for some time to come.

M-G-M's "White Shadows" didn't have enough of a drop to hurt it one bit although the attendance was slightly under previous weeks. This one has set a smart pace from the start and the drop was nothing more than the ups and downs of show business. First National's "Lilac Time" also continues to show well at the Central after a two months' stay. The theme song of this picture is getting a great play over the radio and other mediums and this is good stimulation.

Fox's two new sound pictures, "Air Circus" at the Gaiety and "Mother Knows Best" at the Globe, are going at a fair pace. Warner's "Terror" is still getting a very good play at Warner's.

Portland, Ore.

BUSINESS in practically all of the downtown houses was of the record-breaking kind and the various box offices were swelled to overflowing, and more than made up for some forgotten weeks in the past. This was especially true at The Broadway, which showed "Wings" to upwards of 40,000 for the week, which included the first show at 9.30 A. M. each day, and packed them in until after 10 P. M. at night.

"Steamboat Bill, Jr.," also kept large audiences in good humor at The Portland. On the stage Fanchon & Marco offered a futuristic idea "Mars Idea," which helped out.

J. J. Parker's United Artists Theatre (formerly Majestic) at the opening showed a wonderfully transformed house, in which was set for the opening "Two Lovers," and brought out a record house.

"The Rat of the Paris Underworld" had its first showing at The Peoples Theatre, a weird offering offset by Chester Conklin in "The Big Noise." At the adjoining chain house, Rivoli, showed "Ramona" as a return offering to fair business.

"The Grain of Dust" brought in fair business at The Oriental, accompanied as usual by Josef Srodka and his orchestra and Glenn Shelley, an outstanding Wurlitzer exponent.

Mae Murray, was the headliner at Pantages, and had no trouble in engendering happiness in capacity audiences. On the screen Reginald Denny in "The Night Bird" proved one of the best offerings yet seen here starring this actor.

With the bulk attendance of several lodges The Capitol Theatre also did a nice week's business with Clara Bow in "My Lady of Whims" and "Lingerie," their usual excellent double bill.

"The Big Killing" at Columbia as given by the famous comedians Hatton and Beery, proved popular entertainment and the box office also did considerable "killing" also.

Oklahoma City

OKLAHOMA CITY theatres enjoyed a very brisk and encouraging week. Business was especially lively in the downtown theatres. This is no doubt due to the change in weather.

The Capitol did unusually well with "Wings," which is to run for an indefinite engagement.

The Criterion enjoyed a good first half week business with M-G-M's "Excess Baggage," but a change in policy of the Criterion brought "The Best People" presented by a stock company. The feature picture was "The Fleet's In" with Clara Bow at the helm.

"The Man Who Laughs" enjoyed excellent business at the Liberty.

"Craig's Wife" also did well at the Empress. The Orpheum had a good show all week with its five acts of vaudeville and on the screen "The Chorus Kid.

San Francisco

EXTREME warm weather for three days and an Admission Day holiday last Monday, did not help business. Both down town first run theatres and residential and district motion picture houses were effected by the week's condition. However, many of the managers did much better than they contemplated.

The third week of "The Patriot," shown at the California Theatre, was, by many considered better than the second week, due to the fact that many told their friends about the picture. The Embassy Theatre reported very good business, considering conditions of holiday and weather, with "The Grain of Dust," together with the presentation. Embassy continued to report good business with "The Terror."

The dramatic expedition, "Simba," shown at the Columbia Theatre at advanced prices did very well the first week. The Union Square did fairly well with, "Skinner's Big Idea" and vaudeville.

"The King of Kings" shown at the St. Francis Theatre did not do well the second week in spite of the fact that it was produced at popular prices. The Granada Theatre reported fair business with "The Mating Call," together with a Publix Revue. "The Night Watch," while not considered as good as many of the pictures the Loew's Warfield has been showing pleased, however.

In the residential districts, the new Marina Theatre, just completed by Barron & Nathan, reported excellent business with "A Night of Mystery," as did The Alexandria with "The Garden of Eden" and the Coliseum with "Burning Daylight."

Ottawa

THERE was plenty of excitement in moving picture theatre circles during the week of September 17. The film attractions were popular and, on top of this, a rainy spell practically drove people to the "halls."

The big treat of the week was "Four Walls," at the Regent. Attendance was much better than for "Fazil" of the previous week.

Another good one, judging by crowds and comment, was "The Magnificent Flirt" at B. F. Keith's Theatre. Patrons did not rave about this production but they called it "good."

Regulars at the Imperial Theatre had a feature to their liking in "The Racket," starring Thomas Meighan. Night patronage was substantial for this one but the matinees were light.

"The Strange Case of Captain Ramper" was the head-liner at the Centre Theatre and the result was only fair.

The Rex had a paying attraction in "Red Hair" during the first three days but the kids were out in force for "Casey Jones," during the last half.

"The Noose" was a substantial attraction at the Fern but there was a stand-out during the last half for "Wyoming." Particular attention is given to short subjects by Manager Robertson with excellent results.

The Columbia catered to adults with "The Love Mart" for three days and registered well at the box office but "In Old Kentucky" went better during the last half.

Cleveland

THE local downtown theatres are now enjoying their seven years of prosperity. Big business continues to be the order of the day. The new pictures, sound pictures, and an urge for amusement combine to make this a gala season for the first-run theatres.

"White Shadows in the South Sea" opened at the Stillman last Sunday to as big business as greeted the opening of "The Big Parade." This picture kept up the high mark with which it started its local engagement, and is being held over for a continued run.

"The Patriot" the current attraction at the Allen, was hard on reviewers. It was unanimously praised with all the super adjectives known, as the finest picture made by Emil Jannings, Lewis Stone, Florence Vidor and Director Lubitsch. It did tremendous business.

"The Lights of New York" the first all-talkie picture, broke the house records at the State. Crowds jammed into the theatre all day and all evening.

"Women They Talk About," a timely political picture, with occasional talking sequences, was sufficiently well liked to bring a good week's average at the Cameo.

"Man-Made Woman" and "Buck Privates" divided the week's honors at Keith's East 105th St., with the balance in favor of "Buck Privates."

The Park had a good week. Both "Speedy" and "Out of the Ruins" made good showings.

Neighborhood house business is picking up slightly with the cooler and longer evenings, but is still below normal.

Seattle

NONE of the film attractions during the last week were particularly outstanding, and business as a result was about equally divided among the leading first run houses. At the Fifth Avenue Theatre, Clara Bow was the attraction in "The Fleet's In" but the film was noticeably below the usual average of this star and played to moderately good business only, instead of the usual packed houses.

At the Seattle Theatre, "The Cardboard Lover" was not up to the previous Marion Davies attractions, and business was just fair because this star is difficult to put over in this city at her best. Fanchon-Marco's "Hi Yaller Idea" on the stage featured an all-colored revue.

"Women They Talk About" played its second and final week at Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre to very pleasing business, although the gross was quite noticeably lower than the second week on previous pictures. The fourteen day total was more than satisfactory, however. At Hamrick's Music Box Theatre, "The Terror" in its second week continued to play to packed houses and smash previous attendance records. No indication of any let-up in attendance at this house.

"King of Kings" played its third and final week at the Columbia Theatre to average business. The total for the three weeks was quite disappointing, because it was expected that this film would be a box-office sensation at regular admission prices. While it did go well above the past Columbia standard, it was still far from a big money-getter. An average total for the run.

"Night of Mystery" was the attraction at the Coliseum Theatre, and was below the usual Menjou standard, according to audience comment. Business was just fair for the week. "Vamping Venus" was just an ordinary attraction at the Embassy Theatre, playing to good houses for three days only.

At the vaudeville houses, the film attractions were just moderately good. The Orpheum featured "The Magnificent Flirt" in conjunction with a vaudeville bill of mediocre merit, and the Pantages feature was "The Night Bird," which audiences described as being not up to Reginald Denny's usual pace. Both houses had just fair weeks at the box office.

Salt Lake City

SOME unusually big productions mark this week's presentations at the first run downtown theatres and with the cooler weather at hand, some very good reports have been made this week regarding attendance.

The Capitol has enjoyed a tremendous success with "The Fleet's In" in conjunction with the Fanchon and Marco stage presentation.

The Victory Theatre again experienced a record breaking week during the presentation of "Wings," shown with synchronization.

Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill in "Lady Be Good" was well received by good sized crowds at the Paramount Empress.

"A Race For Life" was the picture offering at the American and good houses are reported, due partly to the stage presentations offered at this house in the form of Amateur Night and "Fat Saunders Country Store." "The Perfect Crime" was fairly well received at the Gem. "Ramona" as a second run has been packing the Tower Theatre, a suburban house.

"The Enemy" was also shown very successfully as a second run at the Rialto, a second run house, and "Eyes of the Totem" was the feature presentation at the State, where fairly crowded houses were the result. "The Wizard" drew fairly satisfactory houses to the Mission neighborhood house here during the fore part of the week.

Tampa

THE storm, with wind and rain Sunday and Monday, cut into the receipts and gave all houses a bad start on the week. Business was not bad, in fact it showed up fairly good in spots, but it was not up to the average for these two days.

The Victory, with "Four Sons" as the feature; three Vitaphone acts and the Movietone news, certainly was a 100 per cent perfect program. Business for the 10 days was good but it was not up to what this program deserved.

"Excess Baggage" at the Tampa for the first half did fairly good, but the two days hurt the total. The picture was not up to the last Haines production, "Telling The World." "Oh, Kay" went over very good the last half. Colleen Moore is a former Tampa girl.

Johnny Hines, in "The Wright Idea," pulled fine for the Strand the first two days in spite of the weather, and "The Butter and Egg Man" went well over the average the following three days. "Beau Broadway" held up the average the last two. Good week and three good shows.

The Franklin, second runs, was a little off this week. The line-up seemed to be a little weak and not strong with the pull. "The Mark of Zorro," "The Rough Riders" and "Sorrell and Son" were the pictures featured.

Cincinnati

CINCINNATI houses all chalked up satisfactory grosses during the past week. The pictures were right, the weather was right, and the silver linings were conspicuous through the erstwhile clouds in the managers' offices.

The Capitol in the second week of "The Street Angel," repeated the big success of the initial week, crowds filling the house at every showing. The Capitol has, incidentally, been reaping a bountiful harvest of dollars with their sound pictures.

Another hold-over which scored heavily was "Four Sons," at the Lyric. There was no apparent let-up in the attendance during the two weeks' run.

The Albee, with "Four Walls," together with a vaudeville program, had an exceptionally good week, both the picture and the acts pleasing the customers to the 'nth degree.

"Waterfront," at the Strand, together with some clever shorts, got the breaks during the entire run, and the balance sheet showed up magnificently at this house.

"The Perfect Crime," attracted a satisfactory following at Keith's, which house, however, was a trifle behind in attendance as compared with its sister houses in the chain.

The Family showed "The Charge of the Gauchos," for the first three days, followed by "Powder My Back," for the remainder of the week. Business was around the normal mark for this house, where the regulars can be counted on.

The neighborhood houses reported business spotty, although it is steadily increasing as compared with the returns of a few weeks ago.

Baltimore

UNCERTAIN weather conditions during the week beginning Monday, September 17, hindered business during the first part of the week at the first-run theatres but boosted it up during the latter part when the Jewish holiday had a tendency to pull it down.

"The Whip," did an excellent business at Loew's Century throughout the week with Parisian Nights as the stage presentation act.

But perhaps the best business for the week was done at the all-talking sound and musical synchronized production "The Terror," shown at Warners' Metropolitan. This picture had them standing every night throughout the week and broke every house record ever made there including the first week of "The Jazz Singer" with Al Jolson.

"The Patriot," starring Emil Jannings with Lewis Stone and Florence Vidor, proved a very good attraction at the Stanley.

"Four Sons," the sound and musical synchronized production went through its third week at the New Theatre in good shape and business held up consistently during the last six days.

"Frederick The Great," the foreign production presented at the Little Theatre by the Motion Picture Guild, built from fair to good at that 250 seat house.

"The Cavalier," proved an entertaining feature film at the Keith-Albee Hippodrome with five acts of family time Keith-Albee vaudeville. Business began as fair and then built up to good.

Very good patronage was the rule throughout the week at the Rivoli where "The River Pirate," was shown with sound and musical synchronization and talking sequences.

"The Butter and Egg Man," proved an entertaining comedy attraction at Loew's Valencia and while it was enjoyed, the audiences during the week were small.

Albany

TALK about business, last week was a hummer at at least two motion picture theatres in Albany, and one in the neighboring city of Troy. Hold out business was the rule at these three houses while a new record for a Saturday and Sunday's business was established at the Troy theatre, running "Lights of New York" for the week. This picture drew such crowds on Sunday that it was necessary for the management to refuse admission to hundreds. The matinees ran fully as heavy as the evening shows.

In Albany, the best business getter, was Clara Bow in "The Fleet's In." In connection with the feature, there were two rather mediocre Vitaphone presentations. The Leland did a hold out business throughout the week, with William Haines, in "Telling the World." Clinton Square ran well with its double features first run, using "Lady Be Good" and "Modern Mothers."

Proctor's Grand used "A Blonde for a Night" during the last half of the week and the picture which was more heavily advertised than the vaudeville, did its full share in pulling business to the theatre.

Good business was reported by neighborhood houses. Weather conditions were favorable to the theatres, the evenings being cool and the rain holding off with the exception of one night. The Lincoln did excellent business with Colleen Moore in "Oh, Kay" for the first half of the week, while Zane Grey's "The Water Hole" also proved a good business getter. The other theatres in Troy reported fairly good business throughout the week, particularly Proctor's, which used "The Racket" for the first part of the week.

Dallas

DALLAS has enjoyed a week of cool weather which has been much enjoyed after the intense heat and business has been better the past seven days at all first run houses, and the weather is given its share of the credit. Big business, however, has been absent, with one exception, which is directly due to the mediocre pictures being shown for the week.

At the Majestic, "Four Sons" accounted for the best business of the week, and each evening show was capacity. Good matinees were registered the first part of the week with a little let down the latter part of the week. The gross for the week was unusually good which was partly due to a very good Interstate vaudeville bill.

"Excess Baggage" failed to get the business it deserved for the week's run. Receipts for the week were fairly good but not up to the average established by William Haines pictures in Dallas. The attraction was well received by those who saw it and the falling off in business was no doubt due to one very poor picture and another 'just fair' picture, which the Melba has offered in the last two weeks.

At the Palace "The Fleet's In" featuring Clara Bow, was reported to have drawn more business than any other picture starring Clara Bow with one exception. Business, however, fell short of the capacity mark and was low at the matinees. Totals for the week were good and the picture seemed to please.

"Tenth Avenue" and "Lingerie" checked off a good week for the Capitol. The Capitol's business has been much better since the installation of the 20 piece symphony orchestra, which is the largest maintained by any Dallas theatre at this time.

At the Old Mill "Diamond Handcuffs" and "The Water Hole" were responsible for a good gross for the week and proved to be entertaining pictures.

The Arcadia, the de-luxe suburban house of Dallas reported a good gross on "Wheel of Chance."

Harrisburg, Pa.

BUSINESS of the picture theatres hit something like its normal Fall stride last week with a return of weather too cool for out-of-door diversions. Loew's Regent did splendid business, especially at the night shows with "Two Lovers."

Clara Bow showed in "The Fleet's In," at the Victoria. The picture made a distinctly favorable impression which was reflected in big box office receipts.

The Colonial also had a big business-getter in "The Butter and Egg Man." Business at the Colonial also was materially stimulated by the showing of 1,500 feet of film pictures of scenes along the route of the annual four-day cruise of 250 members of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce.

The State's screen offering the first half of the week was "Domestic Troubles." The National did well with "Hold 'Em Yale," featuring Rod La Rocque, and the Grand attracted good-sized crowds with a double bill including Hoot Gibson in "The Rawhide Kid," and Jack Hoxie in "Heroes of the Wild." The Broad Street theatre offered "Becky," while the Russell attracted big juvenile audiences with Strongheart in "The Return of Boston Blackie," and "Fashion Madness."

A counter-attraction to the movies was a week of legitimate road shows in the Majestic theatre.

Kansas City

A STRONGER lineup of pictures than usual saw a larger attendance than usual at many of the first run houses of Kansas City for the week. At the Mainstreet "Craig's Wife" literally packed them in all week, the matinee business holding up as well as night attendance.

At Loew's Midland "The Tempest," did an exceptionally good matinee business, while the attendance at night was above the average for the last month or so. A revival of "Wings," a road attraction, with sound, found the Newman playing to full houses for the first time in about one year, that theatre having changed management and re-opened, following a temporary closing for improvements. "United States Smith" at the Pantages also found crowded houses waiting, both afternoons and nights.

"The Foreign Legion" at the Uptown drew a fair attendance for the week, as did "Four Sons" at the Globe. Aside from the Newman, which made more or less of a splurge on its re-opening, there was nothing out of the ordinary in exploitation on any of the pictures.

Birmingham

BUSINESS is on the upgrade in Birmingham. The Alabama, with "Two Lovers" (U. A.) featuring Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky, had a good week, as did the Ritz with Fox's special, "Four Sons." The Strand, with "The Midnight Taxi," Warner Bros. talker, did well, as did the Trianon, with "Happiness Ahead" (First National), featuring Colleen Moore and Edmund Lowe. Neighborhood houses were spotty but, as a whole, showed up satisfactorily.

Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE'S downtown theatres are enjoying a period of unusually active business. The fall weather which seems to have come to stay, included some rain during the week but for the most part it was ideal theatre-going weather. The strong attractions in the down town houses drew the heaviest patronage in that direction so that neighborhood houses, while very well attended, did not have a proportionate amount of business.

"Street Angel" is playing its third week and continues to keep the Strand always filled. The Merrill has changed its policy and now starts its week with a new picture on Friday rather than on Saturday which was its custom. This week's picture at the Merrill had a short run therefore, but did fair business during its stay. "Just Married" was the title. The Wisconsin found things rather lively while playing "The Mating Call."

The Garden had a good week with "The Terror" and "The Garden of Eden" brought very good patronage to the Majestic. "Wheel of Chance" brought in fair results at the Alhambra. The vaudeville houses had a very good week, with packed houses at every performance; "The Red Mark" was featured at the Riverside, and "The Butter and Egg Man" at the Orpheum.

Neighborhood houses although they did good business, were not as active as the down town houses. "Four Walls" was featured at the Oriental and Tower and drew well. The Uptown was accorded unusually good patronage during the showing of "The Mysterious Lady" and a fur and style revue.

Minneapolis

THE big box-office smash of the week was scored by "Wings," which was the attraction at the Strand theatre, reopening after being closed most of the summer. "Wings" was road-showed in Minneapolis last winter and did a fine business then, but it has now been re-created with new sound effects, and it made an extremely fine showing at the Strand at popular prices, so much so that it was necessary to hold it over for a second week.

At the State another aviation picture, "Lilac Time" was finishing its second week, and this Colleen Moore picture held up very nicely. Clara Bow in "The Fleet's In" was the attraction at the Minnesota, and it proved a very popular one, with the Publix stage unit, "Seeing Things" to supplement it. Billie Dove in "The Heart of a Follies Girl" did about the average trade at the Lyric, while "Lion and the Mouse" came into the Grand, a second run sound-picture house, and made a great showing.

Pantages did very well with "The Michigan Kid."

The Marbro reported a very big week with Eddie Cantor in person and a talking photoplay, "The Hit of the Show," while the Granada, with its second anniversary week show which included the same feature picture as the Marbro, Jimmy Savo in person and Benny Meroff's "Strike Up The Band" production, played to good business.

The Capitol offering was "Lights of New York" and on the stage, Del Lampe and his orchestra, the crowd responding well to these attractions. "State Street Sadie" the screen feature at the Avalon, was another talking picture which did good business.

Boston

THE Fall season is under full sway and the week's business at Boston's first run theatres is reported as fully up to expectations. Opening of the colleges has brought additional throngs. This week will see the settling down to normal conditions.

Metropolitan's "The Patriot" proved a good attraction and early reports point to heavy business for the week. Ben Black was guest conductor.

"Two Lovers" was the film at Loew's State which drew good business throughout the week, with Dave Harris and the Locust Sisters in the presentation. Loew's Orpheum enjoyed good business with "The Cardboard Lover" and staged a Varsity Drag contest for amateurs which proved a big feature for the mid-week business.

Washington Street Olympia and the Fenway, Publix's two houses, did a big business with "Lilac Time" while the Scollay Square Olympia with "Four Sons" established a new high mark for the current season. Keith-Albee Boston Theatre featured "The Cop" to excellent business.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" at the Twin theatres, Modern and Beacon, did a splendid week's business for Netoco. This was the second week and so heavy was the return that both theatres will continue the same film another week.

"Others reporting a good week are "Forgotten Faces" at the Publix Capitol, "A Grain of Dust" at the Exeter and "Forgotten Faces" at the University.

Pittsburgh

LOEW'S PENN again had a tremendous week's business. Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky in "Two Lovers" was the screen attraction. These stars are real box-office names here.

The Stanley theatre had no stage offering and presented the first local showing at popular prices of "Wings." The showing was accompanied by Vitaphone, and the production scored with the fans. Business was very good.

Loew's Aldine played to S. R. O. with "Four Sons," accompanied by Movietone. This production won much praise from the press and fans alike. The entire show was held over for a second week.

The Grand and Liberty had "The Water Hole," starring Jack Holt and supported by Nancy Carroll. The picture presentation of the Zane Grey story brought but average returns.

The Regent is continuing to get the crowds with all sound and talking pictures. This week it was "Glorious Betsy," and a good week's business was the result.

At the Davis, "Chicken a la King" was on the screen and six acts of Keith-Albee vaudeville on the stage. Business was good.

The Alhambra (in the East End) also had "Chicken a la King," and turned in an average week's business.

The Olympic theatre re-opened after a summer closing. The first offering was "Road House." Business was satisfactory.

Chicago

THEATRE business was good in Chicago again during the past week among the de luxe houses, and the smaller theatres also showed a decided improvement over the week-end, many reporting the best business since May.

Strong attractions brought big crowds to some of the leading loop houses, the Roosevelt doing a splendid business with "The Patriot."

"The Tempest" continued to go strong in its last days at the United Artists, giving way to "Two Lovers" on Friday, the latter proving a big box office puller.

Good business was done at the Chicago Theatre with "The Whip," one of the first sound pictures to be shown at this theatre, and an elaborate musical and stage show. McVickers continued to go over well with "Wings."

"Our Dancing Daughters" on the screen and Benny Kreuger and his gang in the stage show, proved a strong combination at the Oriental Theatre. "The Midnight Taxi" ended its long run at the Orpheum to fair business, "When A Man Loves" replacing it on Saturday.

Atlanta

CLARA BOW sailed into the Howard Theatre with "The Fleet's In" and swept into the box-office lead from the opening Monday afternoon until the closing Saturday night. While the takings on "The Fleet's In" did not match the gross of "Red Hair" it is still the best in town this week.

Laura La Plante in "Home James" wrote up a corking business at Loew's Capitol, running neck and neck with next-door competition, "The First Kiss," which with the popular young team, Gary Cooper and Fay Wray, drew steadily throughout the week.

"The Whip" proved an exceptionally pleasing attraction at the Metropolitan. But the opening Monday fell short of expectations, though strong competition explains that easily.

"Caught in the Fog" at the Rialto was somewhat disappointing to patrons and came in for a panning at the hands of an Atlanta reviewer. Others found it entertaining.

Loew's Grand, which reverted to second run when the Capitol came under the Loew banner and took over Loew vaudeville, played "The Lion and the Mouse" to fairly good business.

The Tudor Theatre reports fair business with Ted Wells in "Made to Order Hero," and rather better business with "Fangs of the Wild" starring Rangel.

Los Angeles

IN direct competition, two underworld dramas, both having box-office stars, drew them in with George Bancroft in "The Docks of New York," at the Metropolitan and Lon Chaney in "While the City Sleeps," at Loew's State.

Business at United Artists Theatre, also has picked up considerably with the attraction of D. W. Griffith's "Battle of the Sexes."

"Wings" at the Criterion is reported doing splendid business and at the Biltmore, "The Godless Girl" is holding on. George Duryea, the featured juvenile made a personal appearance on Friday night.

In Hollywood, "The Terror," at Warner Brothers' Theatre continues to attract, while "White Shadows in the South Seas," is proving equal to the long run at Grauman's Chinese.

"Lilac Time" is closing at The Carthay Circle to make way for the advent of "Mother Knows Best," which is sold out for the opening.

Song Writers Flock to Hollywood

Boys Are Cashing In on New Yen for Theme Ditties

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 23.—The newly created rage for motion picture theme songs is bringing New York's song-writers to Hollywood in droves. While several have been signed under contracts by various studios, most of them are embarking on free-lance careers, finding a fertile field for their talents both financially and artistically. "Ramona" may be pointed out as the basic cause.

During past year both film producers and music publishers have been wary of the motion picture theme song. It generally cost a lot of money to exploit and drew very little in the line of money or publicity. Until "Ramona" became an overnight hit, the only outstanding song which amounted to anything in regard to motion pictures was "Mickey" and that was almost ten years ago. Since "Ramona" there have been "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," "Jeannine, My Dream of Lilac Time" and several others now being plugged.

Universal and Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer have gone further than the others in exploiting the theme song. Universal has signed Josef Cherniavsky to head its department for the purpose of writing such numbers and has also arranged with Irving Berlin, Inc., for the publication of them. M-G-M has placed Gus Edwards, Billy Rose, Herb Nacio Brown under exclusive contract to write them songs. Among the free-lancers is Fred Fisher, former music publisher, who made a million on "Dardenella." Fisher has written theme songs for M-G-M, for Warner Brothers and for Universal since his arrival two weeks ago. Fox has Dave Stamper among others, who represents Broadway and 46th street in Hollywood.

To the song-writer the craze is bewildering. It means simply batting out a lyric or a melody and receiving from $500 to $1000 or more as immedite payment, plus any royalties which may accumulate should the song develop into a hit. The studio attends to the worry of getting the song accepted, of exploiting it and of getting it sold, leaving the song-writer to continue his merry way batting 'em out at $500 and $1000 down. And the average song written in Hollywood thus far, (figures actually quoted by four different composers), hasn't taken over two hours to write.

One of the talented younger players, William Bakewell, has just been engaged by Douglas Fairbanks for the featured juvenile role in "The Iron Mask" (United Artists)

L. A. Urbach Joins M. P. News Staff

A RECENT addition to the Hollywood Staff of Motion Picture News is Laurence A. (Larry) Urbach, well known trade-paper man.

He started his career in the industry on the News and has subsequently held important positions on the staff of the Exhibitors Trade Review, Moving Picture World and Variety.

In line with its policy of adding to the organization established and successful trade-paper workers, the News is glad to announce the appointment of Mr. Urbach and to welcome him back again as a member of the News family.

Gunner Simpson

Russell Simpson has been assigned the comedy role of "Gunner Bill" in "The Exodus of the New World," Pioneer Film Corporation production.

Exhibitors Good Tuggers

The exhibitors won the tug-of-war when pitted against the exchangemen at the Sixth Annual Outing of Exhibitors and Exchangemen, held Thursday, Sept. 20, at the Edgewater Beach Club, Santa Monica. The exchangemen won the baseball game. Six hundred persons attended.

A Fall Offering

An original story by Eve Unsell, "The Spirit of Youth," will be among the important productions which Tiffany-Stahl will offer on the early fall program. Dorothy Sebastian and Larry Kent will co-star, under direction of Walter Lang.

Will Direct Jannings

Lewis Milestone, brilliant young director, has been selected to make "Ellis Island," Emil Jannings' next starring production. He has been also loaned by Caddo to United Artists to direct "The Shot" and "Taras Bulba."

Resigns Universal Post

Joseph Franklin Poland, supervisor and story constructor for the past two years with Universal, will sever his connection with that company on Nov. 1. Poland's future plans have not yet been announced.

Colonel Lindbergh

Many spectacular flying stunts performed by Col. Chas. Lindbergh, "The Three Musketeers" of the Army and "The Sea Hawks," the Navy's crack trio of stuntsters, Art Gobel and others at the recent National Air Races held in Los Angeles will be included in the next Reed Howes-Educational Pictures feature to be made by Director Harry J. Brown for Charles R. Rogers Company.

Burt Ennis

Since the days when Burt Ennis publicized the late Barbara LaMarr, he has not had occasion to visit the West Coast. However, a few weeks ago he started westward, and since his arrival has been devoting his time to writing titles and dialogue. Among Ennis' activities recently was the titling of a series of comedies starring Ben Turpin, Poodles Hanneford and "Snub" Pollard, also the re-issued version of Adventures of Tarzan, serial.

George Was Interested

Raymond Cannon's set for one of his scenes of "Husbands Are Liars," at Fox, was visited by Lieut. Windsor (Prince George) of England, on his twenty-four-hour sojourn in Hollywood.

Defines Attitude of Cameramen's Union

Burd States Body Will Not Dictate Their Assignments

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 23.—The rumor current in Hollywood that the newly-formed cameramen's union would attempt to dictate to producers on assignments of cameramen for all pictures produced, was emphatically denied by Howard Burd, business manager of the local.

He further pointed out that the organization must follow the rules and regulations of the I. A. T. S. E., its international affiliation. It is specifically stated in the I. A. T. S. E. by-laws that a local cannot dictate the employment of any particular member. Under these conditions, Burd declared the cameramen's union had not, and never could force the engagement of any individual member upon a producer.

Cameramen generally were concerned over the reported attempt of the union to force employment of a certain member on a picture. The story circulated states that a union official sent a man to a particular studio to shoot first camera on a feature. It is said that other union cameramen were advised to refuse the job as the union's candidate was to be engaged regardless, and at the salary he quoted to the producer.

The latter, according to the report, refused to engage the union's candidate, and made his own selection.

Cameramen both in and out of the union declared that the union would not try to select particular cameramen for certain pictures. It was pointed out that many cameramen have been associated with certain directors and stars for a number of years, and the latter would not consent to substitution of cameramen on their pictures other than those who have been with them for some time.

The cameramen's union, designated as International Photographers Local 659, I. A. T. S. E., has had a phenomenal growth since its launching eight months ago. Its membership of close to 600 includes 95 per cent of all first, second and assistant cameramen, together with still photographers and assistants.

Complete organization of the cameramen's union was effected in much less time than any other local of studio workers. No attempt to block union organization by producers was made, on account of the agreement signed two years ago by producer-distributor members of the Hays organization with the five international unions having jurisdiction in the theatrical field.

This agreement provided for open shop in the coast studios during the life of the pact, and allowed the unionization of various branches of studio workers without objection fro mthe producers. Arbitration of any difficulties or unjust working conditions in the studios was provided for in the agreement.

According to report, the present agreement expires November 28th of this year, and negotiations for a new pact are said to be now under way between representatives of the international unions and the Hays organization. It has been intimated in local union circles that the new agreement might possibly carry a "closed shop" provision for those groups of studio employees that have union affiliation.

Well Known Writer Joins the News

THE Hollywood force of Motion Picture News has been augmented by the addition of Jerry Hoffman, for the past three years western representative of the New York Telegraph, and a reviewer and news gatherer in connection with motion pictures, the legitimate stage and vaudeville.

Mr. Hoffman will regularly contribute feature stories and "a column of jazz" for this publication. His first articles and his column, "Dotty Musings," appear in the current issue.

Dotty Musings

By Jerry Hoffman

FOREWORD . . . under this heading shall be poured weekly . . . the flotsam and jetsam of Hollywood . . . rumors . . . gags . . . foolishness . . . even news . . . and . . . who knows . . . possibly a grain of common sense will find its way here occassionally . . . the penalty of having strayed from the straight and narrow path . . . however . . . to get started. . . .

IT is amazing to note the amount of constructive work on a production which is accomplished during a "preview autopsy . . . a "preview autopsy" for the benefit of naive and innocent children . . . is that gathering of executives, directors, writers and players held in Hollywood theatre lobbies following the preview of a picture . . . in the ten minutes following the final fadeout . . . or the half hour . . . depending on how much doctoring is needed . . . more suggestions and more beneficial ideas are given than are totaled during the two or three months of actual preparation and production . . . hence why not hold "preview consultations" . . . instead of autopsies.

TOM MIX . . . who recently told the world in public print what he thought of Hollywood's parasites . . . tells me he has removed the revolving door from his home . . . which will cause much gnashing of the teeth and wailing among certain ones who have abused hospitality . . . Alan Hale tells of meeting an actor who had just seen a preview of a Vitaphoned picture he was in . . . "Was the picture good?" asked Allan . . . "Was it good!" shrieked the actor . . . "was it GOOD! . . . say, they laughed and applauded so much I've been called back to the studio to make a trailer adding six bows to the fadeout!" . . . on the other hand, there's the actor who walked out of the theatre playing a picture he was in just for the thrill of walking out on himself! . . . heigh . . . ho . . .

LINA BASQUETTE is dashing around to places with her chum, June Collyer . . . and she and Pev Marley are far from cold about each other yet . . . so there . . . oh, yeah . . . I meant to tell you that even gossip would get into this . . . anything may . . . even a personal pronoun . . . ah . . . what a lovely spot to end for this week . . .

just completed by Earle Snell and Gladys Lehman, is considered by Joseph Franklin Poland, Universal's feature comedy supervisor, as the finest screen story these scenarists have ever written.

Cooper Going Strong

That the next twelve months will find Gary Cooper one of the most popular box-office attractions of the screen, is a prediction made regarding the young leading man by Richard Wallace, who is at present directing the young character juvenile in "The Shopworn Angel."

Kathryn McGuire

Kathryn McGuire has been signed by John McCormick, producer of Colleen Moore's pictures for First National, for an important role in "Synthetic Sin."

Featuring Miss Gaynor

Coincidental with the release of "Four Devils," an F. W. Murnau production for Fox in which Janet Gaynor will be featured, the popular little star of "Seventh Heaven" and "Street Angel," will be hard at work on "Street Fair," and under direction of William K. Howard, again.

Chooses La Cava

After looking over the field of available directors very carefully, First National has finally decided upon Gregory La Cava to direct Corinne Griffith's third First National picture under her new contract, "Saturday's Children."

Almost Finished

James Cruze, who guided the destinies of William Haines through "Excess Baggage," and is now putting the finishing touches on "A Man's Man," with the same star, is to direct Haines in "The Duke Steps Out."

Cast Completed

Melville Brown, who will direct "Geraldine," for Pathe-DeMille, completed his cast when he signed Gaston Glass for one of the featured roles.

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB
CLEARING HOUSE FOR BOX OFFICE PROBLEMS and THEATRE OPERATION

By Charles E. Lewis

of the Alfred Gottesman Theatrical Enterprises, New England

Young Blood and Old—

To those of you who insist that only young blood can do big things and only young blood can succeed in this fast-moving business of ours, we respectfully dedicate this little tale.

Things theatrically were in a pretty bad shape in the city of Norwich, Conn., and the deal that brought about the change of management and ownership, also brought about the presence of a man many years past the fifty mark. And because of his age everyone predicted a very short stay for him in Norwich. Even those, in whose destiny the theatres were held, were very reluctant to permit a man of his age to tackle what needed a "big man for a big job."

I could make this story much longer by adding a lot of frills and paragraphs and elaborating upon everything. But I would much sooner shoot for the mark and bring it to this point where I can tell you that the other day fate led my footsteps (aided by a bus) to the city of Norwich and before I was in the town an hour I found that the chief topic of conversation was either the Broadway or the Palace Theatre. My eye was attracted to a well laid-out three sheet and later to a window card. While getting a bite to eat I glanced through the local evening paper and my casual glance changed to intense interest when I reached the page containing the theatrical advertising. Both the theatres had ads which "hit you squarely in the eye" the moment you opened the paper. The accompanying reader was carefully, and I can also say cleverly, written and one that convinced you that what they were saying was true, or at least worthy of investigation.

Signs of Good Showmanship

Later in the evening I walked over to the Palace Theatre. I found signs of economy, but also signs of showmanship all around the marquee and signs. The lobby presented a different appearance than what I was accustomed to see. The doorman could move bag and baggage to the Roxy in New York and he would not be out of place. Likewise the staff of efficient and courteous ushers. I knew there was something different about this theatre and after looking around for a while I enquired for the manager. They informed me that he was at the Broadway Theatre, so up the hill I started for this beautful Spanish Theatre that was once upon a time an old-fashioned "Opery House." Here again I detected signs of good management, signs of showmanship and best of all signs of common sense, that poor neglected angle of lots of "good" exhibitors. The Broadway had become the "talkie" house of Norwich and the natives were flocking there in droves. Did they like talkies? Well, you should smoke a herring they do. And the way this "old man" served it to them was enough to make them like it.

Truly, friends, it is remarkable the way this man about whom I am writing, could step into a task so strange to him, so unlike what his limited experience had taught him, and requiring so much natural ability, and make a success of it. I have told you lots about him, I have told you many things about his theatres, so now let me make you acquainted with the "youngest," peppiest and greatest of his kind:—Mr. M. J. (Mike) Levinson, managing director of the Broadway and Palace Theatres in Norwich, Conn., for the Philip Smith Circuit of New England Theatres. To all Ye criers that age has no place in this business of ours, all Ye who shout—bring on new and young blood, and to the theatrical industry in general I say "Hats off to 'Mike' Levinson" who packs more pep in his little finger than a lot of so-called young-peppy managers that I have met on my travels, have in their whole systems. As a member of the CLUB, we extend to Mr. Levinson our sincerest wish that he meet with all the success he so well deserves.

More News from Cambridge, Ohio

Once more we hear from one of our most active members. Fred Johnson of Cambridge, Ohio, is always doing something to keep his theatres before the public and his latest was to address the local Rotary Club. The most direct way of telling you about it is to give you the clipping that appeared in one of the Cambridge local papers and let you read that.

Addressed Rotary Club

"Fred Johnson, manager of the Colonial and Strand theatres, spoke to the Rotary club members at their meeting Wednesday at noon. He gave many interesting details of the motion picture industry and told how this form of entertainment has superseded to a large extent attractions of the legitimate stage, especially in smaller cities. He also explained the extreme difficulty that is now encountered in securing good, legitimate road attractions.

"Members of the 'Jazz Pirates' troupe appearing at the Colonial gave a short entertainment. Peter Sheehan was chairman of the meeting."

No one will deny that this form of publicity is good for the business in any town. When a manager becomes active in any local club organization or institution he immediately places his theatres in a fine position for much attention and free publicity. Working with the Rotary, Lions or other clubs is just one way of using your own natural resources (if you remember that expression from the opening article of the club).

Asks, "What Is Projection?"

A picture fan once asked me this question because he frankly admitted that he knew nothing about it. Brothers, friends, and others in this most interesting business of ours, I could be truthful and say without fear of much contradiction that a lot of exhibitors could well ask that same question. And they could truthfully add that they, too, know nothing about it.

WHY??????

First off, we will grant that every theatre manager does not have to be an expert projectionist because he is a manager. BUT he most certainly should know some of the fundamental principles concerning this most important part of his business.

Projection I told the "fan," is the means employed to throw the picture upon the screen of the theatre. And that expresses what most managers know about projection. Don't get mad boys if the truth hits home. Come now, admit that you know very little about it. And the funny part is that you can learn plenty about it if you only would care to learn. Visit your booth often. Watch the operator. Look over your generator or generators. Get in some morning and make a close inspection of your screen. And before long you will start to find out that you can save money and cut the overhead in this important department. Are carbons being burned as far as possible? Is your operator conserving the "juice" whenever possible? Would the installation of the newer reflecting arcs, together with smaller generators cut down your booth expense? We can think of no topic more interesting or more important than projection. Try learning something about it and see if you don't like the education.

Also remember that your projection equipment is the "eye" of your theatre and you can't point out a single successful theatre where poor projection prevails. It's your chief stock in trade. Watch it.

Uses Poem to Advertise House

The second part of this Johnson story has to deal with a unique manner of opening a redecorated theatre. Instead of the customary ballyhoo and noise, Mr. Johnson sat down and wrote four stanzas of up-to-date poetry which he had printed on regulation Post Cards and mailed to every family in and around the town. Because parts of this poem can be used for other purposes we are giving it to you just as we received it. Keep it handy for use in advertising some coming attraction. Mr. Johnson won't mind any club member using any part of it.

The New Colonial—Cambridge

In August our doors were closed for a week,
We were having our house cleaning, so to speak.
Men were made busy cleaning the COLONIAL through,
Then the walls were painted and now it's like new.

A nice run of pictures we have booked for this fall,
And a good time is coming for one and for all.
You'll like our newsreels and our comedies too,
You're always welcome here when you're downcast and blue.

Put your troubles somewhere in an "out of the way" place,
Replace that frown with a bright smiling face.
Leave your troubles and come here, it's much nicer by far,
And when you go home you'll forget where they are.

No one can blame you after day's work is done
For feeling as though recreation you've won.
So follow the crowd, just follow the line,
Come to the COLONIAL and have a good time.

Membership Fee Too High?

William A. Levey, manager of the A. H. Schwartz Beacon Theatre out in Port Washington, N. Y., (seems to me I ought to know that theatre) writes in to tell us—"With the membership fee so low I don't see how any manager can afford not to belong to the 'CLUB.' It's a medium whereby a manager may obtain a wealth of information on exploitation for his picture bookings; it fills a long felt want. Count on my hearty support."

So, as long as we can count on his hearty support, we are going to look forward to see what he sends us in the way of box office or theatre suggestions.

I like to get contributions for the managers of the Schwartz Circuit because I know the boys who are piloting the field, and therefore know that there is always something doing. So I am watching all mail from Huntington, Freeport, Jamaica and Flatbush. It should prove very interesting reading. What do you say, boys?

This Man "Uses the News"

Our CLUB slogan has not been in vain as far as Matthew F. Anysh is concerned because part of his letter just received tells us—"Am going to use a little stunt sent in by L. A. Wallis, of North Fort, Texas. I think the stunt is great and will let you know how we make out with it." . . . So once more we demonstrate to you that members DO use the CLUB columns to get new ideas and try the other fellow's stunts in their own towns. Mr. Anysh, by the way, is a new member and takes over the reins of management in the Plaza Theatre at San Diego, California, from our friend Randall Jarabek, who moves to the Seville Theatre, at Chula Vista, California. And to Mr. Jarabek we extend our best wishes and hope to hear from him again when he gets settled in his new surroundings.

Tie-Up for Air Mail Drive Exploits "Tempest"

A recent piece of exploitation for John Barrymore in "Tempest" at Loew's Valentine Theatre, Toledo, obtained an important first-page newspaper break. The tie-up was with the News-Bee's Air Mail Day, Wednesday, September 12th, in which the newspaper sponsored a mass movement to use air mail service.

Selling Sound to Rochester

"SELL your 'sound' installation on the same basis as a new theatre—that is to say, make the point of the campaign the idea that something entirely new in entertainment is to be presented in your town through your theatre."

That is the advice which the leading theatre executives are hammering home to managers of theatres in the circuits they head. That it is profitable to attack the problem of selling "sound" in this way, recently was proved by Thomas D. Soriero, managing director of the Rochester theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

Reproduced above are two photographs and a newspaper advertisement which served as highlights in the extensive campaign staged in Rochester to sell his sound presentations.

Four weeks previous to the opening of the first sound picture at the Rochester, Soriero launched his drive to sell the new attraction. He sent out special stories to all newspapers, and at the same time featured as the overture selection the theme song of "Street Angel," called "Angela Mia." The second week special slides were thrown on the screen in conjunction with an organ solo of the song, and the following week the song was played by the orchestra in combination with the organ. Special trailers were shown for four weeks in advance.

This "inside" exploitation was augmented by the posting of special lobby stills and window cards in store windows ten days in advance of the opening. Special stunts included the painting of a huge sign on the side wall of the Rochester. This was done by two men wearing women's garb, a stunt which attracted particular attention. A similar stunt was used in the painting of a sign at a location where it is estimated 200,000 people could observe it during the four weeks it flashed its message about the Rochester. A three-sheet photostat of newspaper reviews from all over the country on "Street Angel" was another feature of the lobby display. Through a tie-up with the Brunswick Panatrope agency, Soriero obtained one of the newest model machines for use in the foyer of the theatre. Records of instrumental and vocal renditions of "Angela Mia" were played off and on throughout the four weeks advance campaign and throughout the engagement of "Street Angel."

Adapts Lobby Props to Feature Atmosphere of Different Films

MANAGER P. D. GRIFFITH had two pictures, showing successively—Johnny Hines in "Home Made" and Estelle Brody in "Mlle. from Armentieres," that gave him the idea of using pine boards for a lobby display at the York theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn.

For "Home Made," Griffith used the rough pine boards to transform the box office into a Home Made shack.

To lobbyize "Mlle. from Armentieres," Griffith enhanced upon the idea of using the rough pine boards in building a barricade. Dried out grass and tall weeds were placed around the barricade with two machine guns protruding over a low board and in between two boards respectively.

The pine boards thus served a double purpose in a neat lobby display for two pictures and at the same time in conformity with the theme of the picture showing.

An old Ford coupe was also used on the streets to exploit "Home Made." This flivver was white-lettered with copy.

Showmanship Briefs

MONTY SALMON, manager of the Boulevard Theatre, got an exceptionally good street ballyhoo for "Heart Trouble" by tieing up with the Los Angeles Ostrich Farm. One of the farm's light four-wheel ostrich carts was obtained. In the front of the cart was mounted a large cut-out of a heart with name of star, theatre, title of picture and play date on each side. The heart was about two and a half feet high. The driver wore a large papier mache head, about six times actual size, his own head concealed in the neck. The head was modeled on that of Harry Langdon in the picture. On the driver's back was a painted cloth sign advertising the opening of "Heart Trouble."

PARAMOUNT and the L. Heller Company, manufacturers of Deltah Pearls, have effected an exclusive tie-up whereby seven Paramount stars, photographed with a Deltah necklace will be on exhibit in the stores of jewelers throughout the country. This is Paramount's second arrangement with the Heller Company, but this time the tie-up is exclusive. Paramount stars will be used by the pearl company. The 1928-29 exhibit features the following stars: Clara Bow, Evelyn Brent, Mary Brian, Louise Brooks, Nancy Carroll, Bebe Daniels, Ruth Taylor.

OBTAINING the services of a man who resembles one of the characters in "Ladies' Night in a Turkish Bath," L. B. Harrell, of the Lyric, Waycross, Ga., made his exploitation different and effective. He had his man carry a frame which, from the front, resembled the sweat boxes of a Turkish bath, a source of particular humor in the picture. The street ballyhoo was in use for two days in the main business section of Waycross. Manager Harrell, who constantly gives his shows enterprising exploitation, declares that this attracted considerable attention and helped to build up a very satisfactory business on "Ladies' Night."

HUGH ROGERS, manager in the Northwest of "40,000 Miles with Lindbergh," reports that the picture was recently shown at the Liberty Theatre in Butte, Mont., where Manager Date Hall, of the Montana M-G-M office, conducted a contest among grade pupils, giving substantial prizes to the first five youngsters who came closest to estimating the number of miles Lindbergh has flown since he started his memorable trip to Paris.

TOM BOLAND, manager of the Empress Theatre, Oklahoma City, piloted an airplane above the city to attract attention to the showing of "Lilac Time." He flew over the city from 12 to 12:30 a few days in advance of the showing, and dropped 250 toy airplanes, each carrying a ticket to "Lilac Time." The daily newspapers carried stories on his stunt under big-type heads. A plane was borrowed from the Tulsa-Oklahoma City Airline Company.

WILLIAM GREEN, feature organist at the new Olympic Theatre in Watertown, is planning to start an organ club in that city. Mr. Green is a composer of songs as well as an organist.

Portable Phonographs Street Ballyhoo for "Lilac Time"

A PHONOGRAPH record as a street ballyhoo for a motion picture is a new wrinkle in film exploitation. Walter P. Lindlar, in charge of exploitation for First National Pictures, worked out the stunt and took it to the Victor Talking Machine Company.

Victor officials grew enthusiastic about the stunt and agreed to make the ballyhoo record. It consists of three parts on the one record; the music of the theme song of the picture played by the Shilkret Orchestra; a talk by a Victor official on the theme song and "Lilac Time"; and the chorus of "Jeannine, I Dream of Lilac Time" sung by Gene Austin.

The record was first used in the exploitation of "Lilac Time" at the Aldine Theatre, Philadelphia, where it attracted so much attention that it was used in Boston when the exploitation started for the "Lilac Time" double first run engagement at the Washington Street Olympia and at the Fenway Theatres.

Two girls dressed in French peasant costume, modeled on that worn by Colleen Moore as Jeannine, went out on the street with a Victor portable talking machine and the ballyhoo record. They carried a stool on which the machine was set up on any convenient corner where the traffic was heavy. A record was put on and played, after which the girls distributed heralds and took the machine to another corner and started the record again.

Three pairs of girls were used in the Philadelphia exploitation campaign, and an equal number in Boston. So successful has the stunt proved that First National is arranging for it in many of the big city engagements. The Victor Talking Machine Company has found the stunt as good a ballyhoo for selling the records of "Jeannine, I Dream of Lilac Time" as First National has found it for the photoplay, and has supplied the First National exploitation department with portable Victrolas and records for further exploitation purposes.

First National has arranged to supply its exchanges with the Victrolas and the records so that exhibitors can see just what the stunt is. Many of them will use the record in the lobbies of their theatres in advance of and during the showing of the film.

Color-Paint New Process Used for Window and Lobby Cards

JAMES A. CLARK, manager of the Paramount Ad Sales Department, has announced an innovation in ad sales material to be issued by his company. The new display, known as Color-Paint, is the size of a one-sheet, 28 by 42 inches, containing hand-colored photographic enlargements of scenes from particular pictures.

Color-Paint, a distinct departure in display advertising, is designed for display in any type of theatre. It is also a very effective medium for window tie-ups, libraries and other high class special locations.

The principal feature of Color-Paint is its appearance of oil painting accomplished by the use of rich colors in conjunction with a varnished linen finish and the cardboard stock which, while heavy, is pliable, thus minimizing the danger of cracking or creasing which would spoil the effect. Though expensive in appearance its cost is comparatively small.

"Wings" and "The Wedding March" are the first two pictures on which Color-Paint will be used in advertising. The "Wings" display shows a central large picture of Clara Bow and Charles Rogers surrounded by smaller pictures of scenes from the production. The title and the names of the cast are lettered in a small box at bottom center of the display.

50 Chicago Theatres Cooperate to Find Double for Snookums

ONE of the most successful publicity stunts ever staged in Chicago for a short subject star recently terminated in that city with the selection of sixteen babies who most closely resemble Snookums, small star of the Stern Brothers "Newlyweds" comedies. The contest has been in operation for five weeks in fifty theatres throughout Chicago, with eliminations held each week.

The final decisions were made at the White City Amusement Park. Little Charlotte Petrie won the first prize.

Jack Baker, Universal exploiter, arranged a tie-up with the Chicago Portrait Photographers Association, who financed all printing material, radio advertising and lobby display cards and trailers. The Chicago Evening American co-operated in publicizing the stunt. Jones and Baumracker, prominent jewelers, donated 16 Elgin wrist watches and 16 loving cups to the mothers of the lucky babies who most nearly resembled Snookums. The Chicago Portrait Photographers Association also donated 16 beautiful oil paintings to the runners-up.

In all 4,000 babies entered the contest, which resulted in a tremendous amount of publicity for all fifty exhibitors participating in the stunt.

Long-Married Get a Break in "Two Lovers" Stunt

In connection with the showing recently at the Palace Theatre at Indianapolis of "Two Lovers," the theatre conducted a very interesting contest among the married folk to determine just who in this section had been married longest. One night during the showing all couples married fifty years or more were guests of the management. A special block of seats was reserved for them and gifts were presented to the three couples registered in the contest. It was not necessary for the couples to attend the theatre party to be eligible for the gifts, but proof of the length of marriage was required by the theatre management. And you'd be surprised at the interest in such a contest. One couple was found that had been married 71 years and eight months—which is a long time to live, even, without being married that long. The husband was 95 years old and the wife 91.

Herald "Beggars of Life" With Fake Telegrams

Manager Chas. F. Shire had 1000 Western Union telegrams mimeographed with copy about "Beggars of Life" and his vaudeville program at the Lincoln Theatre, Lincoln, Neb., and then proceeded to lose them by leaving them in offices, on the sidewalks and other public places.

The telegrams were folded and somewhat crumbled as if they had been carried in one's pocket to give the finders the idea that they were real telegrams.

Copy on the telegrams read, "Charles F. Shire, Lincoln Theatre, Lincoln, Neb.—Have secured a great lineup of New York and Orpheum vaudeville for Lincoln theatre.—Cissy Haydens Mascots is a sensational revue with ten beautiful young girls.—A great attraction for fair week in addition to Jim Tully's 'Beggars of Life' with Wallace Beery. Regards. (Signed) Sam Katz, President Publix Theatres."

"Our Gang" in Person Call on Mayor Walker

An official reception at City Hall by Mayor Walker of New York was among the activities engaged in by the "Our Gang" troupers during their engagement at the Capitol theatre last week. The "gang," comprising Joe Cobb, "Farina," Harry Spear, Jean Darling, Baby Mary Ann Jackson, "Wheezer" and Pete, the dog, made the journey from the theatre to City Hall with an entourage composed of press agents, parents, guardians, their official school teacher and some members of the press.

Electrics Flash Theatre Ad on Motor Truck

A truck loaned by the Dodge Bros. Agency carried an electrical display advertising "Lights of New York" playing at the Modjeska Theatre, Augusta, Ga.

Both sides of the truck were covered with beaverboard and worded as follows, "First All-Talking Picture—'Lights of New York'—Modjeska Today."

Harry W. "Tim" Roberts, manager of the Madison Theatre, Mansfield, Ohio, recently celebrated his fifteenth anniversary as owner and manager of Mansfield Theatres.

The Regent theatre, Hamilton, which has been dark during the summer, will reopen with a short season of pictures and vaudeville, to be shown on Saturday only. A dramatic stock company is reported to have leased the house for a winter's run.

John Schwalm, manager of the Rialto, Hamilton, is spending considerable of his spare time on the "green" these days, having recently acquired both the technique and language of golf. John says it's better to be on the green than in the red.

Contrary to the no-holiday bargain-rule Manager Earl Pepper, of Neth's Grand theatre, Columbus, Ohio, maintained reduced admission prices from 11 A. M. to 1 P. M. on Labor Day, thereby adding considerable to the day's receipts.

Manager Riester, of the Ohio theatre, Mansfield, Ohio, announces that his house will operate continuously from 1:30 to 11 P. M. daily hereafter. In the past the house closed from 5:30 to 6:30 P. M. except on Sundays and holidays.

Oklahoma City

W. R. BEASLEY advises he has closed the Beasley Theatre at Goza, Okla., for an indefinite period.

Ned Pedigo, accompanied by Mrs. Pedigo and their son, have returned to Oklahoma after a summer in Idaho and Wyoming. Mr. Pedigo formerly operated the Pollard and Pedigo Theatres at Guthrie, Okla., and is now touring Oklahoma in vaudeville.

The War Department Theatre, at Ft. Reno, Okla., has been closed and will be dismantled to be replaced immediately with a new, fireproof theatre.

Sam Carver, of the Independent Film Company, in Kansas City, spent last week in Oklahoma City on business.

The Bryant Theatre, at Marland, Okla., which has been closed for the summer months, has now reopened for the winter.

Griffith Amusement Company entertained all of their theatre managers at a three day convention last week. This was the second annual meeting.

A banquet was held Tuesday night at Blossom Heath, a dance in the home of H. J. Griffith, Jr., on Monday night and a complimentary showing of "Wings" at the Capitol Theatre, and "Lights of New York" at the Liberty Theatre, Wednesday morning.

Among those attending the convention were: Harry Lowenstein and Earl Settle, of Ardmore, Okla.; Tom Blair, of Borger, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Spears, Altus, Okla.; Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Murphree, Bristow; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Craig, Enid; Bob Browning, Enid; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Moore, of Fairfax; Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Powell, of Guthrie, Mr. and Mrs. I. G. Killough, of Hugo; Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Jeter, Henryetta; J. H. Griffin, of Miami; Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Britten, Norman; Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Leachman, Stillwater; Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Walthall and Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Anderson, Oklahoma City; Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Fulgham, of Okmulgee; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Sinor, of Pampa, Texas; Cecil Callahan, Panhandle, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. Ted Jones, of Seminole, Okla.; Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Hornbeck, of Shawnee; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Benefiel, of Tonkawa; Claude E. Leachman, of Stillwater; Fred Morley, of Wink, Texas; and Jack Wilbern, of Duncan, Okla.

W. M. Cherry, who operates the Dreamland Theatre, at Tulsa, Okla., advises he has leased the Grand Theatre, at Muskogee, Okla., and that he will continue to operate both houses.

L. C. Moore advises he has closed the Palace Theatre at Helena to one night a week.

Leo J. Doty has been elected as president of the Kansas City Film Board of Trade, succeeding Harry Taylor, who was forced to resign following his recent promotion to district manager of Universal. Mr. Doty is branch manager of the Kansas City United Artists exchange.

The Peerless theatre, Lebo, Kas., has been purchased by William Bowlin from W. B. Grimes.

A ground in the Movietone wiring system of the Victory, Tampa, gave Manager George Pack a couple of "shorts" and made a lot of work locating the trouble. Peck wired for an expert, who arrived Wednesday morning and succeeded in locating the trouble shortly after the usual matinee hour, so business proceeded without a halt.

New Theatre Projects Are Planned for 5 States

GEORGE W. KEYS, president of the Johnson City Enterprises, Johnson City, Tenn., has announced the purchase of a site 62 by 283 feet on Main street in that city for a new 2,500-seat theatre to cost upwards of $500,000. The Johnson City organization is affiliated with Publix Chain. A 5- or 6-story office building will adjoin the theatre, according to the preliminary plans.

Bids have been taken for the construction of a $100,000 theatre, store and apartment building on the Public Square in Monmouth, Ill. The Community Theatre Corporation, care the Monmouth Chamber of Commerce, has had the plans for the new building prepared by F. J. Klein, Peoria, Ill. The building will be 2-story with basement, and of fireproof construction.

A. Higginbotham, of Opelousas, La., will select an architect soon to prepare plans for the theatre he will erect on Main street in that city. He purchased the site recently and contemplates a 1,400-seat theatre to cost about $100,000. He will provide for several stores on the ground floor.

F. B. Rice has been awarded the contract for the construction of a new theatre on Main street in Denville, Ark., on a site adjoining the Stringfield Hotel. C. C. Stringfield, owner of the hotel, is building the theatre. The plans call for a 2-story and basement building of brick and concrete to cost about $20,000.

Final plans for a theatre and commercial building in Dodge City, Kans., are being prepared by Ellis Charles & Company, Orpheum Building, Wichita, Kans., for Otto Theis. The building will be of buff brick trimmed in terra cotta, 2-story and basement on a site 117 by 135 feet, and cost about $150,000.

J. W. Thornton, of Fort Madison, Ia., has leased the new theatre on Avenue L being erected with local labor by J. F. Oehsner. The building will cost about $20,000.

New Capitol at Cedar Rapids Has Gala Opening

The new Capitol Theatre, which opened at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, on September 1, was unable to seat more than a fourth of the crowd which assembled for the opening. The Capitol, which is the newest of the A. H. Blank-Publix chain of theatres in Iowa, seats 3,000. It was estimated that 12,000 people failed to gain entrance to the house.

The theatre is under the management of Mr. Cummings who was at the Columbia and Fort Armstrong at Davenport and Rock Island. Mr. Cummings will superintend the stage show at the house at Cedar Rapids and this show will be circuited on to the house at Davenport and the Riveira at Waterloo.

Work Inaugurated on Marion, Ind., House

Work has been started on the construction of a new theatre building at Third and Washington streets, Marion, Ind. Although it has been rumored for some time ago that the Universal Chain Theatre Company, which held the lease on this property had sold out, the official announcement has just been made. The new theatre will be constructed by the Marion Washington Theatre Company, which has been organized for that purpose. The principal stockholder of the company is Mark G. Margolis of Indianapolis.

After the building is completed, it is to be leased to Fitzpatrick and McElroy of Chicago. This operating company now operates a chain of theatres in Indiana, including houses in Michigan City, Richmond and Muncie. All have been built recently.

The theatre will cost about $285,000 and will be one of the finest small town theatres in the state. The E. C. Stranthmann Construction Company will build the structure.

According to present plans it is expected to have the theatre ready for operation within six months and plans are being made to push the work during the coming winter season. The theatre will show both motion pictures, synchronized pictures and vaudeville, it is said.

Broadway in Tacoma Opens for Fall Season

The Broadway Theatre in Tacoma, Washington, West Coast's key house in that city which has been dark for the entire spring and summer season, opened its doors to the public again last week for the beginning of the fall and winter film season. It will be operated under the same policy as formerly, with the better film attractions and the Fanchon-Marco stage revues.

The house will be under the supervision of W. Stefan Perutz, manager of the Colonial and Rialto Theatres in that city, and Wesco representative there. Sam K. Wineland, former Seattle theatre and radio musician, will act as master of ceremonies for the stage band. As the stage revues travel up the Pacific Coast they will play a week in this Tacoma house.

New Kenmore N. Y. Keith House, Opened

Last Monday evening, September 17, the B. F. Keith Theatre Circuit opened the Kenmore Theatre, Church avenue, near Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn. Every qualification that can make a theatre up-to-date and attractive is had by the new house.

The feature picture for the occasion of the opening was Pathe's "Ship Comes In." Prominent citizenry attended the event and enjoyed a program that also included Keith-Albee-Orpheum stage numbers. A special inspection reception followed the opening.

Hydro-Electric Emergency Unit Installed by Pascack

The New Jersey Theatrical Enterprises have just installed an Enslen Hydro-Electric Emergency Lighting Unit in their new Pascack Theatre, Westwood, N. J. Messrs. Morris Katinsky and M. H. Kleban selected the type emergency unit that would enable them to operate their projection machines in case of light failure, as well as the necessary emergency lights which are necessary in a theatre. The Enslen Hydro-Electric Company, New York, has just completed the installation.

Enslen Hydro-Electric Company is opening up branch offices in many of the key cities. Architects and builders have taken very kindly toward this method, which employs water power, of emergency lighting, due to the fact that the Enslen Hydro-Electric Company has so constructed this unit that no batteries are needed.

Departure

Carl Laemmle, Jr., Paul Fejos, director, and Nat Goldstone, of the Movietone department, have left for New York to make night club scenes for Universal's "Broadway."

Alfred Santell Loaned

Alfred Santell, director under contract to First National, has been loaned to Samuel Goldwyn for one Vilma Banky picture to be made for United Artists release. Five of the company, including the director and star, will journey to New York, where certain sequences will be made.

Stellar Role

Eleanor Boardman has been awarded, by Henry King, the stellar role in Inspiration's "She Goes to War."

Goulding on M-G-M Roster

Alf Goulding, director, has been added to the directorial roll at M-G-M and will direct "All-at-Sea," to co-star Karl Dane and George K. Arthur.

Reginald Barker Production

According to announcement from John M. Stahl, "New Orleans," is the title of the third Reginald Barker production to be made for Tiffany-Stahl. Ricardo Cortez will star, supported by Alma Bennett.

New Contract for Alice Day

Alice Day was handed a double plum this week in the form of a contract. It is to make two starring pictures for Gotham and a commission to leave almost immediately for New York. In the eastern metropolis Miss Day will make sequences for her first "talkie."

George Bancroft Signed

George Bancroft has affixed his signature to a new Paramount contract.

"The Spieler" Finished

Tay Garnett has finished "The Spieler," his second picture for Pathe.

Billie Dove's Role

Cast as a princess of Russia, who has to fly from the revolution and who becomes a waitress in a Parisian restaurant, Billie Dove has a powerful role in her new First National picture, as yet untitled.

New Contract

Leo McCarey, supervising director and vice-president of the Roach studio, has signed James Horne to a long-term contract to direct comedies.

Still Popular

Elmer Clifton, directing "The Devil's Apple Tree," for Tiffany-Stahl, is still receiving royalties on "Down to the Sea in Ships," produced and directed by him more than six years ago.

Prival Returns to F. N.

Lucien Prival is returning to First National, with which company he was under contract for two years. He will play a featured role in "The Last Kiss."

Beaudine With Fox

William Beaudine, noted screen director, has joined Fox. He will direct "Subway," his first assignment on the Fox lot in several years.

Role for Louis Wolheim

Louis Wolheim has been loaned by Caddo to Paramount for a featured role in the Joseph Conrad picture which Lewis Milestone is slated to direct the latter part of September. Meantime, Wolheim will play a "bad man" role in "The Shady Lady" with Phyllis Haver.

Maria Corda

Maria Corda, the talented Hungarian screen actress who played the title role in First National's "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," has just signed a new contract with that company, and will play opposite Milton Sills in a story of Venice today, "The Comedy of Life."

New Gibson Vehicle

Hoot Gibson has decided upon a title for his forthcoming picture. It is "The Hell Wrecker," a popular novel from the facile pen of Buckleigh Oxford, author and screen writer of numerous stories. "I have queried exhibitors throughout the country on the feasibility of audition in western pictures," said Gibson, "and am as yet undecided about including sound in "The Hell Wrecker."

"Show Boat" Unit Back

The "Show Boat" company, comprising more than 100 persons, have returned to Universal City following five weeks of picture-making on the Sacramento River. The scenes of Chicago in 1900, the interiors of the Show Boat and the modern sequences are all that remain to be made.

"Through the Breakers"

Harold Shumate, Sax-Gotham supervisor, recently showed a preview of "Through the Breakers," his second subject directed by Joseph Boyle.

Well Again

Carl Laemmle, Jr., who recently was confined to his home with a sprained ankle, has recovered sufficiently to permit him to return to the studio.

Lois Wilson

Lois Wilson, now working in "On Trial," Vitaphone production, is appearing as a girl whose unfortunate love affair is the motif of a murder.

Marriage

Friends in the motion picture colony were congratulating Virginia Bradford film star and Cedric Belfrage, fan writer, who were married last Wednesday at Tia Juana, Mexico.

Ken Maynard's New Film

"The Lawless Legion," a story of the great cattle run in the Southwest because of drought during the late '80s is the title and subject for Ken Maynard's next western. Albert Rogell is directing.

Luther Reed Starts Duties

Luther Reed has started his activities as supervisor at the Fox West Coast studios.

Poland Receives Offer

Joseph Franklin Poland, Universal's feature comedy supervisor, has just received a flattering offer from Magazine Publishers, Inc., New York, to write a series of short stories.

Brown Praises Bess Meredyth

When Clarence Brown read the scenario for "The Woman of Affairs," he said it was the best 'script he had ever had.' Then he sent for the writer, Bess Meredyth and told her so.

German Star Cast

The latest addition to the cast of Billie Dove's new starring picture for First National, as yet untitled, is Lucy Dorraine, well-known Defu-First National star, who has just recently arrived in Hollywood from abroad.

Recognizing the fact that changes in method come in the splendid advancement of the motion picture industry, the Eastman Kodak Company continues its own forward march and maintains its supremacy in presenting to the trade
